About Bapuji

Bapuji (full name: Bapuji Dashrathbhai Patel, also lovingly called “Dadaji” by the younger generation) was born in 1956 in the small village of Akhaj in the Mehsana district of Gujarat. However, he spent his childhood in another village named Ambasan, also located in the Mehsana district.

In the early part of his life, he was a highly successful lawyer. Later, he devoted his life to realizing the supreme spiritual truth and bringing this divine knowledge forward for the welfare of humanity. Today, this supreme knowledge serves as a guiding light for true seekers to realize their ultimate destiny. It is a blessing of the highest divinity that the present time is witnessing the rise of this supreme spiritual knowledge, guiding souls on Earth to return to their original source.

Despite being raised in a very poor family and facing challenging circumstances, Bapuji had a deep desire to transform this sorrowful and suffering world into a better place. At the young age of six, he questioned God repeatedly, asking why God remained silent about the suffering of humanity. This intense longing to end human suffering eventually led him to attain the highest level of spirituality later in life.

Even as a child, Bapuji would spend hours alone in the fields, often neglecting his own comfort. Due to poverty, he would walk barefoot without shoes or sandals, frequently getting pricked by thorns. Many times, he would stay late in the fields and, on his way back home, encounter subtle world entities. These experiences sparked his interest in communicating with subtle world souls.

Bapuji was courageous from a young age, which helped him overcome many obstacles. Alongside his studies in chartered accountancy (CA), he gave tuition classes to support himself financially. Later, he completed his Bachelor of Law (LLB) degree and became a well-known lawyer in Ahmedabad.

In 1997, he established a spiritual institution called “Vishwa Parivartak Ishwariya Vidhyalay” in Chenpur, Ahmedabad, with the mission of transforming this mortal world, filled with suffering and disorder, into an eternal divine world of immortality. Smt. Sushma Tandon, lovingly known as “Maa,” worked alongside Bapuji in this grand divine mission.

To accomplish this mission, Bapuji worked tirelessly, dedicating all his resources to this divine purpose. During that time, he would deliver continuous spiritual discourses for up to 18 hours without rest. In these discourses, he explained the highest dimensions of divine knowledge, which he realized through deep meditation and divine vision in a state of superconsciousness. This knowledge goes beyond the imagination of the ordinary human mind.

Bapuji’s teachings cover a vast range of topics, including the types of celestial creators across different dimensions, the creation of our solar system, galaxy, and universe, and most importantly, the transcendental knowledge of the multiverse and realities beyond it. His knowledge is supremely profound and is intended for highly evolved seekers, referred to as “behad souls.” According to Bapuji, these “behad souls” will play a key role in transforming this mortal world into an eternal divine realm.

At present, Bapuji remains deeply engaged in intense meditation and samadhi for long hours. He does not meet anyone, as he is continuously immersed in his transcendental mission in a superconscious state.

— by Bapuji Dashrathbhai Patel

Almost every family carries a quiet question about those who have left the body. We remember our parents, our grandparents, our elders. We wonder where they have gone after death, whether their soul is at peace, whether there is anything left which we can do for them. For generations, this longing has been answered through rituals — offerings, ceremonies and rites performed in the name of the pitru, the departed ancestors.

In these discourses Bapuji looks gently and clearly at this subject. He honours the love behind the old traditions, and he explains, with great care, what those traditions once were and what truly helps a departed soul today. His answer is simple and profound: the ancestors do not need objects; they need light. They need knowledge. They need the awareness of who they truly are.

This book is written for the complete newcomer. No prior knowledge is assumed. Every term is explained, and the path is laid out step by step — from understanding who pitru are, to soul's journey after death, to the real service we can offer those we love. Read it slowly. Let it settle. What is offered here is not a ritual to perform once, but a way of living that brings peace to the living and the departed alike.

May this knowledge free our ancestors, and may it free us as well.

CHAPTER ONE

Understanding Pitru: The Departed Souls of Our Family

Before we can speak of helping our ancestors, we must understand who they are. In spiritual knowledge, the word pitru means the departed souls of our family/ blood tree — those who once lived with us in bodies and have now left them behind.

Bapuji explains it plainly. Ancestors-pitru are your relatives who have passed away. Your father, your grandfather, great grandfather, your grandmother, great grandmother your maternal grandfather and grandmother, and even brothers, sisters, and other close relations who have left the body — all of those can be counted among pitru. They are not distant or abstract beings. They are family-linked souls, connected to us through the bonds of this life and earlier ones.

Sometimes such a soul will even enter body of a living person and speak, claiming old identity and connection to family. A husband or wife who has passed, a brother or sister-in-law, may make themselves known in this way. But the essential point is this: every pitru is a lost soul. The relationship of father or grandmother belonged to the body. Now the body is gone, and what remains is a soul on its own journey.

CHAPTER TWO

Ancestors' Debt: Understanding Pitru Rin

In the path of devotion, Bhakti Marg, there is an old and deeply held idea called pitru rin- Ancestors' debt we owe to our ancestors. Bapuji describes how this was understood in earlier times.

It was taught that the greatest way to repay the debt of one's parents was to continue the family line. When a person had children, and those children in turn had children, the ancestors who dwelled above in the pitru lok — the realm of the ancestors — were said to receive their release from rebirth on earth plane. From there they were granted, as it were, a ticket onward to the higher realms, to swarg, the heaven. The continuation of the lineage was considered the highest repayment, for without it, how would the world go forward? This was held to be the greatest debt of all.

Serving one's mother and father in life was, of course, also held as a sacred duty. But Bapuji draws a careful distinction here. Ordinary service to living parents is a duty, it belongs to the natural responsibilities of family life. Ancestor's debt (Pitru rin), the karmic debt toward the ancestors, was understood as something deeper, reaching beyond a single lifetime.

This was the teaching of earlier ages. But Bapuji asks us to look honestly at the present time — for what worked in the past does not carry the same power today.

CHAPTER THREE

Why the Ancestors Cannot Rise

In the present age, Bapuji says, the situation of most departed souls has changed completely. Today, the majority of ancestors no longer have the power within the soul to rise upward on their own.

Most of those who died within the last few hundred years 200-300 years are not in any higher realm at all. They are sitting in their family home, or in temples/religious places, or wandering in forests. The strength needed to ascend to the higher realms-lokas, even to reach swarglok, is simply not present in the soul. And so the soul drifts, restless and unhappy, with nowhere to go.

Such souls gather wherever there is something familiar to hold them. Where a recitation of the Ramayana is held, they come and listen to the story. Where the Mahabharata is told, they listen there. They linger in temples, sitting near their chosen deity, remembering and worshipping in the only way they know. This is not liberation. It is the wandering of a soul that has run out of power and has no knowledge to guide it.

Why has the soul lost this power? Bapuji explains that as the great cycle of time has gradually moved from its age of purity and light into the present era of decline, the soul has become increasingly burdened by tamas, the quality of inertia and spiritual heaviness. In the beginning of creation, the soul was satopradhan—pure, radiant, and filled with immense spiritual strength. Over the course of time, however, that original power has diminished. As a result, the soul has lost much of its natural lightness and can no longer elevate itself with the ease and strength it once possessed.

CHAPTER FOUR

Soul Without Spiritual Knowledge

A soul without spiritual knowledge has no map. It moves only between the few places it knew in life — from home to temple, from temple back to home, perhaps to a riverbank or a familiar shrine, and back again. For many lifetimes of the family, such a soul may remain caught in this small circle.

Bapuji speaks of these souls with compassion. They are not wicked. They simply have nothing else — no other knowledge to draw upon. In their entire life they may have heard only the Ramayana and the Mahabharata, and so, after death, those are the only sounds that draws them. They go where those stories are told. They sit in temples. They wait, without understanding what they are waiting for.

This restlessness is the true condition of the ancestor who has departed without knowledge. The soul is alive — it sees, it feels, it remembers — but it is powerless to move forward. And here Bapuji turns the whole question around. The real service to such an ancestor is not to feed this restlessness, but to end it. The real service is to make the ancestor a soul of knowledge.

CHAPTER FIVE

True Service: Knowledge, Not Ritual

Here lies the heart of Bapuji's teaching. If you truly wish to repay the debt of your parents, if you truly wish to help your ancestors, the answer is not another ritual. The answer is to make them knowledgeable souls.

Here's a rewritten version with improved flow and clarity while preserving the original meaning:

According to Bapuji, a soul that has attained true spiritual knowledge does not seek rituals post death in the same way that an ordinary, ignorant soul does. A soul that remains unaware of its real nature continues to carry the impressions and desires of bodily existence. Such a soul may seek food, attention, offerings, and remembrance from its descendants. However, a soul that has awakened to its true identity no longer depends upon these material expressions. What it seeks is knowledge—spiritual wisdom, soul-consciousness, and the realization of its eternal nature.

Therefore, Bapuji emphasizes that one must first enter the path of knowledge oneself. Understand the Aatma Swaroop—the true form of the soul. The message of the Gita is clear: become soul-conscious, remember the Supreme Being, and through that remembrance all accumulated sins and karmic burdens can be dissolved. The Supreme then guides the soul toward the highest abode, Paramdham.

This, Bapuji says, is the greatest offering that can be given to one's ancestors. Rather than merely performing external rituals, help souls connect with spiritual knowledge. Recognize yourself as a soul and remember the Almighty Authority—the Supreme Father, the great-great-grandfather of all souls. Through this divine connection, spiritual love, peace, and power naturally begin to flow. Such remembrance uplifts not only the self but also benefits the souls with whom one shares a karmic connection.

Ritual alone cannot solve the suffering of the ancestors, because ritual does not reach the soul where it is stuck. Knowledge does. This is why, in the path of knowledge, there is only one true remedy for every departed soul: to know itself, and to remember its source.

◆ Bapuji Insight: “Gyaani aatmaon ko to gyan chahiye.”

CHAPTER SIX

Shraddh System: How It Began

To understand why ritual no longer carries its old power, Bapuji explains where the system of shraddha originated. The tradition of honouring ancestors — shraddh, pitru tarpan, the offering of food and water and annual rites in Hindu Traditions—did not appear by accident. It arose for a real reason, long ago.

In ancient times, when souls first began to lose their power and many died with their attachments unresolved, they remained in the layers close to the earth, still carrying strong desire they had known in life. They desired everything, they took, in subtle form, the essence of what was offered. The departed soul, like the living human, still carried vikar — the cravings of the senses. Seeing this, compassionate ones established shraddh system, so that the living could feed and bless the dead. At that time, this was genuine help.

Bapuji places this in the vast frame of cosmic time. We are within the second parardh — the second half of the life of Brahma — and this practice has continued for well over a hundred crore years, and existed in the first parardh as well. From the very time that human souls and the earth came into being, souls that grew heavy could not rise to higher realms and so they remained home of their loved ones. The shraddh system grew up around this reality.

Bapuji also speaks of where some of these ancestor-souls reside. He has described the moon as a station where certain pitru-souls dwell before their further ascent, as the old texts also describe. Tarpan, when sincerely performed, was meant to send vibrations toward such souls. The intention behind the tradition was real.

CHAPTER SEVEN

Path of Knowledge Vs Path of Devotion

Bapuji draws a clear line between two paths. Bhakti Marg, path of devotion, is full of many methods. There are countless ways to perform shraddh, to offer tarpan, to satisfy the ancestors. People travel to the banks of great ancient rivers like Narmada, Ganga, to other sacred rivers, and perform rites there. It is said that performing said rituals there helps to grant liberation to ancestors. There are ceremonies, offerings and elaborate procedure, each a part of the path of devotion.

But path of knowledge (gyan marg), has a different starting point. Here there is single approach: to bring the soul into the awareness of itself, and to connect it with the Supreme. For the one who walks in knowledge, the remedy is always the same — aatma darshan, the vision of the soul; aatma swaroop, abiding as the soul; and the remembrance of the boundless Supreme Father.

Why does ritual alone so often fail? Bapuji is gentle but honest. The original rites had power because those who performed them had genuine inner cultivation — real tapasya. The vibration they generated reached the soul. Today, most who perform the rites have not done that inner work. The form remains, but the substance is largely gone. And so, however sincere family, the karmic bondage is often too strong for ritual to dissolve. The offering of gross, physical things cannot reach soul, because soul has no body to receive them. What the soul needs is power, and power comes only from spiritual knowledge and from the Supreme.

Devotion, by itself, is deep darkness; knowledge is the light by which the soul finally sees.

CHAPTER EIGHT

Know Yourself First: Soul's True Form

If knowledge is only remedy, where does that knowledge begin? Bapuji answers without hesitation: it begins with yourself. Before you can help any ancestor, you must first answer the great questions — Who am I? Where have I come from? Where must I go?

This is the foundation. You are not the body. You are the aatma, the soul — a point of pure light that resides between the brows and moves the mind, and through the mind, the body. To know this directly, to abide in it, is aatma swaroop — the state of being established in the soul consciousness. Bapuji says that deeper knowledge, of the boundless creation, of the behad world, of how the universe was made, comes afterward. But the first step, always, is to recognise ones' true soul self.

This same knowledge is what you then offer the departed. Speak to the ancestor by name — “Oh father, oh mother, oh grandfather, oh grandmother: you too are a soul, as I am a soul. Recognise your true form. Remember the Supreme.” Through your own pure true resolve- sankalp, this understanding reaches them. For the living and the dead, the teaching is identical, because both are souls.

First know yourself; only then will you come to know God.

CHAPTER NINE

Remembering Supreme Father

Knowing the soul is the first step. The second is connection — remembering the Supreme. Bapuji teaches that the Almighty Authority dwells in the highest Paramdham, formless, radiant like the sun, the great-great-grandfather of all souls. To remember Him is to draw power into the soul.

This remembrance is not just for comfort or peace of mind. Its real purpose is to help remove the burden of karma. When a soul becomes aware of its true nature and connects with the Supreme through yog, it receives spiritual power. This power is what truly helps in the upliftment of ancestors. A soul that has gained such power can help departed souls in a way that no external ritual can—it can genuinely support and elevate them on their spiritual journey.

Bapuji describes yog simply. It is the connection of the soul with the Supreme — the soul, abiding as pure light, remembering the formless Supreme Father. When you yourself practise this, and then turn your loving resolve toward your ancestors, you teach them to do the same. Power gathered in your own yog can be shared. The more love there is in the remembrance, the more power flows, for love itself is power.

The soul needs no material thing; what the soul needs is power.

CHAPTER TEN

Home To A Lighthouse

When a person lives in the awareness of the soul-conscious, something remarkable happens to the physical home of that individual. Bapuji describes how soul's aura -the ra, the field of light around it — grows strong through meditation and the gathering of power. In deep yog, when the connection with the Supreme is steady, this field can spread out several feet in every direction, filled with supreme light, supreme elements.

Such a home becomes a place of liberation rather than disturbance. Any departed soul sitting in the home, or even nearby, feels this power. And because the soul of knowledge cannot be troubled by spirits, the relationship reverses entirely. A weak, restless soul does not torment the knowledgeable one it is drawn toward the light. Sensing the power within the yogi, such a soul comes into the aura seeking energy, and the moment it enters that field, it finds release.

Bapuji calls this, in the end, a lighthouse. When a soul reaches a high state, the home becomes a lighthouse and souls from far distance travel there for liberation. This is why he says children should be encouraged in this practice from an early age — so that the homes of the future become lighthouses for the wandering souls of the world.

This is also why a person with true spiritual knowledge does not need to fear ghosts or spirits. The same spiritual power that helps uplift ancestors also protects the yogi from negative souls. Souls that cannot tolerate this pure vibration naturally move away, while souls that are ready to receive it can be purified and helped. When a person remains established in aatma swaroop (soul-consciousness), the power of the soul itself becomes their protection.

When the home becomes a lighthouse, souls from across the world will come to it for liberation.

CHAPTER ELEVEN

How the Ancestors Listen

How, the seeker may ask, can a soul that has already departed receive the knowledge being given now? Bapuji answers from direct experience. The souls of the subtle world hear. A powerful subtle-world soul will listen to the knowledge fully and depart with it. A weaker one will catch what it can. Some, wishing to draw near, even enter the body of a listener to hear.

The simplest and most reliable way to reach them, Bapuji says, is this: keep the knowledge playing in the home. Leave a discourse on the soul, on liberation, on the boundless creation, running on the screen. If such souls are present in the home, they will hear. Even a soul that does not enter anyone will sit and listen to the words. You do not need to summon anyone or perform any rite — you need only let the knowledge sound in the house.

How much a soul absorbs depends on its own capacity. A high-quality soul drinks the knowledge deeply and is carried far. A weaker soul understands only a little, perhaps a few words — yet even those few words bring it peace and steady it, so that it troubles no one. The capacity of the soul decides how much it can take, but every soul that listens is helped to some degree.

CHAPTER TWELVE

The Goal Is Liberation

It is important to be clear about the aim. The purpose of all this is not merely to make a dead soul comfortable, not merely to quiet it for a while. The purpose is liberation — mukti or jeevan mukti.

When knowledge truly reaches a soul, it draws that soul forward. Bapuji explains that mukti and jeevan mukti come according to the soul's own capacity. As the soul receives knowledge and gathers power in soul consciousness, its journey turns upward and onward. It will not return to take birth again in this mortal world. Instead it rises in higher realms gradually based on their penance, toward the Paramdham and toward Paramshanti, the supreme peace that is the soul's original nature.

This is why blessings alone are not enough. To wish an ancestor well is good, but a wish without knowledge and power cannot lift the soul. What helps soul is the knowledge of its origin, the remembrance of the Supreme, and the power that flows from that remembrance. Send the soul not merely good wishes, but the means of its freedom. Send it toward Paramdham. Send it toward Paramshanti.

Spread the vibration of Param Shanti — and whether ancestor or any other soul, all will find supreme peace.

CHAPTER THIRTEEN

When the Ancestors Remain Attached

Not every departed soul has moved on. Many remain bound by attachment — to the home they built, to the people they loved, to the possessions they could not release. Such a soul stays in the house, sometimes for many generations of the family, asking to be fed, asking to be cared for, asking to be remembered. When its wishes are not met, it may trouble the family.

Why does an ancestor become troublesome? Bapuji explains that the soul sitting in the home carried earlier impression (sanskar) — the character and conditioning. The family living now has different sanskar, different values, a different way of life. The old soul sees everything that happens in the house, and much of it does not please it. Its conditioning belongs to the past; the household belongs to the present. Where these clash, the soul grows distressed and presses its demands. “Live as I say,” it insists — though no one in the house can even see it.

This is the quiet truth behind many household commotion or disturbances. An ancestor from an earlier age, with records and expectations that no longer fit the present family, remains attached and unable to leave. It is not malice. It is a soul left behind by time, still trying to hold on to a world that has moved beyond it.

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

Demands of the Dead

Some requests from attached souls can be difficult or unsettling. According to Bapuji's long-term observations, a soul becomes a wandering spirit because of its own strong desires and attachments. After death, those desires often remain. As a result, the spirit may keep asking for more and more things—year after year, month after month—without ever feeling satisfied.

Sometimes the soul that has taken hold is not even of the family's own background. A soul from a different tradition or karmic history, having entered a household, may demand things that the family could never offer like-meat, alcohol and other things incompatible with that home 's traditions. And until the demand is met, the soul will not leave; it sits and troubles the household, for it does not come alone but brings its hungers with it.

Bapuji suggests firmly here that such demands should never be supplied. The hunger of an attached soul is bottomless — fulfil it once, and a second demand follows, and a third, without end. To give the soul what it craves is not the highest solution; it only deepens the attachment and confirms the soul in its bondage. These endless cravings are themselves the sign of a soul that has not been liberated, a soul still trapped in worldly desire.

No material offering can permanently satisfy an attached soul because its real need is spiritual upliftment and liberation. True help comes through spiritual purification, Paramshanti (supreme-peace), and guiding the soul toward higher realms rather than continually feeding its desires. No material offering can permanently satisfy an attached soul because its real need is spiritual upliftment and liberation.

CHAPTER FIFTEEN

Soul's Journey Through the Lokas

To understand where the ancestors are and where they must go, Bapuji lays out the soul's journey through the lokas, the layers of creation in our solar system. Where does soul goes after death depends entirely on its power and its record.

From earth, Bhulok, the soul may rise to the next realm, Bhuvvarlok, and then to swarglok, the heaven. But no soul travels directly to heaven; it must first pass through the second realm, where great sages help souls onward. Only the very rare soul—one who lived an entirely pure and saintly life, giving happiness to all and sorrow to none — ascends directly. Most souls, weighed down by attachment, cannot even rise one realm.

Above swarglok lies Maharlok, then Janlok, Taplok, Satyalok, which is Brahmapuri, the abode of Brahma. To this point, attachment can still pull a soul back on earth. Above Brahmapuri lies Vishnupuri or Vaikunth the abode of Vishnu, where the soul knows boundless bliss and does not wish to return to earth. Yet bliss is not peace. Beyond Vaikunth lies Shivpuri, the abode of Shiva and Shakti, where the soul finds deep peace. And beyond even that lies the Paramdham, the supreme abode, where the soul attains Paramshanti and merges into the formless light. This final dissolution is mukti; to live while abiding in that state is jeevan mukti.

To rise even one of these steps, the soul needs tapasya, purity immense soul power. A soul with spiritual knowledge cannot rise; instead it may fall into the lower cycles, wandering through the 84 lakh yonis—lower form of life/creatures/animals/insects/etc. This is why effort must begin now, while there is still a human body in which to make it.

CHAPTER SIXTEEN

Rare Gift of Human Birth

Bapuji speaks multiple times about preciousness of human birth. After wandering through 84 lakh yonis, soul that finally attains a human body has received something rarer than the birth of the gods. Even the Deities-devatas, the deities, must one day take human form, for when a soul exhausts its store of celestial pleasure, its power diminishes and it descends into a human body. Human birth is the meeting point of the whole journey.

Human birth is extraordinarily rare. Bapuji explains that countless souls are waiting for the opportunity to take a human body, yet only a small fraction receive that chance. The number of souls seeking human birth is far greater than the number of human births available.

For this reason, human life should never be wasted. It is a precious opportunity not only for one's own spiritual progress but also for helping and uplifting one's ancestors. A disembodied soul has limited ability to perform spiritual effort, whereas a soul in a human body can consciously act, serve, purify karma, and move toward liberation. Therefore, the responsibility of the living extends beyond themselves—they must use this rare human birth wisely, keeping in mind both their own spiritual journey and the welfare of departed souls.

CHAPTER SEVENTEEN

Death Is Not the End

The body dies, but the soul does not. Bapuji states it directly: the soul is eternal, imperishable, undying. We do not call human life merely the years of the body; even after the body ends, journey of soul continues. The soul is a conscious energy, and according to its karmic records it moves again and again through the cycle of birth and death.

At death, the gross body of five elements returns to the elements — two of them, water and earth, dissolve away — and the soul departs in its subtle body of three elements: ether, air, and fire. Where it goes next depends on its consciousness at the moment of leaving and last thought at time of death. A soul filled with attachment to the home, to the body and the relations of the body, remains within the house. It asks to be fed and cared for; if ignored, it troubles the household; and so it may sit for many generations, unable to leave.

This is the reality behind the words “your ancestors are sitting in the home.” They sit there because attachment held them at the moment of death, and nothing has yet taught them how to leave. Death did not end their journey; it only changed its form. And because the journey continues, it can still be helped — the soul can still be guided onward, even now.

CHAPTER EIGHTEEN

Do Not Grieve, Do Not Fear

Two instincts trouble the family of the departed: grief and fear. Bapuji gently corrects both. The soul that has died remains near the home for many days, sometimes far longer, because of its attachment and lack of spiritual knowledge. When family weeps profusely for the departed repeatedly, departed souls senses the pain and suffers. Excessive grieving causes the departed soul direct pain and pulls it back toward the home. Grieve briefly and sincerely, Bapuji says, and then turn the mind to wishing the soul well, praying for its onward journey. This is the highest service the family can offer.

Fear, too, is misplaced. The dead need not disturb the living. Proper response to a troubled soul is never panic and force, but knowledge. Bapuji recalls families who called him in fear, saying a spirit disturbed their home at night. His counsel was simple: begin playing the spiritual knowledge shared by Bapuji over couple of decades, fill the home with the vibration of Paramshanti. Once that began, the disturbance settled -the soul was either soothed and reformed, or, if too heavy to bear the vibration, it left of its own accord.

Bapuji is also clear about the old custom of reading Garuda Puran after a death. In its time it was a profound teaching about the soul's journey. But today, he says, it has become outdated and simply hearing its detailed accounts of suffering often makes the grieving soul sadder rather than helping it. What helps now is true knowledge of soul — understanding that it is not the body, that it is eternal, that there is a way upward. Play that teaching in the home and speak to the soul directly with love: move on, rise to the higher realms, remember the Supreme.

CHAPTER NINETEEN

Why We Let the Departed Go

One of Bapuji's most tender teachings concerns the photographs of the dead. Why, people ask, should we not keep the photo of a departed loved one in the home? Because, Bapuji explains, the photo becomes a thread that binds the soul. Each time the family looks at it, offers anything and remembers, the soul is drawn back to home and cannot leave. It stays with you, and its journey cannot proceed.

For six months, perhaps a year, the family is grieving and the soul too is in transition; in this time, remembrance is natural. But after this, Bapuji counsels gently: put the photo away. Not because the love has ended, but because love must now take a different form. There is a further danger he names with sadness: in some families, especially joint families, shrine of ancestors are kept for decades, each generation adding its own photographs and its own attachments, until the collective pull holds many souls bound to the home. And a soul whose photograph is constantly honoured begins to expect the offerings; if the family later stops, the soul becomes disturbed and may press its demands through one of the children.

Bapuji asks us to see death as it truly is — a drama, a scene in the great play. Each soul comes onto the stage, plays its part, and when its part is done, it must exit so the play can continue. Our karmic bond with the departed is real, but the way to settle that bond is to release it — to let the soul move on rather than holding it down. We need not enquire endlessly where the departed has gone or what it wishes; such questions only deepen the attachment. The wiser course is to give the soul knowledge, wish it well, and turn to our own journey, trusting that the bond of the soul does not depend on a photograph.

CHAPTER TWENTY

Wider Vision: All Souls, One Transformation

Bapuji says this knowledge is not only for the dead, and not only for one's own ancestors. Brothers, sisters, parents, and all those who love us should also be guided on this spiritual path, because the ultimate goal of life is the same for every soul. The soul must learn to look beyond the body, beyond worldly relationships, and beyond the attachments that continue even after death.

So the aim is not to help only one's own ancestors, but to help all souls. Whoever you feel a bond with — a relative, even a departed friend — can be included in your loving resolve and given this knowledge. And as you spread the vibration of Paramshanti, it reaches not only ancestors in your home but every soul nearby, of every kind. The whole atmosphere begins to change.

This is where ancestor-transformation meets world-transformation. Bapuji teaches that the entire behad Infinite creation, the whole multiverse, is moving toward a great transformation-mortal world being remade into an eternal, divine one. Helping ancestors with spiritual knowledge is also part of helping this creation. Real duty of Behad-souls (Infinite Creation Higher level souls) is to become a source of peace and power for everyone around it. Teach children to honour their ancestors not through fear but through true spiritual knowledge. For the highest service we can ever offer ancestors is this: to guide them toward their own soul-identity, toward the remembrance of the Supreme and toward the liberation that is the destiny of every soul.

Rise beyond all limits, beyond the body and the relationships of the body.

Bapuji Insights

A gathering of Bapuji's words from across this book — in his own spoken language, with their meaning in English.

◆ Bapuji Insight: “Gyaani aatmaon ko to gyan chahiye.”

Devotion, by itself, is deep darkness; knowledge is the light by which the soul finally sees.

First know yourself; only then will you come to know God.

The soul needs no material thing; what the soul needs is power.

When the home becomes a lighthouse, souls from across the world will come to it for liberation.

Spread the vibration of Param Shanti — and whether ancestor or any other soul, all will find supreme peace.

Rise beyond all limits, beyond the body and the relationships of the body.

Through knowledge, come to know everything; through knowledge, become free.

Glossary

Spiritual terms used in this book, explained simply for the newcomer.

Aatma — The soul; a point of conscious, living energy. The true self, distinct from the body and the mind.

Aatma Swaroop — The state of abiding as the soul — being established in one's true form as a point of light rather than as the body.

Aatma Darshan — The inner vision or realisation of the soul; seeing oneself as the soul.

Almighty Authority — The Supreme Father of all souls; the formless source of supreme light who dwells in the Paramdham.

Behad — The boundless, the limitless. The infinite creation beyond all measured worlds.

Bbulok — The earth realm; the lowest dimension within a solar system.

Bhuvarlok — The second loka, immediately above earth, where many departed souls reside while still attached to earthly conditions.

Brahmapuri / Satyalok — The seventh loka, abode of Brahma; the highest level from which a soul can still fall back if attachment remains.

Devata — A deity; a soul of high quality dwelling in the realms of light, who may yet descend to human form when its power diminishes.

Garuda Puran — A traditional Hindu text describing the soul's journey after death, often read in the days following a death.

Gyan — Spiritual knowledge — the true understanding of the soul, the Supreme, and creation.

Gyan Marg — The path of knowledge; the soul contemplates the supreme knowledge until it realises its destination.

Jeevan Mukti — Living liberation; the experience of freedom from all karmic bondage while still living in the body.

Karma — The law of action and consequence by which a soul moves through the cycle of birth and death.

Karan Sharir — The causal body, the subtlest body, which stores the karmic record of a soul.

Loka — A layer or dimension of creation. The lokas rise in order from Bhulok (earth) upward toward the supreme abode.

Maharlok, Janlok, Taplok — The fourth, fifth, and sixth lokas above earth, inhabited by sages and high-quality souls beyond ordinary attachment.

Mukti — Liberation; the soul's final dissolution into the supreme light, where it no longer exists as a separate entity.

Narmada — A sacred river in Gujarat where traditional rites for the liberation of the pitru are performed.

Ojha — A traditional spirit-remover or exorcist in folk practice.

Paramdham — The supreme abode; the highest, formless dimension of creation where the Supreme resides and the soul attains supreme peace.

Paramshanti — Supreme peace; the original, natural state of the soul. The soul always seeks Paramshanti because it is its true nature.

Parardh — Half of the life of Brahma. The first parardh is complete; we are within the second.

Pind Dan — A traditional offering, usually of rice balls, made to the souls of departed ancestors.

Pitru — The departed souls of one's family — father, grandparents, maternal grandparents, siblings, and other related souls who have left the body.

Pitru Dosh — In traditional belief, the affliction or disturbance caused to a family by unsettled ancestor-souls.

Pitru Lok — The realm of the ancestors, spoken of in tradition as the abode of the departed forefathers.

Pitru Rin — The debt owed to one's ancestors, held in tradition to be repaid through service and the continuation of the family line.

Pitru Tarpan — The ritual offering of water and remembrance to the ancestor-souls.

Puranas — Hindu texts that convey ancient wisdom and the history of creation through stories.

Ra (Aura) — The field of light surrounding the soul, which grows strong through meditation and the gathering of power.

Sankalp — A pure resolve or thought generated by the soul; the determination through which a soul acts and reaches others.

Sanskar — The character and conditioning of a soul, recorded in its causal body.

Sbraddh — The traditional system of ancestor-honouring rites, performed at specific times to support the souls of departed ancestors.

Shivpuri — The realm above Vaikunth, abode of Shiva and Shakti, where deep peace replaces bliss as the soul's experience.

Stchool Sharir — The gross physical body, made of all five elements, which returns to the elements at death.

Subtle World (Sukshma Jagat) — The dimension of subtle elements immediately above the physical earth, where most departed souls go.

Sukshma Sharir — The subtle body, made of three elements — ether, air, and fire — in which the soul moves after death.

Swarglok — The realm of light, or heaven, where deities and high-quality souls dwell.

Tamopradhan — The heavy, inert state of the soul in the present dark age, when its original power and light have faded.

Tantrik — A practitioner of esoteric rites, sometimes engaged to deal with spirits — a path Bapuji counsels against.

Tapasya — Sustained spiritual effort and inner cultivation; the discipline by which a soul gains the power to rise.

Vaikunth (Vishnupuri) — The abode of Vishnu, above Brahmapuri, where the soul knows boundless bliss and does not return to earth.

Vikar — The cravings and impulses of the senses that bind a soul.

Yog — The connection of the soul with the Supreme — the soul, abiding as light, remembering the formless Supreme Father.

84 Lakh Yonis — The countless forms of life through which a soul wanders in the long journey before attaining human birth.
