About Bapuji

Bapuji — full name Bapuji Dashrathbhai Patel, lovingly called “Dadaji” by the younger generation — was born in 1956 in the small village of Akhaj in the Mehsana district of Gujarat. His childhood, however, was spent in another village named Ambasan, also in the Mehsana district.

In the early part of his life, he was a highly successful lawyer. Later, he devoted his life to realising the supreme spiritual truth and bringing this divine knowledge forward for the welfare of humanity. Today, this supreme knowledge serves as a guiding light for true seekers to realise their ultimate destiny. It is a blessing of the highest divinity that the present time is witnessing the rise of this supreme spiritual knowledge, guiding souls on Earth to return to their original source.

Despite being raised in a very poor family and facing challenging circumstances, Bapuji had a deep desire to transform this sorrowful and suffering world into a better place. At the young age of six, he questioned God repeatedly, asking why God remained silent about the suffering of humanity. This intense longing to end human suffering eventually led him to attain the highest level of spirituality later in life.

Even as a child, Bapuji would spend hours alone in the fields, often neglecting his own comfort. Due to poverty, he would walk barefoot without shoes or sandals, frequently getting pricked by thorns. Many times, he would stay late in the fields and, on his way back home, encounter subtle world entities. These experiences sparked his interest in communicating with souls of the subtle world.

Bapuji was courageous from a young age, which helped him overcome many obstacles. Alongside his studies in chartered accountancy, he gave tuition classes to support himself financially. Later, he completed his Bachelor of Law and became a well-known lawyer in Ahmedabad.

In 1997, he established a spiritual institution called “Vishwa Parivartak Ishwariya Vidhyalay” in Chenpur, Ahmedabad, with the mission of transforming this mortal world — filled with suffering and disorder — into an eternal divine world of immortality. Smt. Sushma Tandon, lovingly known as “Maa,” worked alongside Bapuji in this grand divine mission.

To accomplish this mission, Bapuji worked tirelessly, dedicating all his resources to this divine purpose. During that time, he would deliver continuous spiritual discourses for up to eighteen hours without rest. In these discourses, he explained the highest dimensions of divine knowledge, which he realised through deep meditation and divine vision in a state of superconsciousness. This knowledge goes beyond the imagination of the ordinary human mind.

Bapuji’s teachings cover a vast range of topics, including the types of celestial creators across different dimensions, the creation of our solar system, galaxy, and universe, and most importantly, the transcendental knowledge of the multiverse and realities beyond it. His knowledge is supremely profound and is intended for highly evolved seekers, referred to as Behad souls. According to Bapuji, these Behad souls will play a key role in transforming this mortal world into an eternal divine realm.

At present, Bapuji remains deeply engaged in intense meditation and samadhi for long hours. He does not meet anyone, as he is continuously immersed in his transcendental mission in a superconscious state.

Preface

“Gyan Daan Maha Daan” (Sharing knowledge is the highest charity)

— Bapuji Dashrathbhai Patel

Across centuries and across scriptures, humanity has asked the same handful of questions. Who am I? Where did I come from? What happens to me when this body falls away? These questions are not academic. They are the silent companions of every conscious life, returning whenever the noise of the world grows quiet.

This book gathers, in one place, ten of the most fundamental answers to those questions — answers offered in the spoken teachings of Bapuji Dashrathbhai Patel. Each chapter takes up one mystery of the soul. The teachings here move beyond the boundaries of any single tradition. They open out into the cosmic vision of soul science — a vision that places the individual soul within an immense, layered architecture: the Bramand at the scale of our solar realm, the Galaxy that contains many Bramands, the Universe that contains many Galaxies, and the Multiverse that contains many Universes still. Within this great order, the soul is shown its true place, its true history, and its true destination.

Yet the teachings remain practical at every step. The reader is never asked to accept anything on blind faith; instead, the invitation is always to inquire, to recognise, and to experience. The Almighty Authority is real. The soul is real. The journey from the world of death to the world of immortality is a real journey, available to any soul willing to walk it.

In preparing the spoken word for the printed page, every effort has been made to retain the precision and depth of the original teachings. Conversational asides have been smoothed away, but no idea, no example, and no truth has been altered. To preserve the texture of the original speech, a dedicated section titled Bapuji's Insights follows the back matter — offering Hinglish reflections drawn directly from the spoken teachings, each accompanied by its English meaning.

May this small volume serve as a key. May it help even one soul to remember its origin, recognise its purpose, and turn its face toward the immortal world.

Introduction

The Ten Mysteries

There are countless questions one may ask about the soul, but ten of them stand apart. They are the questions whose answers determine the course of a soul's journey through cosmic time. The teachings collected here address each in turn:

The origin and end of the soul; the reason souls enter the cycle of eighty-four lakh species; the journey from the world of death to the world of immortality; whether every soul must face death; the identity of the soul's creator; the element from which the soul is made and the three stages through which it passes; whether a human being can experience the soul-form and become Paramatma; whether a soul can move beyond the world of elements and death; why souls remain trapped in the mortal world; and finally, how self-transformation becomes the foundation of world transformation.

Together, these ten mysteries form a complete map. To understand them — even imperfectly — is to begin walking a path that leads, eventually, beyond birth and death itself.

The Architecture of the Cosmos

To follow the teachings in the chapters ahead, the reader must first hold in mind the great architecture in which the soul lives, falls and rises again. This architecture is layered across four ascending scales of cosmic reality.

The first and smallest scale is the Bramand (Solar System). A Bramand is not a single planet, nor only a star — it is a complete creation unit centred upon its own sun, containing within it the worlds and beings that belong to that sun's authority. Our own Solar system lie within a single Bramand. The owner of our Bramand is Shiv. Each Bramand carries a measure of its Power, expressed in Kalas, or degrees of light. Our Bramand is a sixteen-Kala Bramand. Higher Bramands exist whose Kala measure rises to two hundred, five hundred, or even one thousand — and the souls within those higher Bramands are truly imperishable.

The second scale is the Galaxy. A Galaxy contains uncountable Bramands, each with its own Shiv. The owner of a Galaxy is Mahashiv, who can Create infinite Shivs in a single thought.

The third scale is the Universe. A Universe contains many Galaxies, and the owner of a Universe is the Param Mahashiv. From here on 17 layers on great universe, great-great universe, great-great great universe etc is created . where kala of each layers keeps increasing. The last layer is Great(17 times) universe. Each great universe has innumerable universes. Each Great-Great Univers has infinite great universe. And so on so forth. Each Layer of universe has an owner known .

When this book speaks of the dissolution of our Bramand, or of its sixteen-hundred-trillion-year history, or of the Mahakalpa Pralaya in which our Bramand is dissolved, it refers to events at the scale of our solar realm. These are vast events, but they are not the whole of cosmic time, for above them rise the still vaster cycles of Galaxy, Universe, Great Universe, Great-Great Universes , etc and Multiverse. To grasp this layered architecture — even partially — is to understand at once how small the ordinary human horizon usually is, and how great the destination of the soul truly is.

How to Read This Book

These ten chapters are short, but each carries far more weight than its length suggests. They are best read slowly, one at a time, with space left afterwards for reflection. Where Sanskrit and spiritual terms appear, a glossary has been provided to support the reader new to this vocabulary. The terms are not ornamental; each one carries a precise meaning within the cosmology of soul science, and learning them is itself part of the journey.

After the closing matter, the reader will encounter a dedicated section titled Bapuji's Insights — reflections drawn directly from the original spoken teachings, each followed by its English meaning. These insights restore the voice of the Master to the page and offer a contemplative resting place after the journey through the ten mysteries.

The reader is invited not merely to understand these teachings, but to test them — to hold them up against the lived experience of one's own life and to see whether they illumine what was previously dark. That is the only way teachings of this depth are truly received.

Chapter One

The Origin and End of the Soul

The most profound mystery of existence begins with a single question: where does the soul come from, and where does it go?

In our Bramand, creation was initiated by Shiv through Brahma (Creator Deity in Hinduism). The first beings to emerge were the Param Purush — the supreme primordial men, brought forth at the very dawn of cosmic time. From these original beings, many more were created, and from within their own essence they brought forth nature (Param Prakriti), which in turn gave rise to the wider creation.

As souls descended through successive layers of this creation, their original power gradually diminished. Each descent was not merely a movement through space, but a movement through quality — a step away from the original light / power of the source. This descent gave birth to the deities and to the seven upper worlds. Eventually, the Earth itself was formed, and human beings evolved out of these descended deities. We who walk this Earth today are not strangers to the higher realms; we are

Our Bramand carries an immense and humbling history. Age of Brahma is 100 Braham years. Bapuji explains Brahma's age calculation by dividing into first and second Paradh. Each Paradh is 50 years of Brahama. First 50 years/ Paradh of Brahma has already been completed and we are presently in second Paradh and completed 1.98 billion years. One year of Brahma is thirty-one trillion ten billion forty crore human years. The total span of our Bramand's history runs to approximately sixteen hundred trillion years. These are not figures of speech; they are the literal time-scales of the realm in which we live. To even glimpse them is to feel the smallness of one human lifetime, and at the same time, the immense dignity of the soul that endures through such depths of time. Also it is important to note that Earth was created after Ten years passed in first Paradh of Braham ,

Many scriptures, including the Gita, describe the soul as immortal and indestructible. This is true within the time frame those scriptures address. However, when one considers the full sweep of cosmic history, the soul too has an origin and an eventual end. For nearly three hundred and thirty trillion years at the beginning of cosmic time, there was neither birth nor death; the souls then in existence simply were. Death was created when soul started losing their power descends from higher states to human life. From Supreme Being → Deities → Humans → Lower realms

Dissolution itself occurs at different levels, each more total than the last. Below is a detailed table shared by bapuji in his teaching repeatedly. Same was also shared in Bapuji’s earlier book “ life in multiverse”

Time Cycle of Various Types of Dissolution in our Creation

Types of dissolution	When does it happen?	Time cycle/period	How does it happen and who is the medium for the dissolution	What happens to all souls
Ardh Pralay	After completion of four yugas= 1 chaturyuga = 1 yugantar.	43,20,000 years	Dissolution by Shankar one of prime deity of our Brahmand.	Sinful souls are subjected to death
Pralay	After completion of 71 chaturyugas = 71 yugantar= 1 manvantara =71 ardh pralay	308.5 million years	The dissolution occurred by inundation whole earth in water known as Jal pralay. This is done by Vishnu, one of the prime deities of the brahmand.	All of creation on earth is destroyed

Types of dissolution	When does it happen?	Time cycle/period	How does it happen and who is the medium for the dissolution	What happens to all souls
Kalp Pralay	After completion of 1000 chaturyugas = 14 manvantar = 1 day of brahma	4.32 billion years	It is carried out by Vishnu through extreme temperature equivalent to the combined power of 12 suns. During this, the entirety of bhu-lok(earth), bhuvar lok, and swarg-lok are burnt to ashes	All souls of bhu-lok, buvarlok, swarg-lok are dissolved the extreme heat energy of the fire element
Maha Kalp Pralay	On=100 years of brahma=2 paradh=365 00 kalp pralay=1 second of mahashiv	311.04 trillion years	The creator shiv enters into the sun of the brahmand and creates a tremendous fire called kal agni which engulfs all creation inside the brahmand	The entire brahmand including all 14 lokas and all souls created by shiv are dissolved in the kaal agni
Maha-Kaal Pralay	One second of param mahashiv=1 0000 years of Mahashiv	(311.04 trillion x 315.56 billion)years	Maha-shiv turns into Mahakaal and creates kaal agni which absorbs infinite solar systems.	All solar systems are dissolved so all creation of shiv and mahashiv end in this pralay.

The teaching is not given to frighten. It is given to break the small spell that the daily world casts over the soul. When one knows — truly knows — that one stands within a sixteen-hundred-trillion-year story, the petty concerns of a single lifetime begin to fall into their proper proportion. What is worth pursuing in such a span? What is worth attaining? These are the questions the remaining chapters take up.

Chapter Two

The Cycle of Eighty-Four Lakh Species

Why does a soul, once created in the higher realms, descend into the lower forms of life? Why does it enter the cycle of eighty-four lakh species?

The answer lies in the long, slow erosion of power across cosmic ages. Souls created trillions of years ago have, over time, seen their original power diminish. As they descended through the various layers — from the highest realm of Paramdham down to the surface of the Earth — they began to commit sins. The higher the realm, the purer karma; the lower the realm, the more entangled the actions, until at last actions arise that are unmistakably sinful.

When a soul loses its power and engages in sinful action, it falls. It may descend into the seven Patals — the seven underworlds — or even into the fifty-five crore hells. From these lower regions, the soul enters the cycle of eighty-four lakh species, taking countless births in countless forms: in plant life, in insect life, in aquatic life, in birds and beasts, and finally — if grace permits — in the human form once more.

This entire process is governed by the Theory of Karma. Every action carries a consequence, and every consequence shapes the next birth. There is no escape from this law within the lower worlds; what is sown is what is reaped, lifetime after lifetime. The soul that did not understand the law in one birth wakes within the law in the next, often without any memory of how it arrived there.

Yet within this strict justice, there is also great mercy. When a soul finally attains a human birth, it is given the rare opportunity to turn back. The human form is a doorway — a single, precious chance to recognise what has been forgotten and to begin the long climb back toward the immortal world. To waste a human birth in pursuits no different from those of the lower species is, in the eyes of cosmic time, the gravest of all losses.

The cycle of eighty-four lakh species is not a punishment imposed from outside. It is the natural result of forgetting one's original nature. When a soul remembers, the cycle loosens its grip. When it does not, the cycle continues, indifferent and patient, for as long as forgetting remains.

Chapter Three

The Soul's Journey from Mortality to Immortality

The journey of the soul does not move in only one direction. Just as a soul may fall, so too may it rise — from the world of death to the world of immortality.

When a soul attains the knowledge of the Almighty Authority and meditate (yog) connecting with almighty Authority, its inner power begins to return. It reaches a state beyond karma — a state where the binding force of action and reaction no longer holds it down. From this point, its ascent begins. No longer pulled downward by the weight of karma, the soul becomes free to rise, layer by layer, through the realms above.

The soul rises through the physical and subtle bodies, passing through the various lokas one by one, until at last it returns to Paramdham — its original home. This is not a journey of distance but a journey of recognition. Each loka the soul passes through is a layer of identification it leaves behind: identification with the body, with thought, with desire, with form itself. At the journey's end, what remains is the soul in its true Nirakari form

This is the journey for which every soul, knowingly or unknowingly, longs. The restlessness, the dissatisfaction that no worldly attainment can finally quiet, the recurring sense that there must be more — these are not signs of failure. They are the soul's own quiet remembrance, calling the seeker upward.

Chapter Four

Does Every Soul Face Death?

Does every soul, without exception, face death? The answer depends entirely on the Bramand in which the soul resides.

Souls within our Bramand are dissolved when our Bramand's Shiv dissolves it. Even Shiv's own lifespan eventually ends. A single moment of Mahashiv equals one hundred years of Brahma. The owners of Bramands — the Shivs — and the owners above them — the Mahashivs and Param Mahashivs — each undergo their own cycles of creation and dissolution. Inevitably, the souls within their domains share in those cycles.

Yet there is another category of souls altogether. Souls belonging to higher creation, The Multiverse—possessing two hundred to one thousand Kalas, soul power — are truly immortal and eternal. They are not touched by the great dissolutions that periodically sweep through the lower realms. For them, the very word death has no application.

Our Bramand is only a sixteen-Kala (soul power) Bramand, and so its souls remain bound to the great wheel of dissolution. The contrast is sobering: while a soul in a sixteen-Kala Bramand is granted a vast but finite span of cosmic time, a soul in a thousand-Kala Multiverse stands beyond the reach of time entirely. Such Multiverse exist; such souls exist. The cosmic architecture is rich enough to contain both.

To know that the immortal world is real — not as an abstraction, not as a hopeful image, but as a literal region of the cosmos inhabited by literal beings — is itself a powerful source of aspiration. The path toward such realms is open. It is the long path of self-transformation, knowledge, and remembrance that the remaining chapters describe.

Chapter Five

The Creator of the Soul

Who creates the soul? The answer is not singular, for creation itself is hierarchical.

Within our Solar System (Bramand), the creator of souls is Brahma. Above Brahma stands Shiv, the owner of our Bramand. Above Shiv stands Mahashiv (Owner of Galaxy), who can bring forth infinite Shivs in a single thought. Above the Mahashiv stands the Param Mahashiv (Owner of universe), presiding over an even greater expanse of the cosmos. This vast hierarchy of creation and dissolution unfolds across realms beyond ordinary imagination, and is described in fuller detail across other discourses.

What must be understood is that the soul's creator is not a single distant figure, but a layered structure of supreme beings — each presiding over a particular realm, each holding the power to create the souls within it. To know one's creator, then, is also to know one's place in this immense order. The soul did not appear by accident; it was brought forth by a specific authority, in a specific realm, for a specific purpose.

How Creation Proceeds in Our Solar System

There is a particular truth about our Bramand that the seeker must understand carefully, for it sets the entire course of the soul's journey here. Creation in our Bramand did not begin in the formless. It began directly in the form-based stage — the Akari stage. Brahma, by a single divine thought-intent, drew forth the Saptarishis — the seven primordial sages — directly from his own being. They were not first formless and then form-based; they emerged already with light bodies. Just as a Param Purush can manifest another identical being from within himself by a thought — the very essence and pattern of the original passing into the new — so Brahma, by sankalp intent alone, brought forth those first form-based beings into existence.

In our Brahmand, creation did not begin in a formless state. In many other Brahmands across the cosmos, existence first emerges as the formless and only gradually takes on form over vast stretches of time. But in our case, the soul itself came into existence already linked with akari form (3 divine elemental body)

This fundamental difference has shaped the entire history of our Brahmand. Because the soul's origin here is form-based, returning to a purely formless condition is not natural or effortless. Once bound to form, the soul cannot easily reverse that state. The journey back to formlessness demands deep spiritual discipline—an intense and sustained Purusharth carried forward across many lifetimes.

Understanding this restores a sense of dignity and meaning to the soul's existence. The soul is not lost or accidental in an empty universe. It is a created being, with a source, a purpose, and a defined place within a vast and ordered cosmic structure.

To truly remember this is not just knowledge—it is the first step on the path of return.

Chapter Six

The Element of the Soul and the Three Stages

What is the soul made of? Since each souls are unique, answer is not an uniform for all souls.

The soul, in its truest description, is a power of Supreme Divine Light or Param Prakash — the Supreme Light. It is a formless, extremely subtle power that cannot be perceived by these 3d world eyes or by any scientific instrument. The soul is light: light of a quality that transcends every form of light known to the visible world. Just as the Supreme Soul is made of Param Light, so too are these souls — Creator and Creation — made of the same essence, though in varying degrees.

Different categories of souls are composed of different qualities of this essence or in simple words Soul power carried by each soul during creation. The higher -quality, Behad(Infinite level) souls — the souls are made of Supreme Divin Light in its most refined form. Souls are also made of Supreme elements like supreme ether (param Akash), Supreme Fire (param agni), supreme air (param vayu) while still others are made of ordinary Akash, Vayu, agni just simple elements of ether, fire, air respectively. As the categories descend further, the elemental composition of the soul moves closer to the heavier and denser substances that ultimately give rise to animal forms.

The very substance of the soul, then, reflects its station in the cosmic order. To know what one is made of is, in a sense, to know who one truly is. The seeker who recognises themselves as a being of Param Light no longer mistakes themselves for the body of flesh that temporarily houses them. The seeker who recognises themselves as a being of Param Akash no longer accepts the small identifications imposed by family, society, or circumstance.

The Three Stages of the Soul

The soul, as it moves through the architecture of creation, passes through three distinct stages. These stages are not metaphors. They describe real conditions of the soul's being.

The first is the Nirakari stage — the formless stage. In this state, the soul is purely Param Light. There is no covering, no layer, no body of any kind. There is no Mind, no intellect, no recorded impressions. The soul simply is, in its original true brilliance. A formless soul of this purity is what is rightly called Paramatma. In this sense, there is no real difference between the soul and the Supreme Soul. The seeker may say with truth, “Shivoham” — I am Shiva — because as is the Father, so are the children in the formless stage. The soul can only be called Shiva in this Nirakari stage. Such a soul, having become Param Light, ascends directly to Paramdham. It cannot remain in the realms of Shivpuri or Vishnupuri; it goes straight to the supreme abode. There it possesses all the qualities of the Supreme Soul, and as a formless entity it can move anywhere in an instant. To attain this stage is the greatest accomplishment a soul can know.

The second is the Akari stage — the form-based stage. Here, the soul has taken on a form, but a form of supreme luminous substance. The body associated with this stage is the causal body, and it is constituted of the Param Tattvas — Param Akash, Param Vayu, and Param Agni: supreme ether, supreme air, and supreme fire, respectively. This is the body of the soul as it resides in Shivpuri — the Mool Vatan, the original homeland where the transition from formless to form-based first takes place. Shivpuri is the realm of Shiv and Shakti — of Adi Shakti, also known as Maa Durga — the very source of Brahma, Vishnu, and Shankar. Within Shivpuri, the entire body of the soul is one hundred per cent Param Tattva. There is no subtle body here; the causal body alone exists, open and luminous.

As the soul descends from Shivpuri into Vishnupuri — also called Vaikunth — a profound change begins. Half of the Param Tattvas of the causal body recede, and their place is taken by the three lower elements of ether, air, and fire in their ordinary form. At this point, a subtle body begins to form as a covering over the causal body. The soul has not lost its essence; it has simply gathered another layer over its inner light.

Below this, in the realms beyond Brahma's own world of Satya Lok — in Mahlok, Janok, and Taplok — creation continues by the power of thought. As souls bring forth more souls from within themselves — just as Shiva brought forth Shakti, or Vishnu brought forth Lakshmi — the original power gradually weakens, dispersed across millions of subsequent creations. The causal body of Param Tattvas becomes progressively covered by layers of the lower elements, beginning with ether. The most elevated souls transform into subtle, deity-like beings—closer in essence to Param Purush than to the gods of popular imagination—yet no longer the flawless, pristine entities they once were.

The third is the Sakari stage — the Gross stage. When the soul finally reaches the world of mortals — Mrityulok — and takes a human form, it now wears a body of all five elements: earth, water, fire, air, and ether. The causal body still exists at the soul's core; the subtle body still exists as the body of thoughts and impressions; but over both, a physical body of dense matter has come to rest. This is the human condition. A teaching of the ancient seers expresses this exactly: "Yatha Brahmande Tatha Pinde" — as is the universe, so is the body. The layered architecture of the cosmos is mirrored, faithfully and precisely, in the layered constitution of the human being.

The Soul and the Mind

Where does the soul exist within this entire system? The soul abides at the central point of the mind, and from that center it directs the mind's activity. The mind, in turn, governs all the bodies.

Whether it is the causal body, the subtle body, or the physical body, each serves only as an instrument—a medium through which the soul acts by means of the mind. Experiences such as hunger, thirst, emotions, and thoughts arise in the subtle body and find expression through the physical body. Yet it is the mind, under the guidance of the soul, that carries out all actions.

The body itself does not act independently; it is simply the field through which the intentions of the soul are expressed.

Yet the mind was not always present. When the soul existed as pure, formless light, there was no mind, no intellect, and no sanskars—no stored impressions of past actions. These arise only after the soul begins to take on form.

The mind comes into being at the very moment the soul generates its first thought—the initial intent to move from the formless into a state of form. That first stir of thought is the seed from which the mind is born, and from it all inner faculties gradually unfold.

Once the soul has entered form, its inner journey must be guided by the understanding of three stages: it is now Sakari (with form), it was once Akari (subtle or semi-form), and at its deepest essence it remains Nirakari Param Light—formless and pure.

To remember this is to recognize one's true nature. To live in that remembrance is to begin the long journey back to the origin

This teaching is not for the sake of comparison or pride; the categories of souls and the layers of bodies are not a ladder of rivalry. They are a map. The map shows the seeker where they presently stand and where, with effort and grace, they may yet rise. Every soul, no matter the element from which it is presently made and no matter how many coverings it has gathered, retains the capacity to recognise its origin and to begin the long journey of return.

Chapter Seven

Self-Realisation and Becoming Paramatma

Can a human being directly experience the soul-Consciousness? And can a soul ultimately become Paramatma — the Supreme Soul?

The answer is given in the language of Atma Darshan — the direct vision and recognition of the soul. Many speak of self-realisation today, and the teaching has come to be mixed across philosophies. The original concepts written in the Vedas, the Upanishads and the Puranas were later mingled with the knowledge of the Gita five thousand years ago, and then gradually further mingled with the teachings of various religions and sects. As a result, very few speak with precision about what self-realisation truly is.

What Self-Realisation Actually Means

Self-realisation does not mean merely repeating, “I am a soul, I am a soul.” It means recognising one’s own self while remaining in the human body — the lived, experiential knowing that I am a soul, and that this body is only an instrument, a tool through which the soul performs its actions. But the matter does not end there. The soul should remember not only its present condition but its eternal form — its Anadi form — and its Beej Roop, the seed-state from which all its subsequent existence has unfolded. The soul should seek to know and to believe in its incorporeal, original Nirakari condition.

Bapuji gives a fitting example. There are paths that have been practising the affirmation “I am a soul” for many decades. Yet even their most prominent practitioners did not attain true self-realisation in its full sense. After death, those souls reached only a subtle world located approximately one hundred kilometres above the Earth. They did not gain the knowledge of their incorporeal stage; they did not recover their seed-state. Had they truly attained Atma Darshan (realisation of soul state), they would not have remained in that subtle sphere just above the Earth. The soul that has truly realised itself proceeds to the realm appropriate to its category. The lesson is not to disparage — it is to reveal how exacting true self-realisation is, and why the seeker must understand it precisely if it is to be attained.

The Path: Yoga Detachment and Memory

True self-realisation comes through a sustained connection with the Supreme Almighty Authority, by which the seeker draws power into their own being. This connection is what is properly called Yog. As souls become intense yogis, they reach a stage of Nashto Moha — the destruction of attachment to the body and to bodily relations. From within that detachment arises Smriti Labdha — the recovery of the memory of one's true self. The goal of the seeker now becomes precise and unwavering: I must realise my soul, I want my soul-form, I want the eternal form that is mine.

This is not a fleeting tendency but the soul's fundamental orientation. Even in human life, profound Purusharth is required, for the human birth is a rare gateway through which such realization becomes possible. As the soul's long-standing connection with the Supreme Soul deepens and matures, it gradually frees itself from Ichha Matram Avidya —the ignorance rooted solely in worldly desire—and from the attachments that keep it bound. Then, even while still embodied, the seeker begins to experience the incorporeal state. Knowledge starts to arise from within. The seed-state is glimpsed, and the eternal nature is recognized. This inner awakening is the very essence of self-realization.

Recognising One's Category and Inner Records

A subtle truth must be understood here. The incorporeal soul, as pure Param Light, does not hold karmic records within itself, for anything placed in such purity would be instantly dissolved. These records do not reside in the light of the soul, but in a protective sheath that forms around it—a layer that can be described as its Might. This Might acts as a covering through which the soul, once it enters embodiment, carries the impressions of its accumulated journey. As the intellect becomes refined and the seeker's awareness turns steadily toward the eternal seed-state, this layer begins to open. At that stage, the records are not perceived through the physical senses, but are directly known by the awakened soul itself, which begins to recognize and read its own past.

As self-realisation deepens, a remarkable shift takes place: the soul begins to recognize its own category and origin. It comes to understand whether it belongs to the lineage of the nine lakh souls, the sixteen thousand, the one hundred and eight, or the thirty-three crore deities. It may even recall whether its descent was from G2, G1, or from a distant universe beyond. The inner records carried by the soul gradually begin to reveal themselves.

The Behad soul—the infinite, limitless soul—forms a living connection with the Behad ke Param Pita, the limitless Supreme Father, and through this connection receives Behad ki Param Light, the boundless Supreme Light along with its power. Liberation does not occur in a single instant; it unfolds step by step as the soul begins to experience its true nature.

Gradually, with increasing intensity, the fundamental questions of the seeker arise: What kind of soul am I? Where is my true origin? Why have I come here? And why have I remained bound to this Earth?

The Householder as Karmayogi

To attain such a state requires a particular form of life. It requires non-attachment, the Ichha-rahit condition free from worldly craving, and at least eight hours of yog daily. The seeker lives as a Karmayogi — one who performs all social duties while remaining established in yog. The Gita itself names the householder's life — Grihastha Ashram — as the highest path. The path of renunciation, of Sanyas in the modern monastic sense, was begun much later, by Shankaracharya. The original wisdom did not require a person to abandon the world in order to realise the Self; it required them to remain in the world while becoming inwardly free of it.

The progression unfolds with precision. First arises knowledge—a clear understanding of the soul and its true destiny. Then the seeker begins to embody that knowledge, living it rather than merely holding it as belief. From there, this embodied awareness is applied to every action in life. The seeker remains established in the remembrance of their Param Pad—their highest, supreme state—firmly knowing: I am a soul of the highest order. I am not ordinary. I am a Behad soul, endowed with elevated Kala and immense power.

Liberation from the Bonds of Karma

When the goal is set this high, the qualities required for it follow. Like Arjuna in the great archery test, the seeker focuses upon a single target with undivided attention. By becoming Gyani Tu Atma — the soul that is itself the embodiment of knowledge — the seeker becomes filled with Param Light. From this state, liberation from karma at every level becomes possible. The soul becomes free from the bonds of karma recorded in the Karan Sharir — the causal body — in the Mahakaran Sharir — the great-causal body — and at last in the Param Mahakaran Sharir — the supreme great-causal body. By repeatedly turning the attention to the eternal form, the soul reaches a state in which the very basis of bondage is dissolved.

This is what is truly meant by Atma Darshan. This is what is truly meant by becoming Paramatma. The Behad soul that turns inward and recovers its records can come to recognise itself as Paramatma — the Supreme Soul — by direct experience rather than doctrine. From this state, the remaining work of the soul becomes service: the quiet labour of helping other souls remember what has been forgotten, and of preparing the world for its own great transformation.

Such recognition transforms everything. The soul that knows itself as Paramatma no longer lives as a fragment in search of meaning; it lives as the meaning itself, undivided and self-luminous. The journey from “I think I am a body” to “I am a soul” to “I am Paramatma” is the entire arc of human life made meaningful, the deepest reason a human birth was ever granted at all.

Chapter Eight

Beyond the World of Elements and Death

Can a soul move beyond the world of the five elements — beyond the very domain of death itself? Yes, it can, provided it makes the conscious choice to do so.

The first obstacle to overcome is Mahamaya — the great illusion that binds the soul to the world of forms. So long as Mahamaya remains unrecognised, the soul mistakes the temporary for the eternal and the borrowed for its own. The body is taken to be the self; the family is taken to be eternal; the world is taken to be the whole of reality. The moment the illusion is seen for what it is, the binding loosens.

Once this recognition has occurred, the soul must move from the path of devotion alone to the path of knowledge. Devotion opens the heart, but knowledge opens the intellect. Both are needed for the full ascent. Devotion without knowledge can leave the seeker lost in beautiful sentiment; knowledge without devotion can leave the seeker brittle and dry. Together, they form the two wings without which the soul cannot rise.

In this regard, one must aspire to become an intelligent fish in the vast ocean of knowledge, rather than remaining a frog confined to a narrow well. The frog in the well believes its small puddle to be the whole world, and resents any suggestion otherwise. The fish in the ocean knows that the waters extend beyond its sight in every direction, and so it swims with humility and wonder.

The seeker uses both the wisdom of the scriptures and the insights of true science to grasp the immense scale of the Galaxy, the Universe, and the Multiverse that lie above our own Bramand. With knowledge as the guiding light, the soul rises above the boundaries of the elemental world and steps into a domain that death cannot touch.

Chapter Nine

Why Souls Become Trapped in the Mortal World

Why do souls remain bound to the mortal world, lifetime after lifetime? Why does liberation elude even those who appear, on the surface, to be advanced?

The answer is Karma. Even high-quality souls become trapped in the cycle of birth and death because they fail to perform the very tasks for which they were sent into this world. Instead, they become entangled in worldly attachments and lose themselves in Moha-Maya — the powerful illusion of attachment to people, possessions, and pleasures.

Moha Maya is more subtle than ordinary desire. It dresses itself in the language of love, of duty, of responsibility. A soul caught in Moha Maya does not feel itself to be lost; it feels itself to be doing what is right. It is here that Ichha Matram Avidya — the ignorance that is nothing but worldly desire wearing the costume of necessity — binds the soul most tightly. And so the trap closes, lifetime after lifetime, almost without resistance.

Souls have inhabited this Earth for an incomprehensibly long time. As their original power decreased over the course of trillions of years, they fell from the lofty status of deities to the limited condition of human beings. The mortal world is not their original home; it is the place where they have lost their way. The familiarity of this world is itself part of the trap, for what is familiar rarely seems worth questioning.

To recognise this is to begin the journey back. The soul that remembers its true origin can no longer be fully content with the mortal world. A restlessness awakens within it — a sacred dissatisfaction — and that very restlessness becomes the first true step toward liberation. The trap was never locked from the outside. It was held shut only by forgetting.

Chapter Ten

World Transformation via Self-Transformation

The final mystery of the soul is also the most urgent. This precious knowledge must be realised by every soul before death, so it can consciously determine its onward journey toward the immortal realm.

Souls must awaken their inner vision. They must learn to think beyond the narrow limits of personal life—beyond family, city, nation, and even the planet itself. By understanding the vastness of the cosmos and recognising their true identity, they open the door to self-transformation. Without this expansion, the soul remains confined to a small fragment of existence; with it, the soul becomes an aware participant in the greater cosmic order.

This inner transformation is the true foundation of world transformation. The world cannot change externally while souls remain unchanged within. Each transformed soul becomes a silent centre of light, and when such centres multiply, they naturally reshape the world. This is not metaphor, but the fundamental process through which transformation has always occurred.

Ultimately, this is the aim: the renewal of the world, the awakening of every soul, and the return of all to the supreme state of Param Tattva. These teachings are not meant for personal comfort alone. They are offered so that each reader may take part in the greater work of this age—the transformation of the self, the world, and the destiny of all beings who have forgotten their true origin.

May every reader be blessed on this journey. May the layered architecture of the cosmos reveal itself to the awakened seeker. And may the soul's truest home, Paramdham, draw ever nearer with each passing day.

Glossary of Key Terms

The teachings in this book draw upon a precise spiritual vocabulary developed over decades by Bapuji Dashrathbhai Patel. The following definitions are offered as a reference for readers new to this language.

Akari — The form-based stage of the soul. In our Bramand, souls were brought into being directly in the Akari stage; their original birth was already form-based, with the causal body of Param Tattvas as their first body.

Akash — Ether; the subtlest of the five gross elements. Souls of certain categories are composed of ordinary Akash.

Almighty Authority — The supreme source of power from which the awakened soul draws strength to break free of karma and rise toward Paramdham.

Anadi — The eternal, beginningless form of the soul, prior to all subsequent embodiment. The soul that attains self-realisation comes to remember its Anadi form.

Atma Darshan — Self-realisation in its true sense — the direct, lived recognition that the self is the soul and not the body, accompanied by the knowledge of the soul's eternal form, seed-state, and category.

Beej Roop — The seed-state of the soul — the original, irreducible form from which all subsequent stages of the soul's journey have unfolded. Recognising the Beej Roop is central to true self-realisation.

Behad — Limitless or boundless. A Behad soul is one of the highest order, made of Param Light, capable of recognising itself as Paramatma.

Bramand — A complete creation unit at the scale of a solar realm, centred upon its own sun and governed by its own Shiv. Our Earth and the surrounding worlds belong to a single Bramand. Each Bramand has a Kala measure; ours is a sixteen-Kala Bramand. Above the Bramand sit the Galaxy, the Universe, and the Multiverse, in increasing order of scale.

Brahma — The creator of souls within our Bramand; the agent through whom Shiv initiates creation. In our Bramand, Brahma extracted the Saptarishis directly from his own being by a single thought-intent, creating them in the Akari (form-based) stage from the very beginning.

Buddhi — The intellect; the discerning faculty that, when refined and oriented toward the eternal seed-form, allows the soul to read its own inner records and ascend.

Causal Body (Karan Sharir) — The innermost of the soul's three bodies, formed of the Param Tattvas — Param Akash, Param Vayu, and Param Agni. The causal body is the soul's body in Shivpuri; in lower realms it remains at the soul's core, beneath the subtle and physical bodies, and is the deepest seat of karmic record.

Eighty-Four Lakh Species — The vast cycle of births through which fallen souls pass after descending into the lower realms; spans plant, insect, aquatic, animal, and human forms.

Galaxy — The cosmic scale that contains many Bramands. The owner of a Galaxy is the Mahashiv, who can bring forth infinite Shivs in a single thought.

Grihastha Ashram — The path of the householder. According to the Gita, this is the highest path — the way of remaining in the world while becoming inwardly free of it. The path of monastic Sanyas in its modern form was begun much later by Shankaracharya.

Gyan Daan Mahadaan — The donation of knowledge as the greatest of all donations. The principle under which all of Bapuji's books and teachings are offered freely to humanity.

Gyani Tu Atma — The soul that has become the very embodiment of knowledge, no longer merely holding wisdom as belief but living from it directly. From this state, liberation from karma at every level becomes possible.

Ichha Matram Avidya — The ignorance that consists of nothing but worldly desire. Even when dressed in the language of love, duty, or responsibility, this ignorance is what most powerfully binds the soul to the mortal world.

Kala — A degree or quality of light by which a Bramand is measured. Our Bramand possesses sixteen Kalas; the highest Bramands possess up to one thousand Kalas, and the souls within them are truly immortal.

Kalpa Pralaya — A great dissolution at the end of a cosmic age in which the lower worlds are destroyed; lower-category souls are dissolved while higher souls ascend.

Karan Sharir — See Causal Body. The deepest body of the soul, formed of Param Tattvas; the subtle records of the soul's long history are dissolved at this level when self-realisation matures.

Karmayogi — One who has realised the soul as the true self and now acts in the world from that recognition, drawing power from the Almighty Authority. The Karmayogi remains in the householder's life and yet performs eight hours of daily yoga, free from worldly craving. The actions of a Karmayogi no longer create binding karma.

Loka — A realm or world; one of the layered regions through which souls descend and ascend on their cosmic journey. Satya Lok, Mahlok, Janok, and Taplok are among the lokas above our Earth.

Mahakal Agni — The Great Fire of Time generated by Shiv when He enters the sun at the close of His hundred-year life; the agent of Bramand-level dissolution.

Mahakal Pralaya — The supreme dissolution in which infinite Bramands are absorbed back into the Mahashiv; the most total of all cosmic dissolutions within the relevant realms.

Mahakalpa Pralaya — The dissolution of the entire Bramand at the close of Brahma's hundred-year life.

Mahakaran Sharir — The great-causal body; a deeper layer of karmic record beyond the ordinary causal body. The soul that has become Gyani Tu Atma is liberated from the bonds of karma recorded in the Mahakaran.

Mahamaya — The great illusion that binds the soul to the world of forms and obscures its recognition of its true nature. The first obstacle to be overcome on the path of liberation.

Mahashiv — The owner of a Galaxy and the supreme authority above Shiv, capable of bringing forth infinite Shivs in a single thought. A single moment of Mahashiv equals one hundred years of Brahma.

Might — The protective layer that forms over the soul once it has taken on form. Karmic records cannot be inscribed upon Param Light itself — such light would incinerate them — but they are carried within this protective layer, which opens to the soul's recognition only when the intellect is fully refined.

Mind — The first inner faculty to arise as the soul transitions from the formless to the form-based state. In the pure Param Light condition there is no Mind, no intellect, no Sanskar; the Mind appears with the very first thought-intent of the soul, and from that moment all further inner faculties unfold.

Moha Maya — The illusion of attachment, particularly to people, possessions, and pleasures. More subtle than ordinary desire because it presents itself as love, duty, or responsibility.

Mool Vatan — The original homeland of the soul — Shivpuri — in which the transition from the Nirakari (formless) to the Akari (form-based) state first takes place.

Mrityulok — The world of mortals; the realm of birth and death in which the soul, having descended through the higher realms, takes a body of all five elements.

Multiverse — The cosmic scale that contains many Universes. The architecture of creation extends further still, beyond what the human mind can readily comprehend.

Nashto Moha — The destruction of attachment to the body and bodily relations. A stage attained by intense yogis, after which the recovery of the memory of one's true self (Smriti Labdha) becomes possible.

Nirakari — The formless stage of the soul. In this state the soul is purely Param Light, with no covering, no Mind, no Sanskar. A formless soul of this purity is what is rightly called Paramatma and ascends directly to Paramdham.

Paradh — A unit of cosmic time within the lifespan of Brahma. One Paradh of the present Brahma has been completed; we are presently within the second.

Param Agni — Supreme fire; one of the three Param Tattvas of which the causal body is composed in Shivpuri.

Param Akash — Supreme ether; a higher and more refined element than ordinary Akash. Together with Param Vayu and Param Agni, it constitutes the Param Tattvas of the causal body.

Param Light — The supreme luminous essence; the substance of the highest Behad souls and, in its purest form, of the Supreme Soul itself.

Param Mahakaran Sharir — The supreme great-causal body; the deepest level at which the soul carries the bonds of karma. Liberation at this level marks the soul's emergence into its full and undimmed nature.

Param Mahashiv — The owner of a Universe; the supreme authority above the Mahashiv.

Param Pad — The supreme status of the soul. The seeker on the path of self-realisation holds the conviction: I am a soul of the highest supreme status, a Behad soul of very high Kala and very great power.

Param Prakash — Supreme Light; another name for Param Light. The very substance of the soul in its truest description.

Param Purush — The supreme primordial men, the first beings brought forth at the dawn of cosmic time within our Bramand.

Param Shanti — Supreme peace; the state attained by the soul that has returned to its true source. Also the name under which this knowledge is offered to the world.

Param Tattva — The supreme essence or supreme principle. In the constitution of the soul, the Param Tattvas of the causal body are Param Akash, Param Vayu, and Param Agni.

Param Vayu — Supreme air; one of the three Param Tattvas of which the causal body is composed in Shivpuri.

Paramatma — Supreme Soul; the realised state of a Behad soul that has recognised its true and supreme nature. In the Nirakari stage there is no real difference between the soul and the Supreme Soul.

Paramdham — The original and supreme abode of the soul; the highest of all realms and the destination of the soul's complete ascent.

Patals — The seven underworlds into which souls fall when they lose their power and engage in sinful action.

Philosophy of Karma — The cosmic law that governs action and consequence; under this law, every action carries a result that shapes the soul's future births.

Pralaya — Dissolution; the cyclic process by which worlds, Bramands, and the souls within them are eventually unmade.

Purusharth — Sustained spiritual exertion; the prolonged inner effort by which the soul, having taken on form, gradually returns toward the formless state of its origin.

Sakari — The physical stage of the soul. When the soul reaches Mrityulok and takes a human body of all five elements, it enters the Sakari condition; the causal and subtle bodies remain at its inner core.

Sanskar — An inner impression carried by the soul. In the pure Nirakari stage there are no Sanskars; they accumulate as the soul takes on form and acts within the realms of creation.

Sanyas — Renunciation; the path of monastic withdrawal from worldly life as a formal institution. In its modern form, Sanyas was begun by Shankaracharya. The Gita itself names the householder's Grihastha Ashram, not Sanyas, as the highest path.

Saptarishis — The seven primordial sages whom Brahma extracted directly from his own being at the dawn of creation in our Bramand. Their birth was already form-based; through them, the line of subsequent souls in our Bramand began.

Self-Realisation — See Atma Darshan. The direct, experiential recognition that one is not the body but the soul; the foundational shift from which all further spiritual ascent proceeds.

Shiv — The owner of our Bramand; the authority through whom Brahma initiates creation and through whom the Bramand's eventual dissolution occurs.

Shivpuri — The realm of Shiv and Shakti — of Adi Shakti, also known as Maa Durga — from whom Brahma, Vishnu, and Shankar emerge. Shivpuri is the Mool Vatan, the homeland in which the soul first takes on the Akari (form-based) condition; here the body is one hundred per cent Param Tattva.

Smriti Labdha — The recovery of the memory of one's true self. After Nashto Moha (destruction of attachment) the soul recovers its inner remembrance, and from that recovery the goal of self-realisation becomes precise and unwavering.

Subtle Body — The non-physical body of impressions, thoughts, and tendencies that begins to form as the soul descends from Shivpuri into Vishnupuri, where half of the Param Tattvas of the causal body recede and lower elements take their place. The subtle body accompanies the soul through its further descent into the Sakari condition.

Universe — The cosmic scale that contains many Galaxies. The owner of a Universe is the Param Mahashiv. In Bapuji's cosmology, the Universe is far greater than what is commonly meant by the word in everyday English.

Vaikunth — Another name for Vishnupuri — the realm of Vishnu, where the descending soul's Param Tattvas are partly replaced by lower elements and the subtle body begins to form.

Vishnupuri — The realm of Vishnu, lying below Shivpuri. As the soul enters this realm, fifty per cent of the Param Tattvas of its causal body are replaced by the three lower elements; the subtle body begins to cover the causal body at this point.

Yatha Brahmande Tatha Pinde — “As is the universe, so is the body.” An ancient teaching that expresses the precise correspondence between the layered architecture of the cosmos and the layered constitution of the human being.

Yoga — The connection between the soul and the Supreme Soul through which power is drawn into the soul’s being. Sustained Yoga matures into Nashto Moha and Smriti Labdha, and is indispensable for true self-realisation.

Yuga — A cosmic age. The four yugas together complete a cycle, at the end of which partial dissolutions occur.

Bapuji's Insights

Bapuji Ki Anmol Baatein

Reflections drawn directly from the spoken teachings of Bapuji Dashrathbhai Patel. The Hinglish lines preserve the cadence and texture of the original speech; the English meanings are offered alongside for readers new to the language.

Aatma ki utpatti jo aatma ka creator hota hai — jaise hamare Bramand mein Shiv ne Brahma dwara srijan karwaya.

Meaning: The origin of the soul depends on its creator; for example, in our Bramand, Shiv initiated creation through Brahma.

2.

Bramand mein jo srijan hote gaye, Param Purush bhi neeche aate gaye, aate gaye, aur woh devta bane.

Meaning: As creation continued in the Bramand, the Param Purush — the Supreme Beings — descended further and further until they became deities.

3.

Hamare shastron mein jo likha hai woh ekdam sahi hai... 1600 kharab saal ka hamare Bramand ki history hai.

Meaning: What is written in our scriptures is absolutely correct... the history of our Bramand spans approximately sixteen hundred trillion years.

4.

Jab Mahakalp Pralay hota hai, Brahma ka 100 saal hota hai, tab Bramand ki aayu khatam ho jaati hai.

Meaning: When the Mahakalpa Pralaya occurs at the end of Brahma's hundred-year life, the lifespan of the Bramand comes to an end.

Shiv surya mein pravesh karke Mahakal Agni paida karke poore Bramand ko apne andar samaakar, poora Bramand jalakar bhasm kar deta hai.

Meaning: Shiv enters the sun, generates the Mahakal Agni — the Great Fire of Time — and absorbs the entire Bramand into Himself, burning it to ashes.

Anant koti Bramandon mein jitni bhi aatmayein hain, woh sab usmein samaa jaati hain. Samaa jaana maana uska visarjan hona.

Meaning: All the souls within infinite Bramands are absorbed into Mahashiv; being absorbed means their dissolution.

7.

Jab aatma achhe karm karti hai... aatm-swaroop bankar Paramatma se gyaan leta hai, Almighty Authority ko jaanta hai... usse aatma mein power aata hai.

Meaning: When a soul performs righteous deeds and takes knowledge from the Almighty Authority by becoming soul-conscious, it gains true power.

8.

Sva-parivartan se hi vishwa-parivartan sambhav hai. Hamara lakshya hai maha-vishwa parivartan.

Meaning: Only through self-transformation is world transformation possible. Our ultimate goal is the transformation of the great world.

9.

Jo Behad ki aatma hai, woh Param Light — high quality Param Light — se bani hui aatma hai.

Meaning: The Behad soul — the limitless soul — is made of high-quality Param Light, the Supreme Light.

10.

Main aatma hoon, shareer nahi hoon. Shareer to ek karm karne ka saadhan hai.

Meaning: I am a soul, not a body; the body is merely an instrument, a tool for performing actions.

11.

Aatma apne aap ko jaan sakti hai — main kahan se aayi hoon, kahan ki rehne wali hoon? Galaxy se aayi hoon, universe se aayi hoon, multiverse se aayi hoon.

Meaning: The soul can know itself — where it came from and where its true home lies — whether it originated from a galaxy, a universe, or the multiverse.

Kuein ka mendhak mat bano, gyaan saagar ki machhli bano. Aur gyaan saagar mein doobega to vichar saagar manthan karega, to sab kuch samajh paayega.

Meaning: Do not be like a frog in a well; become a fish in the ocean of knowledge, for diving into it and churning your thoughts will lead to attaining everything.

Bhakti ka phal gyaan milta hai, to gyaan swaroop bane, aatma aatm-swaroop ki anubhuti kare.

Meaning: The fruit of devotion is knowledge; therefore, the soul should become an embodiment of knowledge and experience its true self.

14.

Sva-parivartan se vishwa-parivartan karo. Hamara lakshya hai maha-vishwa parivartan ka.

Meaning: Bring about world transformation through self-transformation. Our goal is a great transformation of the world.

15.

Ankhein kholo... kuein ka mendhak mat bano, gyaan saagar ki machhli bano, aur apni buddhi aur vicharon ko Behad banao.

Meaning: Open your eyes... do not be a frog in a well, but a fish in the ocean of knowledge, and make your intellect and your thoughts Behad — limitless.

Aatma Param Prakash ki bani hui hai — ekdam nirakari, ekdam sukshmatam shakti.

Meaning: The soul is made of Supreme Light — entirely formless, the most subtle of all powers.

17.

Hamare Bramand mein srijan seedha Akari mein hua — Brahma ne sankalp se Saptarishi nikale, woh shareer ke saath hi paida hue.

Meaning: In our Bramand, creation occurred directly in the form-based stage — Brahma drew forth the Saptarishis by thought-intent, and they were born already with bodies.

18.

Aatma man ke center point par baithti hai, aur man ko chalaati hai. Shareer to bas ek saadhan hai.

Meaning: The soul resides at the centre point of the mind and operates the mind. The body itself is only an instrument.

19.

Shivpuri mein shareer 100% Param Tattva ka hota hai — Param Akash, Param Vayu, Param Agni. Yahi karan shareer hai.

Meaning: In Shivpuri, the body is one hundred per cent Param Tattva — Param Akash, Param Vayu, and Param Agni. This is the causal body.

20.

Vishnupuri mein 50% Param Tattva kam ho jaate hain, neeche ke teen tattva aa jaate hain, aur sukshma shareer karan shareer ko dhakne lagta hai.

Meaning: In Vishnupuri, fifty per cent of the Param Tattvas recede, the three lower elements take their place, and the subtle body begins to cover the causal body.

Yatha Brahmande tatha pinde — jaisa Bramand hai, vaisa hi shareer hai.

Meaning: As is the Bramand, so is the body — the layered architecture of the cosmos is mirrored exactly in the constitution of the human being.

22.

Jab aatma nirakari Param Light thi, tab man bhi nahi tha, buddhi bhi nahi thi, sanskar bhi nahi the. Pehla sankalp hi man ki utpatti hai.

Meaning: When the soul was formless Param Light, there was no Mind, no intellect, and no Sanskar. The very first thought-intent is the origin of the Mind.

23.

Atma Darshan maane shareer mein rehte hue khud ko aatma ke roop mein pehchaanna — aur apne anadi roop, beej roop ko jaanna.

Meaning: Self-realisation means recognising oneself as a soul while remaining in the body — and knowing one's eternal form and seed-state.

24.

Yog ka matlab hai aatma ka Paramatma se sambandh, jisse aatma mein power aata hai.

Meaning: Yoga means the connection of the soul with the Supreme Soul, by which power flows into the soul.

25.

Jab aatma teevra yogi banti hai, tab nashto moha hota hai, smriti labdha hoti hai — aur lakshya saaf hota hai: mujhe aatma darshan chahiye.

Meaning: When the soul becomes an intense yogi, attachment is destroyed, the memory of the true self returns, and the goal becomes clear: I want self-realisation.

Aatma swayam Param Light hai, par uske upar ek 'might' ki layer hoti hai — usi mein record hota hai. Buddhi tez ho to woh layer khulti hai.

Meaning: The soul itself is Param Light, but a layer of “Might” forms upon it — within that layer the records are held. When the intellect is refined, that layer opens.

27.

Grihastha Ashram sabse uchcha hai — Gita yahi kehti hai. Sanyas to Shankaracharya ne baad mein shuru kiya.

Meaning: The householder’s life is the highest path — the Gita itself says so. Monastic Sanyas was begun much later, by Shankaracharya.

28.

Karmayogi bano — har din kam se kam aath ghante yog karo, ichha-rahit raho, aur duniya mein rehte hue duniya se mukt raho.

Meaning: Become a Karmayogi — perform at least eight hours of yoga daily, remain free from worldly desire, and live in the world while inwardly free of it.

29.

Jab aatma Gyani Tu Atma ban jaati hai, tab woh karan, mahakaran, aur Param Mahakaran sharir ke karm-bandhan se mukt ho jaati hai. Yahi Atma Darshan hai.

Meaning: When the soul becomes Gyani Tu Atma — the embodiment of knowledge — it is liberated from the bonds of karma in the causal, the great-causal, and the supreme great-causal bodies. This is true self-realisation.

“Gyan Daan Maha Daan”

Sharing Knowledge is the Highest Charity

— Bapuji Dashrathbhai Patel

This book unveils the divine mystery of the soul, where consciousness born from the 'Supreme Light' forgets its true essence and becomes trapped in the illusion of the mortal world.

It presents profound knowledge about the soul's infinite powers, its hidden secrets, and spiritual truths that are rarely found in ordinary scriptures.

This is not merely a book, but a spiritual journey toward self-awakening and the discovery of one's true existence.

One of India's largest spiritual channels, with 17.5+ million subscribers.
