About Bapuji

Bapuji (full name: Bapuji Dashrathbhai Patel, also lovingly called “Dadaji” by the younger generation) was born in 1956 in the small village of Akhaj in the Mehsana district of Gujarat. However, he spent his childhood in another village named Ambasan, also located in the Mehsana district.

In the early part of his life, he was a highly successful lawyer. Later, he devoted his life to realizing the supreme spiritual truth and bringing this divine knowledge forward for the welfare of humanity. Today, this supreme knowledge serves as a guiding light for true seekers to realize their ultimate destiny. It is a blessing of the highest divinity that the present time is witnessing the rise of this supreme spiritual knowledge, guiding souls on Earth to return to their original source.

Despite being raised in a very poor family and facing challenging circumstances, Bapuji had a deep desire to transform this sorrowful and suffering world into a better place. At the young age of six, he questioned God repeatedly, asking why God remained silent about the suffering of humanity. This intense longing to end human suffering eventually led him to attain the highest level of spirituality later in life.

Even as a child, Bapuji would spend hours alone in the fields, often neglecting his own comfort. Due to poverty, he would walk barefoot without shoes or sandals, frequently getting pricked by thorns. Many times, he would stay late in the fields and, on his way back home, encounter subtle world entities. These experiences sparked his interest in communicating with subtle world souls.

Bapuji was courageous from a young age, which helped him overcome many obstacles. Alongside his studies in chartered accountancy (CA), he gave tuition classes to support himself financially. Later, he completed his Bachelor of Law (LLB) degree and became a well-known lawyer in Ahmedabad.

In 1997, he established a spiritual institution called “Vishwa Parivartak Ishwariya Vidhyalay” in Chenpur, Ahmedabad, with the mission of transforming this mortal world, filled with suffering and disorder, into an eternal divine world of immortality. Smt. Sushma Tandon, lovingly known as “Maa,” worked alongside Bapuji in this grand divine mission.

To accomplish this mission, Bapuji worked tirelessly, dedicating all his resources to this divine purpose. During that time, he would deliver continuous spiritual discourses for up to 18 hours without rest. In these discourses, he explained the highest dimensions of divine knowledge, which he realized through deep meditation and divine vision in a state of superconsciousness. This knowledge goes beyond the imagination of the ordinary human mind.

Bapuji’s teachings cover a vast range of topics, including the types of celestial creators across different dimensions, the creation of our solar system, galaxy, and universe, and most importantly, the transcendental knowledge of the multiverse and realities beyond it. His knowledge is supremely profound and is intended for highly evolved seekers, referred to as “behad souls.” According to Bapuji, these “behad souls” will play a key role in transforming this mortal world into an eternal divine realm.

At present, Bapuji remains deeply engaged in intense meditation and samadhi for long hours. He does not meet anyone, as he is continuously immersed in his transcendental mission in a superconscious state.

— by Bapuji Dashrathbhai Patel

From the moment a soul becomes aware of itself, a quiet question arises within — Who am I? Where have I come from? Where do I have to go? Across cultures and ages, this inner search has led seekers to the feet of a Guru. The word itself has carried a sacred weight: a Guru is the one who removes darkness and reveals the light.

Yet in our present age, the meaning of this sacred word has been clouded. Many traditions, paths and sampradayas have arisen. Many teachers stand before crowds. Many seekers wander from one to another, hoping to find what their soul truly longs for. The question is no longer simply, “Should I have a Guru?” The question is, “What is a Guru truly meant to give, and how do I recognise the one who can give it?”

This book gathers Bapuji’s direct teachings on this question. It speaks plainly. It speaks of the real work of a Guru, of why old patterns no longer hold, of the after-death state of departed teachers, of false gurus and modern distortions, and of the single path that remains open in every age — to become soul-conscious and to connect directly with the Almighty Authority.

The reader will find that Bapuji does not ask for blind faith. He invites every seeker to study, to compare, to discern, and finally to realise. A Guru can give knowledge; the seeker alone can live it. That is the message of this book.

May this small offering help the sincere soul find clarity, and may it lead the reader gently from the question of the Guru to the answer of the Supreme.

Chapter One

The Eternal Question — Why Every Seeker Looks for a Guru

From the beginning of time, every soul that has turned its face toward the spiritual path has felt the need for a Guru. This is not a small thing. To search for a Guru means to admit, deep within oneself, that one does not yet know what one truly is — and that one cannot find that knowing alone.

Bapuji says that every human being, in some form, has approached someone for spiritual knowledge. The word guru has been used so widely that today people no longer pause to ask: “What does a Guru actually do? What does a Guru actually give?” Without this clarity, the search itself becomes confused.

Why the Search Begins

The soul, even when it does not know its own name, knows that something is missing. Material life cannot fill it. Pleasure cannot fill it. Even success and family cannot fill it. There is a quiet ache for something higher. This ache is the beginning of the search for a Guru.

Bapuji explains that this ache appears strongest in souls who have come down from higher lokas. A soul that has previously been in Swarga, in Mahalok, in Janalok, in Tapalok, or in Brahmapuri, does not feel at home in this world of five elements. It is restless. From childhood itself such a soul begins searching — at first for an Ishta Dev, then for a Guru, then for knowledge of where it has actually come from.

The Three Great Questions

Bapuji places three questions at the very centre of the Guru-disciple relationship. A real Guru exists to help the soul answer them:

First: Who am I? — am I this body, or am I the soul that lives inside it?

Second: Where have I come from? — from which dimension of creation did my soul descend before taking this human body?

Third: Where do I have to go? — what is the destination of my soul, and how do I reach it?

A Guru who cannot guide the seeker through these three questions is not a complete Guru. He may be an honest teacher of one path or one tradition, but he is not the one who can take the soul home.

Why the Question of the Guru is Critical Today

In the present age, the question of the Guru has become more important than ever. There are many teachers, many traditions, many paths. Some give peace. Some give discipline. Some give a mantra. Some give techniques. Yet the deeper question — how the soul will return to its true source — is touched by very few.

Bapuji says: “Pehle to jitne bhi guru hain, unka jo gyaan dete hain, uska saar samajhna chahiye.” First, one must understand the essence of what the various Gurus actually teach. Until the essence is grasped, the seeker cannot judge whether a given Guru can take him where his soul needs to go.

♦ “Bina gyan ke aage badhne se atma kahin nahi pahunchti.”

“Without knowledge, the soul cannot move forward to anywhere truly higher.”

This book begins with that essence — what a Guru is meant to be, and what a Guru is meant to give. Once that is clear, every other question about Gurus, about their living role and their after-death role, becomes easy to understand.

Chapter Two

The Ancient Guru Tradition — Why It No Longer Fits This Age

In earlier times, the tradition of the Guru was deeply embedded in family and community life. Bapuji recalls how, in the age of the Mahabharata, there were kul gurus — family Gurus who served generation after generation. There were teaching Gurus who guided children in their studies. There were ritual Gurus who performed the family's spiritual functions.

Bapuji says plainly: “Ab woh zamana nahi raha.” That age has gone.

Why the Old Pattern Worked Once

In those earlier ages — in Satyug, Treta, and even much of Dwaparyug — the souls on Earth were of much higher quality. Their inner power was higher. The world around them was simpler. A single family Guru could carry the spiritual responsibility of an entire household, because the household itself was already spiritually inclined. People did not need to question much; the air itself was clearer.

The Guru in that age did not need to give the highest knowledge of the multiverse. The atmosphere was such that even basic spiritual guidance was enough for souls to remain elevated and to take birth again in higher realms.

Why the Old Pattern No Longer Holds

In Kalyug, the situation has changed completely. Maya has become extremely powerful. The atmosphere is dense with negativity. Souls are confused. The mind is restless. Information is everywhere; clarity is rare. In such an age, simply belonging to a family Guru is not enough. A seeker may live an entire life under a kul guru and still not understand who he himself is.

Bapuji says that when the age changes — when Satyug, Treta, Dwapar, Kalyug rotate — the capacity of human beings to receive knowledge also changes, and the capacity of Gurus to give knowledge also changes. The same level of teaching is not enough across all ages.

The Trap of Inherited Devotion

In the old pattern, a Guru was often inherited. The family had its Guru, and the children grew up worshipping that Guru as God. When the Guru died, his idol was placed in the home. Worship continued — generation after generation — without the seeker ever asking what knowledge the Guru had actually given.

Bapuji says this kind of inherited devotion has limits. Devotion is beautiful, but devotion without knowledge cannot take the soul beyond a certain point. The soul may receive peace for a few moments; it does not receive the freedom of the highest truth.

Why This Age Demands Knowledge-Based Spirituality

In this present time, Bapuji insists, the spiritual path must be founded on knowledge — gyan. Without gyan, the seeker cannot recognise a true Guru. Without gyan, the seeker cannot distinguish between a teaching that uplifts and a teaching that simply binds him further into maya.

This is why, Bapuji says, the entire approach to the Guru must be re-examined in our age. The seeker can no longer rely on inheritance, on family custom, or on a name passed down by tradition. He must understand the essence of every teaching he hears and choose his path with discernment.

Chapter Three

The Real Work of a Guru — A Bridge Between Soul and Supreme

If the old Guru tradition no longer fits, what then is the true work of a Guru? Bapuji answers this question with great clarity. He lists, in his own words, what a real Guru is meant to give. This list is not personal opinion. It is the very definition of Guruship as Bapuji has seen it through his divine vision.

The Knowledge of the Soul

First, a Guru must give the knowledge of the atma — the soul. He must help the seeker realise that he is not the body. He is not the mind. He is a point of conscious light, eternal and indestructible. This is the very foundation. Without it, all other knowledge floats without anchor.

The Experience of Soul-Form

Second, a Guru must lead the seeker into the actual experience of atma swaroop — the soul's own original form. This is not merely intellectual understanding. It is a felt realisation in which the seeker, for the first time, experiences himself as a soul rather than a body. A real Guru opens this experience step by step.

The Theory of Karma

Third, a Guru must explain the theory of karma — how thoughts, words, and actions create the future of the soul. How the soul accumulates sanskar. How karmic bondages keep the soul bound to the cycle of birth and death. Without this teaching, the seeker cannot understand why his life is the way it is, nor how to change it.

How to Break the Cycle of Birth and Death

Fourth, a Guru must teach how to step out of the cycle of birth and death. He must teach mukti — liberation, in which the soul finally merges back into its creator. He must teach jeevan mukti — liberation while still living, in which the soul becomes free from karmic bondage even while remaining in the body.

The Knowledge of the Supreme

Fifth, and most importantly, a Guru must give the knowledge of Paramatma — the Supreme Soul. He must point to that ultimate source — the Almighty Authority — and show the seeker how to connect with Him directly. He must finally teach how the soul will return to Paramdham — the supreme abode.

The Guru as a Bridge

This is the inner truth of Guruship. “Guru ek bridge banata hai atma aur paramatma ke beech mein.” A Guru is a bridge between the soul and the Supreme. He stands between them — not to hold the soul to himself, but to carry the soul across.

Bapuji says it directly: a real Guru’s work begins with the soul and ends with the Supreme. The moment the soul has been connected to the Almighty Authority, the Guru’s work is complete. He does not seek to remain at the centre of the disciple’s attention. He points beyond himself.

♦ “Sachha guru tumhe atma se paramatma tak le jaaye, apne tak rok kar nahi.”

“The true Guru leads you from the soul to the Supreme; he does not hold you at himself.”

This is the test. A Guru who keeps the disciple bound to himself, who allows worship to settle around his own person, who does not finally point to the Supreme — he is incomplete. The bridge has stopped halfway.

Bapuji adds with deep honesty: in all his decades of searching, in all the philosophies he studied from his childhood, he did not find such a Guru on Earth. That is why he turned inward — became established in atma swaroop, focused on the formless Almighty Authority, and meditated for many years. Then, from his own soul itself, the knowledge of anant koti brahmand, galaxies, universes, and multiverses began to emerge. This is the path he now opens for every sincere seeker.

Chapter Four

Why Gurus Come to Earth from Higher Lokas

To understand why so many different Gurus, traditions, sects, and paths exist on Earth, one must understand where they come from. Bapuji's answer is precise. Most of the great spiritual teachers, founders of sampradayas, and dharma gurus who have appeared on Earth have descended from the higher lokas of the subtle world.

The Higher Lokas and the Souls Who Descend

Above the Earth, layer upon layer, lie the higher dimensions. Bhuvvarloka, Swargaloka, Maharloka, Janaloka, Tapaloka — and above these, even higher abodes within the solar system. In Mahalok and above, great rishis and munis reside. These are highly evolved souls who have devoted long lifetimes to spiritual realisation.

Bapuji says that many such souls, looking down upon the suffering of human beings on Earth, feel a deep wish to help. They want to come down, take a human birth, give knowledge, and uplift humanity. These souls descend as Gurus, as founders of paths, sometimes even as incarnations and divine messengers.

Why Each Guru Gives Only What He Has Seen

Here lies a critical point. A Guru who has descended from Swargaloka can teach only up to Swargaloka. A Guru who has descended from Mahalok can teach up to Mahalok. A Guru who comes from Janaloka can give the knowledge of Janaloka. Each soul carries the knowledge of the level from which it has come — and not beyond.

This is why so many religions and sects each give a partial picture of reality. Each one is true within its own scope. None is the complete picture. The Shiv panthi speaks of Shiva. The Vaishnav panthi speaks of Vishnu. Each tradition has its own deity, its own mantra, its own scripture — and each leads, at best, only as high as the dimension from which its founder came.

The Vastness Beyond What Any Founder Has Seen

Bapuji reminds the seeker that our solar system itself is unimaginably vast. Above it lies our galaxy. Above that lies our universe. And far above the universe lie multiverses, and beyond the multiverses lie creations of behad — the limitless. The knowledge of these higher realms has never been written in any scripture. It has never been given by any founder of a sect. It exists, but it has been beyond the vision of those who have come down from the subtle world.

This is the reason, Bapuji explains, that no traditional Guru can give the highest knowledge. They simply have not seen what lies beyond their own home dimension. Their knowledge is limited by their own spiritual reach. They will give what they have. They cannot give what they have not realised.

Why High-Quality Souls Feel Restless on Earth

Now Bapuji turns to the seeker himself. The soul who is searching for a Guru is not searching by accident. If a soul comes from a high dimension — from Mahalok, from Janalok, from Tapalok, from Brahmapuri or even higher — such a soul will never feel at home in this Earth-realm. Worldly happiness will not satisfy it. Even the most beautiful relationships and successes will leave it hungry.

Such a soul instinctively searches for knowledge. From childhood it asks deeper questions. From childhood it feels something is missing. As it grows, it studies scripture, it explores philosophies, it tries different Gurus and different paths — because it is trying to return to its own home. Bapuji says clearly: only the soul that has come from behad ki kala — the limitless creation — will ultimately not settle for any partial teaching. Such souls keep searching until they find the highest truth.

♦ “Atma jaha se aayi hai, wahi uska sukoon hai.”

“The soul’s peace lies only in the place from which it has actually come.”

Chapter Five

The Limit of Every Guru — He Can Only Give What He Has Realised

This is one of the most important teachings in Bapuji's entire discourse on the Guru. Stated simply: A Guru can give only what he himself has realised. Nothing more.

Bapuji says: "Guru ke paas jitna gyan hoga, utna hi tumhe dega, isse aage ka gyan nahi dega." Whatever knowledge the Guru possesses, that much he will give — not a drop more.

Why This Truth is Often Overlooked

Most seekers assume that once they have found a Guru, their entire spiritual journey is taken care of. They believe that whatever knowledge they need will somehow flow through the Guru's grace. Bapuji gently corrects this assumption. Grace does not invent knowledge that the Guru does not possess. Grace can transmit only what is actually present in the Guru's own realisation.

If the Guru has realised the path to Swargaloka, he can lead the disciple to Swargaloka. If the Guru has realised the path to Brahmapuri, he can lead the disciple to Brahmapuri. But if the Guru has not himself reached the Almighty Authority, he cannot deliver the disciple to that destination — no matter how sincere, how powerful, how respected he may be.

The Example of Swami Vivekananda

Bapuji often gives the example of Ramakrishna Paramhansa and Swami Vivekananda. Ramakrishna Paramhansa was a great soul. He worshipped Mahakali. He used to converse with her in deep states of meditation. He taught Vivekananda how to worship Mahakali, and Vivekananda himself spoke with Mahakali. So far, this is what the Guru could give — and the Guru gave it fully.

But beyond Mahakali, Ramakrishna himself had not reached. The knowledge of the atma and the Paramatma beyond Mahakali was not in his realisation. So Vivekananda, even after receiving everything his Guru had, kept reading other philosophies. He studied further. He grew further on his own. Bapuji says clearly: “Vivekananda dheere dheere aur bhi philosophy padhe, unhone bahut philosophy padhi.” Vivekananda gradually read many more philosophies. Why? Because his own Guru, however great, had a limit. Beyond that limit, Vivekananda had to walk himself.

The Disciple Must Walk His Own Final Steps

This brings Bapuji to a deep principle. A Guru can give the seeker a strong beginning. He can give the foundation. He can even lift the disciple to whatever height he himself has reached. But the final steps — the highest realisation — must be walked by the soul itself.

It is like school and college. From kindergarten through college, teachers help. They explain, they guide, they correct. But when a person finally does his PhD, no teacher does the original research for him. He sits alone with his subject. He thinks. He explores. He discovers. The teacher's role becomes only to occasionally check the work. The real labour is the seeker's own.

So it is on the spiritual path. Bapuji says: “Apna khud hi atma apna bhagya banaye aur karmon ko khatam kare aur waapis apne original swaroop ko jaane.” The soul itself must build its destiny, finish its karmas, and return to its own original form.

Free Will and the Responsibility of the Seeker

This also means that free will never leaves the seeker. Even after taking a Guru, the seeker remains responsible for his own transformation. The Guru cannot do the work in his place. The Guru gives knowledge; the seeker must live it. The Guru opens a door; the seeker must walk through. The Guru points at the Supreme; the seeker must turn his own heart toward Him.

This is why Bapuji does not encourage spiritual dependency. A relationship with a Guru in which the disciple gives up his own discernment, surrenders his own enquiry, and waits for the Guru to do everything — such a relationship will keep the soul stuck. The disciple must remain active, intelligent, and sincere in his own inner work.

♦ “Gyan guru de sakta hai, anubhuti tumhe khud karni padti hai.”

“A Guru can give you knowledge; the realisation you must live yourself.”

The seeker who internalises this teaching gains the right relationship with every teacher he meets. He takes what he is given, with gratitude. He does not pretend that what he has been given is the whole. He keeps moving forward until he reaches the source itself.

Chapter Six

Why Seekers Wander from One Guru to Another

Bapuji often meets seekers who say, “I have made thirteen Gurus in my life. None of them gave me what I was looking for.” Others say they have been to four, five, six teachers. Bapuji listens patiently. He does not condemn the wandering. He understands why it happens — and in fact, he says, in many cases the wandering is a sign of a good soul.

Two Kinds of Seekers

Bapuji divides seekers broadly into two categories. The first kind is the soul of low category — a soul that has not yet developed inner power. Such a soul will accept whatever Guru it first meets, bind itself to him with full devotion, and remain there for life. It will not question. It will not compare. It will simply settle, often out of fear of being disloyal.

The second kind is the soul of high category — a behad soul, a soul with deep spiritual capacity. Such a soul cannot settle for partial answers. It will visit one teacher, learn what is offered, and then move on if its inner thirst is not satisfied. It will compare. It will examine. It will keep searching until it finds the highest truth.

Why Wandering is Not Always a Failure

Bapuji says clearly: the high-quality soul that keeps moving from teacher to teacher is not unstable. It is awake. It refuses to be tied down to a path that cannot take it to its true home. The very fact that it cannot rest with partial knowledge is itself evidence of its higher origin.

Many such seekers feel guilty about leaving a Guru. Society tells them that loyalty to one teacher is a virtue. Some inherited traditions even teach that leaving a Guru is a kind of betrayal. Bapuji removes this guilt. He says: the soul's ultimate loyalty is not to any human teacher; it is to the Supreme. If a Guru cannot lead the soul to the Supreme, the soul is right to keep searching.

Why the Trap of 'My Guru is the Only Guru' is Dangerous

On the other side stands a different danger. Some seekers, having accepted one Guru, then close their hearts to every other teaching. They believe: "My Guru is the only real one. Everyone else is wrong." They argue. They defend. They fight.

Bapuji says that this attitude does not serve the soul. It freezes the soul's growth at whatever level the chosen Guru happens to have reached. If that level is high, the soul will grow that far and stop. If that level is partial, the soul will inherit those limitations and not be able to see beyond them. Either way, sectarian loyalty becomes a wall.

The Right Spirit of Wandering

There is a difference between unstable wandering and intelligent searching. Unstable wandering is restless, dissatisfied, often emotional — moving from teacher to teacher hoping for some quick experience. Intelligent searching is calm, knowledge-based, and discerning — moving forward only when the soul recognises that more depth is needed.

Bapuji encourages every sincere soul to keep its eyes open. Listen to one Guru, then to another. Compare what is said. See which teaching leads to the soul itself, and which leads only to a deity, a mantra, or a personality. See which Guru speaks of the Almighty Authority and which Guru stops short at his own form. The seeker's discernment must always remain active.

♦ “Uchh atma kabhi ek aadhi sachhai par santusht nahi rehti.”

“A high-quality soul is never satisfied with a half-truth.”

In this way, wandering itself, when guided by knowledge, becomes a part of the soul's growth. It is not failure. It is the natural movement of a soul that refuses to stop until it has reached its real source.

Chapter Seven

The Quality of the Soul Decides the Quality of the Guru

There is a deeper principle behind why souls find different Gurus. Bapuji explains it in terms of the theory of karma. Whatever a soul receives in life — family, relationships, profession, even its Guru — comes according to its accumulated karma and its inner capacity. Just as a soul attracts the parents, the body, and the surroundings it receives, it also attracts the kind of spiritual guide it meets.

Bapuji says: “Har koi ko jo guru milta hai, apne karmon ke hisaab kitaab se milta hai.” Whatever Guru a soul meets, it meets him in accordance with the soul’s own karmic record.

Why Souls Naturally Pair With Their Level

A soul does not, in most cases, leap above its natural level. A soul drawn to devotion of a particular deity will, in this lifetime, find a teacher of that path. A soul drawn to ritual will find a teacher of ritual. A soul restless for ultimate knowledge will, sooner or later, find a path of gyan. The Guru is, in a sense, a mirror of the soul’s own inner level.

This is why two seekers can sit before the same teacher and receive two completely different things. One soul receives only words. Another soul receives a doorway. The teacher is the same; the soul is different. What is received depends on what the soul itself can absorb.

Behad Souls and Their Special Restlessness

Bapuji draws particular attention to the behad ki atma — the souls of the limitless dimensions. According to him there are approximately eighteen lakh such souls currently caught in this earthly life — nine lakh purush and nine lakh prakriti. These souls did not originate within our solar system, our galaxy, or even our universe. They came from far higher dimensions — from creations of two hundred, five hundred, thousands, even crores of kala.

Such souls, having descended into a human body, feel the deepest restlessness on Earth. No mantra of one deity satisfies them. No ritual binds them. No sampradaya can hold them. Bapuji says: “Aisi atmaayein gyan dhundhti rahegi, gyan dhundhti dhundhti hamare paas aayegi.” Such souls go on searching for knowledge until, eventually, they arrive at the highest truth.

The Lower-Category Soul and Its Comfort with Limits

In contrast, the lower-category soul finds its comfort in a single small framework. It clings to one Guru, one mantra, one image. It does not feel the need to explore further. It receives some peace, takes some rituals, and remains within that circle for an entire lifetime — and often for many lifetimes.

Bapuji does not condemn such souls. They are at their natural level. But he is honest: such a soul, in this lifetime, will not break the cycle of birth and death. It will gain some merit. It will go to a moderately higher dimension after death. It will return again to a human form. The cycle will repeat.

Spiritual Maturity Creates Discrimination

As a soul matures through its lives, its capacity for discrimination grows. The sanskar of seeking deepens. The soul begins to ask harder questions. It is no longer satisfied with a Guru who simply gives blessings. It wants to understand. It wants to know.

This is why Bapuji calls this age the age of knowledge-based spirituality. The souls now arriving on Earth, especially the high-category souls, demand more than ritual. They demand truth. The path of knowledge — the path of understanding what one is, where one comes from, where one must go — is now the natural path for them.

♦ “Atma ki sthithi badalti hai, toh uska guru bhi badal jaata hai.”

“When the soul’s level changes, the Guru it meets also changes.”

The seeker should not worry, then, if his path of guidance has changed across his life. Each Guru met was met for a reason. Each step was a step the soul could take at that time. What matters now is to keep moving forward until the highest connection — direct connection with the Almighty Authority — is established.

Chapter Eight

The Modern Age — Knowledge, the Internet, and the Wider Search

Every age has its own gifts. Bapuji often points out that the present age, with all its difficulties, also has one extraordinary gift: knowledge is now accessible to everyone. Whatever the limitations of the digital world, this much is true — a sincere seeker today is no longer restricted to whichever Guru happens to live in his town.

The Internet as a Witness, Not a Master

Bapuji says: “Aaj toh tumhare paas internet pe zamana hai, internet par search karo.” Today you have an age of the internet — search on it. Listen to all the teachers. Hear what each one says. Then think for yourself: which of these teachings actually leads the soul home?

Bapuji is not suggesting that the internet itself is a Guru. He is saying that in this age, the internet has become a witness — a place where every teaching, every tradition, every philosophy can be examined side by side. The seeker no longer needs to take only what is placed before him. He can compare. He can study. He can evaluate.

How Modern Seekers Should Evaluate Spiritual Teachers

Bapuji gives plain guidance on how to evaluate. The seeker should look for the teacher who speaks most clearly of two things: the soul, and the Supreme Soul. Beyond that, the teacher should speak of the entire world-drama — how creation came into being, why it exists, where it is going. He should be able to point to the seeker’s own origin and destination.

Bapuji says: “Sabse zyada gyan atma aur parmatma ka hai. Aur poora world drama kaise bana, kyon bana, kaise — uska gyan dene wala ho.” The greatest knowledge is the knowledge of the soul and the Supreme — and beyond that, the knowledge of how the world-drama was formed, why it was formed, and how it unfolds. The Guru who can give all of this is the one worth searching for.

Why Blind Following is Dangerous

Even with knowledge so widely available, Bapuji warns against blind acceptance. The internet itself is a mixed field. There are sincere voices and there are false voices. There are deep teachings and there is empty noise. Without inner discernment, the seeker can be misled just as easily online as offline.

Many people, having seen a single video or read a single article, accept its message wholesale. They take that teacher as their final authority. They stop listening to anything else. This, Bapuji says, is no different from the old blind devotion — only now it happens through screens. The seeker must keep listening, keep comparing, keep verifying with his own discernment.

Why a Sincere Soul Eventually Reaches the Truth

The good news is that the soul’s sincerity itself is a guide. A soul that genuinely wants the highest truth, that does not stop at half-answers, will keep moving. Even through false trails, it will keep correcting course. Eventually, Bapuji says, such a soul finds its way. The deeper teachings come into its view. The voices that speak of behad gyan — the knowledge of the limitless — begin to reach it.

This is why Bapuji repeatedly urges the seeker: do not stop. Do not settle. Do not accept a partial answer as the final one. The world has changed enough that the highest knowledge is now reachable. The seeker only needs to remain sincere and patient.

♦ “Internet par bhi gyan hai, par viveek tumhara hi rahega.”

“Even on the internet there is knowledge — but the discernment will always be your own.”

Chapter Nine

Soul-Consciousness and Direct Connection with the Almighty Authority

At this point in his teaching, Bapuji turns from the question of finding a Guru to the question of what the seeker must actually do. The answer is the same in every age, no matter who one's teacher may be. The answer is: become soul-conscious, and connect directly with the Almighty Authority.

The Story of Bapuji's Own Search

Bapuji often shares his own search to illustrate this. He says he has seen much of the world. From childhood, he studied many philosophies — Indian, foreign, ancient, modern. He looked for a Guru who could give what he describes as the full knowledge of soul and Supreme. Such a Guru, he says with quiet honesty, he did not find.

So he turned inward. He became established in atma swaroop — in the soul's own original form. He meditated, year after year, on the highest formless Almighty Authority. And then, gradually, knowledge began to emerge within him — the knowledge of the entire creation, of anant koti brahmand, of galaxies, universes, and multiverses. It came from within the soul itself, made possible by direct connection with the highest source.

Soul-Form is the Foundation

Bapuji says clearly: the seeker who wishes to walk the highest path must first stabilise in atma swaroop. This is not difficult to begin. The seeker simply needs to remember:

“I am not this body. I am a point of conscious light. I am a soul.” The more this remembrance is held, the more the inner identity shifts away from the body and into the soul itself.

This shift cannot be replaced by anything. No mantra, no ritual, no ceremony does the same work. Only the actual experience of being a soul opens the doorway for the higher connection that follows.

Connection with the Almighty Authority

Once the soul has tasted its own form, Bapuji says, it must turn that awareness toward the Almighty Authority. Not toward Shiva, who is the creator of one solar system. Not toward Maha Shiv, who governs a galaxy. Not even toward Param Maha Shiv, who governs a universe. Beyond all these stands the formless, supreme Almighty Authority — the ultimate source of every brahmand, of every multiverse, and of every behad creation.

Bapuji speaks of Him in many ways. He calls Him Paramshanti — Supreme Peace. He says He is “Saare jahaan ka Noor” — the Light of all worlds, as the Muslims say. He is “Parbrahm Parmeshwar” of the Hindu seers. Across religions the same source is described under different names. The seeker must learn to recognise Him beyond all names — as the single, formless source of all power and all peace.

Yog — The Bridge of Remembrance

The bridge between the soul and the Almighty Authority is yog. Bapuji uses this word in its original meaning: not bodily postures, but inner connection. Yog is when the soul, after acquiring behad gyan, turns its full attention toward its creator with deep love and momentarily forgets the physical world. In that state, energy flows. The soul becomes charged.

Bapuji describes the power of this connection with great force. “Almighty Authority ko pakdo na. Power house jo hai.” Hold on to the Almighty Authority — He is the powerhouse. The seeker who is connected to a human healer or a limited teacher will receive only what they have. The seeker who is connected to the powerhouse itself will receive what cannot be measured.

Why the Soul Needs Power, Not Only Inspiration

Bapuji is careful to point out the difference between inspiration and power. Inspiration moves the mind for a few minutes. Power transforms the soul. Many teachings give beautiful inspiration but no power. The seeker leaves the satsang feeling good and returns to old habits within a day. This, Bapuji says, is not what the seeker actually needs.

Power comes from one source only — direct connection with the Almighty Authority. As that connection deepens, the soul gains real energy. Vikar — the inner negatives — begin to dissolve. Sanskar begins to transform. The cycle of birth and death loosens its grip. Eventually, Bapuji says, the seeker becomes capable of going to Paramdham itself — the supreme abode.

♦ “Tumhe power chahiye, sirf inspiration nahi. Power sirf Almighty Authority dega.”

“What you need is power, not just inspiration. Real power comes only from the Almighty Authority.”

This, then, is Bapuji’s final answer to the question of the Guru. Even when a human Guru is helpful — and many are — the seeker must eventually move beyond him. The destination is not the Guru. The destination is the Supreme. The relationship is not with the bridge; it is with the far shore.

Chapter Ten

What Happens to a Guru After Death

After laying the foundation of what a Guru is meant to do, Bapuji turns to a question that troubles many seekers: “What happens to a Guru after he dies? Does his role continue? Can he still guide his disciples?” Bapuji answers these questions with great clarity, and he asks the seeker to listen carefully — because much of what is believed in this area is not true.

The Difference Between True Gurus of the Past and Many Gurus of Today

Bapuji first draws a distinction. In earlier times, the genuine Gurus of high spiritual stature did not remain attached to the Earth after their death. Their souls naturally ascended into the higher lokas — into Janalok, Tapalok, Mahalok, or higher. From there, they were not dragged back into Earth-affairs.

Bapuji says that such true Gurus often instructed their disciples in advance: “Mujhe yaad bhi na karna.” Do not even remember me after I am gone. Do not keep my photograph. Do not build my idol. Because, they explained, if you keep pulling me through your remembrance, I will have to descend from the higher lokas back toward the Earth to attend to you. They did not want their souls to be dragged downward.

Bapuji says this is the mark of a real Guru. The real Guru has given his knowledge during his lifetime, and once his work is done, he wishes the soul to ascend to its rightful higher world without disturbance. He does not encourage continued worship of his own form.

Most Gurus Today Remain in the Subtle World

In the present age, Bapuji says, the situation is very different. Most of today's Gurus, after their death, do not ascend into the higher lokas at all. Their souls remain in the subtle world close to the Earth — wandering, sometimes near their old ashrams, sometimes drawn back by the prayers and remembrance of their followers.

Why? Because they themselves did not have the higher knowledge or the inner power to ascend. Just as the souls of Gandhi, of various political leaders, of various sect-founders whose statues stand across this world — Bapuji says these souls, in many cases, continue to wander in the sukshm jagat. They are bound by the very devotion their followers continue to offer them.

Why This Matters for the Disciple

This is not a minor point. If a disciple believes that his departed Guru is now resting in some divine high abode, and prays to him as if to God, while in fact the Guru's soul is still in the subtle world close to the Earth, the disciple is not connecting to what he thinks he is connecting to. He may receive some help — but he is receiving it from a subtle-world soul, not from the Supreme. And subtle-world souls have their own limits, their own desires, and their own karmic debts.

Bapuji says this honestly: "Hum to bhoot puja kehte hain." We call such worship of departed beings a kind of ghost-worship — not in any abusive sense, but in the precise spiritual sense that a soul still in the subtle realm cannot give what the Supreme can give.

The Real Help Comes From Above, Not From the Subtle

This is why Bapuji repeatedly turns the seeker back to the Almighty Authority. Whatever help one wishes for — strength, knowledge, guidance, peace — the seeker should seek it from the highest source, not from a soul that is itself wandering. The Almighty Authority alone is unaffected by death, by karma, by any limitation. He is the eternal powerhouse.

♦ “Asli guru kabhi apni murti pujuwane ko nahi kehta.”

“A real Guru never asks for his own idol to be worshipped.”

The seeker should not blame himself if, until now, he has been offering devotion in the wrong direction. The point is to understand clearly now, and to gently reorient one’s remembrance upward — toward the Supreme. Whatever genuine virtue has been received from any past teacher remains a blessing; it does not need to be lost. Only the direction of one’s deepest connection must be raised.

Chapter Eleven

Image-Worship of Departed Gurus and the Subtle World

Bapuji extends the discussion of post-death Gurus into one of the most delicate topics of our age: the worship of images, statues, and photographs of departed teachers. He treats this subject with care, but he does not hide the truth.

Why Real Gurus Did Not Encourage Image-Worship

Bapuji says again: real Gurus, in earlier ages, instructed their disciples explicitly not to keep their images. They did not want their followers to build temples around their own form. They knew that doing so would tie the seeker — and themselves — to the Earth-realm. A genuine Guru wants his disciple to look beyond him, not at him.

This is one of the most powerful tests of a real Guru, Bapuji says. Does he want to be worshipped? Or does he want his disciples to focus on the Supreme? Most teachers fail this test silently. A few pass it with quiet dignity. The seeker should observe carefully.

What Happens When an Image is Worshipped

When followers create an idol or a photograph of a departed Guru and worship it with sincere remembrance, that remembrance is not lost. It travels. Bapuji says that whenever a soul of a deceased teacher is consistently remembered with offerings and prayers, that soul is drawn back toward the subtle world close to the Earth, where it remains accessible to the worshippers.

This is true not only of Gurus. Bapuji speaks of the same pattern with political leaders, with founders of movements, with revered figures of every kind whose statues are placed across cities and homes. Whenever and wherever such statues are worshipped, those souls remain caught in the three subtle elements close to the Earth, instead of rising freely to their natural higher dimensions.

Bapuji says: “Aap jin jin ki murti pooja kar rahe hain, woh saare ke saare sukshma jagat mein ghoom rahe hain.” All those whose idols you are worshipping are circulating in the subtle world.

Why Some Followers Feel Genuine Connection

It is true that many followers feel a real sense of connection when they pray before such an image. Some have visions. Some receive messages. Some are even helped at moments of difficulty. Bapuji does not deny these experiences. He explains them honestly: the departed Guru's soul, still present in the subtle realm, can indeed respond — within the limits of its own subtle-world capacity.

But, Bapuji adds, this is not the highest help. It is help from a limited source. It cannot lift the seeker into Paramdham. It cannot dissolve the deepest karmic bondage. For that, only the Almighty Authority is sufficient. The subtle-world Guru can offer comfort; only the Supreme can offer real liberation.

The Quiet Reorientation

Bapuji is gentle here. He does not ask the seeker to abruptly throw away images or break with one's old devotions. He asks the seeker to understand. Once understanding is clear, the seeker's heart naturally turns toward higher things. The image may remain, but the seeker's deepest remembrance moves elsewhere — to the formless Almighty Authority, the supreme source of all light.

In time, the inner connection ripens. The subtle attachment to the image quietly loosens. The seeker enters into a freer, more powerful relationship with the Supreme. This is the natural growth Bapuji is pointing toward.

♦ “Jo guru tumhe Paramdham nahi le ja sakta, uski murti tumhe rok degi.”

“A Guru who cannot take you to Paramdham — his very image will end up holding you back.”

Chapter Twelve

The Subtle World Has Its Own Gurus — The Layers, the Ashrams, and the Lineages

The earlier chapters of this book have shown that many gurus, after death, do not ascend to higher lokas. Their souls remain in the subtle layer close to the earth, drawn by the prayers and remembrance of their disciples. From this it could easily be imagined that the sukshma jagat is only a confused belt of stranded souls and unanchored worshippers. But that is not the whole picture. Bapuji teaches that the sukshma jagat has its own order — its own layers, its own ashrams, and its own masters who instruct the souls who arrive there. Without this part of the picture, the disciple's understanding remains incomplete.

The Earth's Gravity Belt

Around the earth, Bapuji says, the gravitational pull extends to about two hundred kilometres. Within this two-hundred-kilometre layer, the souls of those who left the body without the appropriate inner clearing are gathered. These are mayavi atmas — souls still bound to maya, still full of unfulfilled longing, still attached to the home and to the relations they left behind.

Their subtle bodies, made of three subtle tattvas, carry a heaviness — the heaviness of the vayu tattva, weighed down by craving. The earth's gravity holds upon every element, and it holds upon the vayu of the subtle body. To cross the two hundred kilometres of earth's gravity field requires effort. It is not achieved automatically. Until that effort has been made, the soul wanders between the home, the temple of its tradition, and the few places it has known.

How the First Boundary is Crossed

How does a soul cross this first layer? It must perform purushartha — spiritual effort. It must hear, in some way, the instruction: forget the body, forget all the bodily relationships. It must turn its longing inward and form one strong intention — the wish to deep dive into the supreme subtle world of creation.

When that wish is strong enough, and the cravings of the human life have fallen away, a guru of the subtle world becomes available, and through that guru's assistance the soul crosses the boundary. This is the first ascent: from the surface of the earth to two hundred kilometres.

The Subsequent Layers

Beyond two hundred kilometres lies the next layer, extending to five hundred kilometres. Here are the ashrams and the world of austerities (tapasya) of the sukshma jagat. Here many sadhus and saints conduct their disciplines, and they assist the souls who have just arrived to perfect their tapasya. The soul that enters this layer is taught further; it remains for as long as it needs; it gathers strength.

From five hundred kilometres there is a further layer — to one thousand kilometres. From one thousand to two thousand. The layers grow as one rises. Then ten thousand kilometres. Then a hundred thousand kilometres. At every layer there are guides, ashrams, and instructions. At each layer the soul is told something more, for gaining more power in soul. The soul that wishes to keep rising is given the means to keep rising.

The First Warning of the Subtle Masters

There is one warning that recurs in every layer. The soul that has begun to rise must not look downward. If it looks down toward the maya it has left, the maya pulls it back. The looking-down is itself the descent. The mind moves first; the soul follows. Therefore, in every layer, the masters say the same thing: do not remember the world you have left. Hold the orientation upward, and the ascent continues.

Every Tradition Has Its Place

Bapuji is asked whether the masters in these subtle layers belong only to one tradition. He answers that this is not the case. In the lower layers — up to roughly one million kilometres — there are ashrams of every faith. There are houses of worship of every tradition that exists upon the earth, present also in the subtle realm. They have all extended themselves into this region, and the souls of each tradition gather in their respective places after the body is shed.

This is why, Bapuji says, the rule of ant mati so gati holds with precision. The mind of the dying person turns toward what it has held most strongly in life, and the souls of that same tradition in the subtle world come to receive the dying person. A soul that held to its guru receives the welcome of that guru's subtle ashram. A soul that held to the founding teacher of its own tradition receives the welcome of that teacher's subtle counterpart. The geography of the lower subtle layers mirrors, almost exactly, the geography of belief on the surface of the earth.

From Sixteen Crore Kilometres Outward

Bapuji extends the measurement further. From the sun, the earth is about fifteen crore kilometres distant. Adding this to the earth's own outward range, the lower belt of the sukshma jagat extends in some sense to sixteen crore kilometres around the sun. Within this immense radius, every ashram of the gross world has its corresponding ashram in the subtle realm.

And here Bapuji places a teaching that the disciple must carefully receive: every guru on earth came, in the natural ordering, from a subtle ashram of the same lineage. They descend to take birth on earth, and the lineage above continues alongside the lineage below.

The Dharmanaths and the Welcoming Figures

The welcoming subtle figures who come to receive a dying soul belong to these lower subtle layers. Each tradition on the surface of the earth has its dharmanath — its chief or master — in the corresponding subtle ashram. Different traditions of the world describe such welcoming figures under various names, and each tradition's usage is respected. The teaching of Bapuji simply maps these welcomers to their corresponding subtle layers, without disturbing any tradition's own way of speaking of them.

How This Completes the Picture

With this teaching, the disciple's understanding becomes whole. The sukshma jagat is not only a belt of stranded gurus held by the prayers of disciples. It is also the layered ashram-world from which earth gurus, in the natural ordering, originally descended, and to which sincere ascending souls are received and instructed.

The two pictures do not contradict each other. A guru of refined spiritual lineage descends from a subtle ashram, performs his work on earth, and after death, by the strength of his own purushartha, may rise once again through these layers — receiving instruction at each. A guru without that strength, in the present age, often remains in the lowest belt, held there by the longings of his disciples.

The Limit That Even the Subtle Masters Cannot Cross

Yet the central teaching of this book remains untouched, and now becomes even clearer. Every layer of the sukshma jagat — every ashram, every dharmanath, every welcoming master — still belongs to the layered subtle realm. The masters of these layers can take a sincere soul through their own region, ashram by ashram. They can grant instruction. They can grant comfort.

They cannot, by themselves, deliver the soul to the Almighty Authority. For that, the connection of atma swaroop — the direct connection with the Supreme — alone is sufficient.

The seeker who has understood this no longer mistakes the welcome of a subtle ashram for the final home. He honours the ascent the subtle masters offer; he does not stop there. His purushartha continues until the param prakash (the supreme divine light) is reached, and the soul, at last, returns to its own original source.

Chapter Thirteen

Can a Departed Guru Curse or Punish a Disciple?

One of the most common fears that holds seekers back from leaving a Guru is the fear of being cursed. People worry, “If I leave the Guru who initiated me, will he punish me from the subtle world? Will he send misfortune into my life?” Bapuji addresses this directly and removes the fear.

Why Most Departed Gurus Have No Such Power

Bapuji says plainly: if a Guru threatens to curse a disciple from the subtle world, then that very Guru’s soul does not have spiritual power. A real Guru, with real inner power, would never curse a sincere seeker. And a Guru who tries to curse, when his own soul lacks power, cannot make any curse work.

In Bapuji’s words: “Agar shraap deta hai toh uski atma mein shakti nahi hai. Isliye shraap lagega bhi nahi.” If he curses, it means his soul lacks power — and therefore the curse will not even take effect.

Curses and blessings function according to the spiritual power of the one who pronounces them. A soul without inner power can produce neither blessings of real weight nor curses of real weight. Whatever it expresses, in either direction, is essentially weightless in the higher order of things. The seeker may safely set such fears aside.

The Real Reason Disciples Sometimes Suffer After Leaving

Sometimes a disciple who leaves a Guru experiences difficulty in his life afterward — health troubles, emotional upheaval, fear, instability. He may then think, “My Guru must be punishing me.” Bapuji explains that this is rarely a curse. More often, it is the disciple’s own subconscious fear creating disturbance, or it is the natural turbulence of a soul that has decided to walk a new path.

Sometimes also there is no negative cause at all — only the ordinary turbulence of life. Once the seeker understands clearly that no curse-mechanism is at work, the inner pressure lifts on its own, and the disturbances tend to fade.

Why Spiritual Power Comes From Knowledge, Not Threat

Real spiritual power, Bapuji teaches, never expresses itself through threats. A truly powerful soul does not need to dominate, intimidate, or punish. Its power flows naturally as blessing, as light, as quiet wisdom. The very presence of fear-based language in a spiritual relationship — “if you leave me, you will suffer” — is itself a sign that the relationship is not at the highest level.

This applies equally to living teachers. If a Guru’s authority is held in place by fear, then his authority is already broken. He may have followers, he may have crowds, but the inner power is not there. Real authority needs no threat.

Dream Visions and Their True Nature

Some disciples report that a departed Guru has appeared to them in a dream — sometimes giving instructions, sometimes warnings. Bapuji acknowledges that this can happen. The subtle-world soul of a departed Guru can indeed enter a dream and communicate. But he warns the seeker not to take such dreams as final authority.

A dream-vision is a subtle experience, not a supreme one. The Guru who appears in the dream is still a soul of the subtle world. He has his own perspective, his own limits, and his own karmic load. To follow his instructions blindly is to be guided by a limited source rather than by the Almighty Authority. Bapuji says the seeker should listen with respect but should always verify any guidance against his own discernment and against the highest knowledge.

♦ “Shraap dene wali atma mein shakti nahi hoti. Shakti wali atma kabhi shraap nahi deti.”

“A soul that curses has no real power; a soul that has real power never curses.”

With this understanding, the seeker is free. He need not fear leaving a teacher whose work has been completed for him, nor a teacher whose teaching no longer serves his higher progress. The path of the soul belongs to the soul itself.

Chapter Fourteen

Mediums, Channels, and Post-Death Diksha

Another sensitive question Bapuji addresses is whether a departed Guru can continue to initiate disciples through a living medium. In some traditions, it is taught that after the master's death, his consciousness can enter a chosen instrument — usually a senior disciple — and that this instrument then gives initiation in the master's name.

Yes, It Can Happen — But Within Limits

Bapuji says honestly that this is indeed possible. A departed Guru, especially one who designated a successor before his death, can enter that successor's body and act through him to initiate new disciples. Bapuji says: “Kisi ke shareer mein pravesch karke guru jo unka nimitt banaya hua hai, woh deeksha de sakta hai.” Through the body of a chosen instrument, the Guru can indeed give diksha.

But Bapuji is also clear about the limits. Even when this happens, the Guru entering through the medium is the same soul he was when alive — with the same level of inner power and the same level of realised knowledge. He cannot give what he himself never realised. So although the form of the transmission may continue, the spiritual ceiling remains the same as the founder's own ceiling.

The Disciple's Test Remains the Same

The seeker must therefore apply the same test to a post-death lineage as to any living Guru. Does the lineage teach the seeker to know himself as a soul? Does it teach him the theory of karma? Does it teach him jeevan mukti? Does it lead him to the Almighty Authority? If yes, it is real. If it merely binds him to the memory of the founder, it is partial.

Bapuji does not ask the seeker to discard such lineages outright. He asks the seeker to evaluate them against the same standard he would apply to any other spiritual relationship. If the lineage has the highest knowledge in its inheritance, it can serve. If it does not, no ceremony or transmission can compensate for what is missing.

The Search for the Param Satguru

Bapuji introduces a phrase here: Param Satguru — the supreme true Guru. He is not speaking of any particular human being. He is speaking of the quality of Guruship that any seeker should look for. A Param Satguru is one who introduces the seeker to the Almighty Authority. One who gives the experience of atma swaroop. One who connects the seeker to the Supreme. Whether such a Guru is found in a body, in a tradition, in inner experience, or directly through the Supreme's own light — the form is less important than the substance.

In Bapuji's own teaching, the deepest Guru is the Almighty Authority Himself. When Bapuji is asked who his Guru is, he answers without hesitation: "Mera jo guru hai woh Almighty Authority hai, jo bahut anant multiverse se upar, anant koti brahmand se upar upar upar niraakar mein bhi hai, woh akari roop mein bhi hai. Woh mujhe poora gyan emerge karaate hain." The Almighty Authority — who is above all multiverses and creations, in formless as well as in subtle form — is the one who allows the full knowledge to emerge within him.

The Pattern for Every Seeker

This is the pattern Bapuji opens for every seeker. Wherever the journey may begin — with a family Guru, a tradition, a movement, or a lineage — the final connection must always rise to the highest source. Until that direct connection is established, the seeker continues to be carried by intermediaries. Once that direct connection is firm, no intermediary is needed any longer for the highest realisation.

♦ “Ant mein guru bhi tumhe Paramatma se hi jodne ke liye aaya tha.”

“In the end, even the Guru came only to connect you to the Supreme.”

Chapter Fifteen

Initiation, Mantras, and the Question of Money

Bapuji turns next to one of the most uncomfortable areas in modern spiritual life: initiation in exchange for money. He speaks of it without bitterness, but also without softening the truth.

Spiritual Knowledge Should Not Be Sold

Bapuji says that in our age many Gurus have made initiation into a paid service. There are fixed prices for mantras. There are fees for becoming a disciple. There are higher fees for higher levels of teaching. Bapuji says quietly: “Asli koi mantra bhi dene ki zaroorat nahi hai.” In truth, no special mantra needs to be given at all.

The principle he wants to anchor is this: real spiritual knowledge belongs to the soul of every seeker by birthright. It is not the personal property of any teacher. It cannot be bought, and it cannot be sold. The moment knowledge is placed behind a paywall, something essential has been lost — the very spirit of gyan daan maha daan, the giving of knowledge as the highest form of charity.

Why Many Mantras Are Limited

In ancient times, Bapuji says, mantras such as Om and Namo Buddhaya were given in their simplicity. Later, every sect began to invent its own mantra. There is a mantra of one deity, a mantra of another. There is a Ganesh mantra, a Vishnu mantra, a Lakshmi mantra, and on and on. Each of these has its own scope and its own limit.

Bapuji is honest: most of these mantras, in the present age, do not carry deep power. The very soul of the giver often does not have the strength to transmit a living charge through the syllables. So the seeker repeats the words but does not feel the transformation that the mantras once produced in earlier ages. Some peace may come; deep change does not.

Why Realisation Cannot Be Replaced by Ritual

Bapuji says clearly: no ritual replaces realisation. No initiation ceremony is a substitute for the seeker's own inner work. A mantra is a tool. An initiation is a beginning. But unless the seeker actually meditates, actually becomes atma swaroop, actually connects with the Almighty Authority, the ritual itself has not transformed him. Many people receive initiation and never again touch the inner experience the ritual was supposed to open.

This is why Bapuji urges every seeker to understand first, and only then to undertake any practice. Understand who you are. Understand who the Supreme is. Understand how karma works. Understand what mukti truly means. Once these things are clear, even simple practice carries great force. Without these things, the most elaborate ritual remains an external act.

The Real Initiation

The real initiation, Bapuji says, is the moment the soul first tastes its own form. The moment it experiences itself as light, as a soul, distinct from the body. That instant — when the seeker says, “I am not the body, I am a soul”, and means it from inside — is the genuine diksha. After that, the path opens of itself.

No money is required. No external master is required. Only sincerity, study, and the willingness to remain in inner remembrance for some time each day. Bapuji emphasises again and again that the highest realities are available to every sincere seeker. They have never been the monopoly of any human teacher.

♦ “Gyan bika nahi jaata. Gyan daan hota hai.”

“Knowledge is not for sale. Knowledge is given freely.”

Chapter Sixteen

False Gurus and the Modern Distortions of Spirituality

This is a chapter Bapuji speaks with great care, because he does not want to name individuals — but he also does not want sincere seekers to be misled. So he describes patterns. The patterns are visible enough that any honest observer can recognise them.

The Pattern of the Vast Following with Hollow Foundation

Bapuji speaks of teachers in our age who command vast followings, hold immense wealth, claim great spiritual attainment — and yet whose inner state, he says with quiet honesty, is hollow. He mentions that some such teachers own dozens of vehicles, multiple residences, even private aircraft, while preaching detachment to followers who live simply.

The contradiction itself is the test. A teacher whose lifestyle flatly contradicts his own teaching has already demonstrated which side he actually believes in. Bapuji is careful to add: wealth itself is not the marker. Many genuine sages have moved among kings. The marker is whether the lifestyle speaks of attachment or freedom.

How False Gurus Gather Such Followings

How do such teachers attract such crowds? Bapuji gives a direct answer. They are supported, often without realising it, by groups of souls in the subtle world who have their own desires — for attention, for celebration, for the chance to enter human bodies again through influence. These subtle groups push followers toward certain teachers because the activities the teacher arranges allow the subtle souls to act through the followers.

Group meditations that turn into mass dancing. Ecstatic states that follow group rituals. Channelling sessions in which “angels” are said to enter and dance through participants. Bapuji has witnessed and described all of these. He says, with steady clarity, that they are not holy. They are mass possession dressed in spiritual language.

The Delhi Episode Bapuji Recounts

Bapuji once recounted his own observation of a Delhi event led by a foreign teacher who claimed to invoke angels. Fifty serious-looking adults stood in a circle. The teacher began the invocation. Within minutes all fifty were dancing wildly, having lost their original identity entirely. They did not recognise themselves. The teacher claimed this was angel-contact and stress relief. Bapuji recognised it for what it was: bhuts — subtle entities — entering bodies that the participants had voluntarily emptied of self-awareness. After the event, the participants had no awareness of what had happened.

Bapuji teaches that this kind of teaching has spread widely in our age. It appears in many cultures and under many names. Stress relief through group ecstasy. Healing through invoked spirits. Awakening through chemical-assisted ceremonies. The patterns differ; the underlying mechanism is the same. The participant gives up self-awareness. Subtle entities enter. Effects appear that look spiritual but lead nowhere upward.

Forced Chakra Activation and Kundalini Awakening

There is also the modern fashion of chakra activation and kundalini awakening without proper foundation. Bapuji teaches: chakras open naturally when the soul has built genuine power through gyan and yog. Trying to force them open without that foundation can cause damage — physical, mental, and karmic. The soul that does not yet know itself should not be manipulating its energy centres.

Distance Healing and Group Vibration Circles

Bapuji has also commented on the modern phenomenon of distance healing — circles where one person, often through messaging groups or video calls, claims to send healing vibrations to many others. He says plainly: this does not work the way it is advertised. A person whose own atma is not yet pure cannot transmit purity to others.

What is in fact transmitted, in many such cases, is the sender's own residual negativity, dressed in spiritual language. The receiver feels something — sometimes positive at first because of the placebo of expectation, sometimes uneasy later when the actual energetic content settles in. Genuine healing, Bapuji says, requires the healer to be a soul of high power, in regular yog, working under the supervision of the Supreme. Such healers exist, but they are rare. Most who claim it are not.

How to Recognise a True Teacher

Bapuji's tests are simple and direct. They do not require any inside knowledge. They only require honest observation. Does the teacher emphasise the soul's own self-realisation, or does he make the seeker dependent on himself? Does he teach the soul to connect directly with the Almighty Authority, or does he place himself in between?

Does he live simply, with his wealth and lifestyle reflecting his teaching, or does he live in opulence that contradicts his words? Does he speak of behad gyan — the wider truth of brahmands and the Supreme — or only of localised devotion to one form?

And the deepest test of all: where does he point the seeker? The true teacher points the seeker beyond himself, toward the Supreme directly. The false teacher points the seeker toward his own greatness. The first sign of falseness is the building up of the teacher. The first sign of truth is the gentle dissolution of the teacher into the source they both share.

♦ “Jhootha guru tumhe apne paas rakhega.
Sachha guru tumhe Paramatma tak pahuncha dega.”

“A false Guru will keep you with himself. A true Guru will deliver you to the Supreme.”

Chapter Seventeen

Meditation, Subtle Voices, and Spiritual Disturbances

Bapuji is often asked about the strange experiences that arise during deep meditation — sounds of anklets, voices crying or shouting, the feeling that someone is in the room, smells of perfume or of decay, visions of figures. Many sincere meditators feel disturbed by these and wonder whether something is wrong with them.

Bapuji says: “Yeh bahut accha question hai.” This is a very good question. And then he explains, with calm clarity, what these experiences are and why they occur.

Why a Quiet Mind Becomes Sensitive

When a meditator remembers his Ishta Dev or sits in deep yog with the Supreme, his mind gradually grows still. As stillness deepens, the seeker enters states close to samadhi. The mind becomes completely calm. And in that calmness, something unexpected happens — the seeker becomes sensitive to the subtle world.

The subtle world is not far away. It is right here, occupying the same physical space we do, only at a finer level of vibration. Normally, the noise and movement of our ordinary mind keep us insulated from it. When the mind grows still, the insulation thins. We begin to perceive what was always there.

Why Subtle-World Souls Disturb Meditation

Bapuji explains that subtle-world souls have their own intentions. Some of them notice a meditator and try to disturb him — often because the very calmness of the meditator is unfamiliar or even unwelcome to them. A female subtle entity may create the sound of anklets, like ghungroos, falling to disturb the seeker's concentration. A wandering ghost may emit the sound of crying or shouting.

Some subtle souls are not hostile at all; they are simply in need. They sense that a meditator carries a small charge of spiritual power around him — what Bapuji calls a subtle aura of power — and they come seeking help. They cry, they shout, they try to convey their distress. They imagine that the yogi can rescue them in some way.

Then there are positive souls too. They may transmit beautiful fragrances toward the meditator. They may send sweet musical sounds, occasionally even the sounds of singing or dancing. Negative subtle entities, by contrast, transmit foul smells, ugly sounds, harsh visions. Bapuji says all of this is real — these are not hallucinations of a tired mind. They are genuine subtle-world contacts.

Why These Experiences Are Not Signs of Spiritual Advancement

Many seekers, when they begin to experience these phenomena, think they have made great spiritual progress. Bapuji gently corrects this. Subtle-world contact is not the same as connection with the Supreme. A soul may have many such experiences and still be very far from the Almighty Authority. These experiences only show that the mind has become calm enough to perceive the subtle. They are not, in themselves, the destination.

The destination is far higher. The destination is the soul's direct connection with the supreme source. The subtle world lies between the seeker and that destination, like a forest one must walk through. Some travellers stop in the forest, fascinated by its strange beauty or shaken by its strange noises. The wise traveller keeps walking.

How to Remain Undisturbed

Bapuji's practical guidance is direct. First, do not be afraid. These experiences cannot harm a soul that is established in atma swaroop and connected to the Almighty Authority. Fear itself is the only opening through which subtle entities can shake the seeker. With fear absent, they cannot do much.

Second, deepen the inner anchor. Increase the practice of soul-consciousness. Increase the remembrance of the Supreme. The greater the soul's own light, the less the subtle disturbances can touch it. Bapuji says that the seeker should continue meditation calmly, without engaging with any of these phenomena — neither indulging them nor running from them. They will, in time, fade on their own.

Third, do not accept dream-visits or in-meditation messages as commands. Even if a departed Guru appears, even if a deity seems to speak — the seeker should weigh what is said against his own discernment and against the wider knowledge of behad gyan. If it agrees with the highest truth, it can be considered. If it contradicts the highest truth, it should be quietly set aside.

♦ “Sukshm anubhuti gyan ki nishaani nahi hai. Almighty ka anubhav hi asli pragati hai.”

“Subtle experiences are not the sign of true progress. Real progress is the experience of the Almighty Himself.”

With these guidelines, even strange experiences become a gentle confirmation that the seeker is moving inward. They are stations along the way, not the destination. The destination remains the same — connection with the Almighty Authority, return to the soul's own home in Paramdham.

Chapter Eighteen

The Final Truth — Become Soul-Conscious, Connect with the Supreme

After everything he has said about the Guru, his role, his limits, his after-death state, the modern distortions, and the dangers and grace of this path, Bapuji always returns to one final teaching. It is the same teaching he gives to every seeker, no matter where the conversation began. It is the heart of his entire message.

The Single Instruction

The single instruction is this: become soul-conscious, and connect directly with the Almighty Authority.

Bapuji often quotes the Gita to support this. Lord Krishna himself, he says, is the Almighty Authority. And Krishna's own teaching to Arjuna was: "Tu mujhe deh aur deh ke sarv sambandh bhool kar atma swaroop ban. Mujh parmatma ko yaad kar. Toh main tere sarv paapon ka vinaash kar doonga." Forget the body and all bodily relations, become soul-conscious, remember Me — the Supreme — and I shall destroy all your sins.

This is the timeless instruction. It is older than any tradition and newer than any modern teaching. It is the same in every age. And it remains the most practical, most powerful, and most direct path the seeker can walk.

Why the Soul Needs the Powerhouse, Not a Battery

Bapuji repeats the image: the human Guru, however sincere, is at best a battery. He can give some charge. But the seeker who connects only with a battery will exhaust it sooner or later. The seeker who connects with the powerhouse will never lack energy. The powerhouse is the Almighty Authority — the controller of behad, the source of every multiverse, the Light of all worlds.

Why depend on a battery, Bapuji asks, when the powerhouse itself is open? Why settle for partial light when the supreme Light is available? Why wander among the subtle worlds when the soul's real home is so far above them?

The Practical Path for the Sincere Seeker

Bapuji's closing guidance to every seeker has three simple parts.

First, sit in knowledge. Listen to the teachings of behad gyan — the knowledge of the limitless. Understand the structure of creation, from this Earth up to Paramdham, up to multiverses, up to behad ki kala. Understand karma, mukti, jeevan mukti, Paramdham. Let this knowledge settle quietly in the soul.

Second, practise soul-consciousness. Throughout the day, throughout daily duties, return again and again to the inner remembrance: "I am not the body. I am a soul. I am a point of conscious light." This practice steadily strengthens the soul itself.

Third, sit in yog with the Almighty Authority. With the soul-form established, turn the inner gaze toward the formless supreme Light. Rest in that connection. Allow the soul to be charged. Allow karmic burdens to dissolve. Allow the journey toward Paramdham to begin.

The Seeker as Knower, Not Follower

Bapuji never wants the seeker to become merely a follower. He wants the seeker to become a knower. A follower repeats. A knower understands. A follower copies. A knower lives. A follower needs a master in every step. A knower has a relationship with the source itself.

The function of any true Guru — and of Bapuji himself in this work — is precisely to bring the seeker to that condition of inner knowing. Once the seeker becomes a knower, the relationship with the Supreme is direct, unmediated, and unbreakable. No after-death drama can disturb it. No false teacher can derail it. No subtle world phenomenon can confuse it. The soul stands on its own light and reaches steadily toward its own home.

The Final Word

With this, Bapuji leaves the seeker. The question of the Guru has been answered. The question of life after death of the Guru has been answered. The question of false teachers has been answered. The question of subtle disturbances has been answered. Beyond all questions, only one practice remains.

Become soul-conscious. Connect with the Almighty Authority. Hold that connection until the soul's own light is steady. Then, in due course, the soul will rise. It will pass through every subtle layer. It will reach its supreme abode. And in that arrival, the entire purpose of the Guru — every Guru, in every age — will be fulfilled.

♦ “Atma swaroop ban, Almighty Authority ko yaad kar. Bas, yahi raasta hai.”

“Become soul-conscious, remember the Almighty Authority. This alone is the path.”

Glossary

— Key terms used in this book —

Readers entirely new to Bapuji's teachings are encouraged to refer to this glossary as they read. Each term is presented with a short, accessible definition.

Atma — The soul; a point of conscious light, eternal and indestructible. The true self. Every human being is, in reality, a soul wearing a body.

Paramatma — The Supreme Soul; the creator of souls. The supreme source of light and power. In its highest form, the Almighty Authority of all creations.

Almighty Authority — The highest, formless supreme source of all multiverses and creations. The single ultimate power that lies above every Shiv, Maha Shiv, and Param Maha Shiv. Called Saare Jahaan ka Noor, Parbrahm, and many other names across traditions.

Atma Swaroop — The original form of the soul as a point of conscious light. The seeker who is established in atma swaroop has shifted his identity from the body to the soul itself.

Paramshanti — Supreme Peace. The original state of the soul when first created. The natural condition of a soul fully established in its incorporeal divine light.

Paramdham — The Supreme Abode. The highest dimension of creation in any solar system, where all is pure divine light. The home toward which every awakened soul travels.

Behad — The limitless, the boundless. Used to describe creations and dimensions far beyond what science or scripture has so far described.

Behad Gyan — The knowledge of the Supreme Father, the Almighty Authority, and His boundless infinite creation — including realms beyond the multiverse. The supreme knowledge that has not been written in any earlier scripture.

Behad Ki Atma — A soul constituted of param prakash and param maha tattva — a very powerful soul originating from the limitless dimensions of creation.

Had — Limited; the bounded dimensions of creation. Used in contrast with behad.

Guru — A spiritual instructor who shows the soul the path from darkness to enlightenment. In the highest sense, one who acts as a bridge from soul to the Supreme.

Param Satguru — The supreme true Guru. One who introduces the seeker to the Almighty Authority, gives the experience of atma swaroop, and connects the soul directly to the Supreme.

Gyan — Knowledge. In this work, specifically spiritual knowledge of the soul, the Supreme, and the structure of creation.

Gyan Marg — The path of knowledge. The path on which the soul realises the Supreme through understanding, study, and direct realisation.

Bhakti Marg — The path of devotion. The path on which the soul approaches its chosen deity through love, worship, song, and surrender.

Ishta Dev — One's chosen deity of devotion. The specific divine form to which a devotee turns throughout life.

Yog — Connection. The inner connection of the soul with the Almighty Authority through deep remembrance and love. Not bodily postures, but inner union.

Sankalp — Determination or thought generated by a soul. The power of the soul's mind; affirmation. A soul of high power can manifest through sankalp.

Sanskar — The character of a soul; the recorded impressions of past lives stored in the soul's causal body. The mind of a soul works according to its sanskar.

Karma — Action. Also, the universal principle by which thoughts, words, and deeds determine the future of the soul. The theory of karma explains why life unfolds the way it does.

Vikarm — Sin; wrong action committed by a soul, which creates karmic bondage.

Mukti — Liberation. The state in which a soul no longer exists as a separate entity in creation and dissolves into its creator.

Jeevan Mukti — Liberation while still living. A state in which the soul, while in the body, is free from all karmic bondage and rests in the blissful state of its creator.

Bhavatit — Beyond all feelings and emotions. A higher inner state in which the soul is not pulled by likes and dislikes.

Karmatit — Beyond karma. A soul that has fully transcended all karmic bondage and lies beyond the law of any karmic accounts in any plane of creation.

Gunatit / Nirgun — Beyond the three qualities of nature (satva, rajo, tamo). The state of pure soul-consciousness, in the soul's incorporeal form.

Brahmand — Solar system. The smaller cosmic unit governed by Shiva.

Maha Brahmand — Galaxy. Governed by Maha Shiv.

Param Maha Brahmand — Universe. Governed by Param Maha Shiv.

Anant Koti Brahmand — Innumerable solar systems and the vast creations through which the soul's journey extends.

Multiverse — A creation of 100 kala, containing innumerable universes. Far above our solar system, galaxy, and universe.

Loka — A layer or dimension of creation. Bhuloka is Earth; above it are Bhuvarka, Swargaloka (Heaven), Maharoka, Janaloka, Tapaloka, Brahmapuri, Vishnupuri, Shivruri, and finally Paramdham.

Sukshm Jagat — The subtle world. The realm of finer elements close to the Earth, where many wandering souls and subtle entities reside.

Karan Sharir — The causal body. The deeper subtle structure that holds the energy of the soul and records the karmic accounts of its journey.

Kala — A unit of spiritual power. The measure of capacity in a creator soul. Krishna is said to have been endowed with 16 kala; higher creations are measured in 100, 200, 500, thousands, and crores of kala.

Peedi — A generation of creators or supreme souls in the hierarchy of creation.

Nirakari — Formless. The true divine state of a soul as a point of divine light. The supreme incorporeal state.

Akari — A subtle form, not visible to the physical eye. Created by the energy of a soul through affirmation.

Sakari — A physical form. The bodily form a soul takes when its energy has descended to the physical level.

Tattva — Element. The basic substances from which the visible world is composed.

Param Tattva — Supreme element. The finer, refined level of elements; supreme in energetic potency.

Param Prakash — Supreme divine light. The energy of the soul in its incorporeal form. The state of pure soul-consciousness.

Diksha — Initiation. The traditional ceremonial entry into a spiritual lineage, often involving the giving of a mantra. Bapuji teaches that the real diksha is the soul's first true experience of atma swaroop.

Sampradaya — A sect or tradition. A particular spiritual path with its own deity, scripture, and mantra.

Dharm — Eternal righteousness; the natural law of the soul. Sanatan Dharm is the eternal religion present since the beginning of creation.

Shastra — A scripture; a sacred text in which spiritual matters are discussed.

Purana — Part of Hindu literature containing ancient wisdom in story form, narrating the history of creation and the solar system.

Pralay — Dissolution. The process by which a creation is dissolved.

Maya — Illusion. The veiling power that makes the temporary world of five elements appear real and ultimate to the unawakened soul.

Samadhi — A deep meditative absorption in which the soul rests fully in its connection with the Supreme.

Vibhuti / Roop — A clone of a soul created by a supreme soul through its own energy via affirmation.

Seva — Selfless service. In behad gyan, the highest form of seva is to disseminate this supreme knowledge for the benevolence of all souls.

Bhoot — A wandering subtle-world soul that has not yet ascended to a higher loka after death. Used by Bapuji in a precise spiritual sense, not as an insult.

Sharing Knowledge is the Highest Charity

— Bapuji Dashrathbhai Patel

Beyond the physical world exists a vast subtle reality unseen by ordinary eyes.

Who guides souls after death?
What happens to Gurus when they leave the body?
Can subtle-world beings influence human life?

What is the true purpose of a Guru, and where does the soul ultimately belong?

Drawing upon profound spiritual insights, this book explores the hidden relationship between the soul, the Guru, the subtle world, and the Supreme Source.

A thought-provoking journey into dimensions rarely discussed, revealing why true spiritual progress begins with self-realisation and culminates in direct connection with the Highest Reality.

“A true Guru leads the soul beyond himself and toward the Supreme.”
