About Bapuji

Bapuji (full name: Bapuji Dashrathbhai Patel, also lovingly called “Dadaji” by the younger generation) was born in 1956 in the small village of Akhaj in the Mehsana district of Gujarat. However, he spent his childhood in another village named Ambasan, also located in the Mehsana district.

In the early part of his life, he was a highly successful lawyer. Later, he devoted his life to realizing the supreme spiritual truth and bringing this divine knowledge forward for the welfare of humanity. Today, this supreme knowledge serves as a guiding light for true seekers to realize their ultimate destiny. It is a blessing of the highest divinity that the present time is witnessing the rise of this supreme spiritual knowledge, guiding souls on Earth to return to their original source.

Despite being raised in a very poor family and facing challenging circumstances, Bapuji had a deep desire to transform this sorrowful and suffering world into a better place. At the young age of six, he questioned God repeatedly, asking why God remained silent about the suffering of humanity. This intense longing to end human suffering eventually led him to attain the highest level of spirituality later in life.

Even as a child, Bapuji would spend hours alone in the fields, often neglecting his own comfort. Due to poverty, he would walk barefoot without shoes or sandals, frequently getting pricked by thorns. Many times, he would stay late in the fields and, on his way back home, encounter subtle world entities. These experiences sparked his interest in communicating with subtle world souls.

Bapuji was courageous from a young age, which helped him overcome many obstacles. Alongside his studies in chartered accountancy (CA), he gave tuition classes to support himself financially. Later, he completed his Bachelor of Law (LLB) degree and became a well-known lawyer in Ahmedabad.

In 1997, he established a spiritual institution called “Vishwa Parivartak Ishwariya Vidhyalay” in Chenpur, Ahmedabad, with the mission of transforming this mortal world, filled with suffering and disorder, into an eternal divine world of immortality. Smt. Sushma Tandon, lovingly known as “Maa,” worked alongside Bapuji in this grand divine mission.

To accomplish this mission, Bapuji worked tirelessly, dedicating all his resources to this divine purpose. During that time, he would deliver continuous spiritual discourses for up to 18 hours without rest. In these discourses, he explained the highest dimensions of divine knowledge, which he realized through deep meditation and divine vision in a state of superconsciousness. This knowledge goes beyond the imagination of the ordinary human mind.

Bapuji's teachings cover a vast range of topics, including the types of celestial creators across different dimensions, the creation of our solar system, galaxy, and universe, and most importantly, the transcendental knowledge of the multiverse and realities beyond it. His knowledge is supremely profound and is intended for highly evolved seekers, referred to as “behad souls.” According to Bapuji, these “behad souls” will play a key role in transforming this mortal world into an eternal divine realm.

At present, Bapuji remains deeply engaged in intense meditation and samadhi for long hours. He does not meet anyone, as he is continuously immersed in his transcendental mission in a superconscious state.

Preface

“Gyan Daan Maha Daan”

(Sharing knowledge is the highest charity)

— Bapuji Dashrathbhai Patel

In the present age, a great wave of curiosity has swept across the spiritual landscape across the world. Countless seekers, hungry for meaning beyond the ordinary, have turned their attention to the question of previous births. Who was I before? What did I do? Whom did I love, and whom did I wrong? Will I see Lord Krishna, will I behold an angel, will I discover that I was once a king or a sage? What is the reason of my pain in this lifetime etc etc.

From this longing, an entire industry has arisen. Past Life Regression, conducted by therapists, foundations, and self-styled spiritual guides, now reaches every corner of the globe. Some practise it in person; others claim to perform it remotely, through a phone screen, hundreds of kilometres away. The promises are grand: see your past, glimpse your future, dissolve your fears, awaken your purpose.

However Bapuji, through the rare clarity of Atma Vigyan (the science of the soul) — invites us to pause and ask a deeper question: what is actually happening when a person enters such a session? Whose voice is truly speaking through the regressed seeker? From which layer of the inner being does that information arise? And — most importantly — does any of it bring the soul closer to liberation, or does it merely entangle it further in the web of Maya?

This book is the answer.

What follows is not a polemic against any individual or organisation. It is a clear, compassionate, and uncompromising explanation of the inner mechanics of regression as understood through Behad Gyan — the boundless wisdom — that flows through the teachings of Bapuji. The reader will discover that what is commonly sold as a doorway to one's past lives is, in the vast majority of cases, neither one's own memory nor the work of pure beings. It is the activity of low-grade subtle entities operating through unsuspecting practitioners, often delivering half-truths, distortions, and outright fabrications to seekers who have come in good faith.

More importantly, this book reveals the true alternative. The path of the genuine seeker is not to view the past, but to delete it — to dissolve the karmic records that bind the soul, lifetime after lifetime, to the wheel of birth and death. This is the deeper teaching, the harder teaching, and the only teaching that leads to ParamShanti — supreme peace.

We invite you to read these pages slowly, with stillness. Let go for a moment of what you have heard from popular sources. Sit as a soul, not as an opinion. The truth that follows is subtle. It will require not the intelligence of the world but the vast intellect — Behad ki buddhi — that recognises its own infinite nature.

CHAPTER ONE

The Question of Past Lives

A peculiar phenomenon has spread across our world. Across continents and cultures, vast numbers of practitioners now claim the ability to reveal a person's previous incarnations — and even to disclose what is to come in the future. Some sit before the seeker in a quiet room. Others operate from afar, through the screen of a mobile phone, performing what they call regression at a distance of hundreds or even thousands of kilometres. Such are the times in which we live: even the most sacred questions of the soul are being addressed through technology, often without any real spiritual foundation behind them.

These practitioners — frequently associated with foundations such as those teaching Reiki and Healing or similar systems — declare that they can show a person what they were in earlier lives. Were you a king? A queen? A warrior on some ancient battlefield? Were you in the form of an animal somewhere along the long journey of the eighty-four lakh yonis? Did you witness the divine play of Lord Krishna himself? Whatever you wish to find, they say, the regression will reveal it.

And then, with equal confidence, they offer to show the future. In 2025 something will happen. In 2030 you will become this or that. Such-and-such event will unfold. The promises are intricate, often dramatic, and frequently flattering. Few seekers leave such sessions without a story to tell.

The Question Behind the Question

But the discerning soul must ask: what is the source of this information? Who, exactly, is showing these scenes? Is the seeker genuinely accessing his or her own deep memory — the record of countless lifetimes stored within the inner bodies — or is something else taking place? Is the voice that emerges during a hypnotic state truly the voice of the seeker's own atma, or has another presence taken its place?

These are not academic questions. They cut directly into the heart of what we believe about ourselves, about our spiritual progress, and about the nature of the unseen world. If we accept the testimony of regression at face value, we form an entire identity around it. Around such identities, we then build our hopes, our fears, and our actions. If those identities are false — if they are the inventions of low-grade subtle entities operating through the regression process — then we have built our spiritual life on sand.

Bapuji's Clear Diagnosis

Bapuji addresses this question with the rare clarity that only true atma-gyan can provide. What he reveals is sobering, and at first, may even be uncomfortable to hear. The world of past life regression has, in great measure, become a vast commercial enterprise — a dhanda — built upon misunderstanding, deception, and the activity of impure subtle entities operating through unsuspecting practitioners.

This is a strong statement. It deserves to be examined carefully and proven step by step. That is the purpose of the chapters that follow. Bapuji clearly states that more than half of what is shown in past life regression is false; for in most cases, the souls that have entered / influenced the practitioner are themselves impure, and they speak through the seeker as if from his own depths.

To grasp why this is so, we must first understand the inner architecture of the human being — the gross body, the subtle body with its seven layers, and the causal body in which the records of countless lives are stored. We must understand how these bodies communicate, how memories surface, and what kind of entity is actually capable of reaching into them. Without this foundation, no honest assessment of regression is possible. That is the journey we will undertake together in the pages that follow. The reader is asked only to keep an open mind and a still heart.

CHAPTER TWO

The Mechanics of Past Life Regression

To understand what truly happens during a regression session, we must first absorb a fundamental principle of existence — a principle Bapuji has revealed many times: the subtle world (sukshma jagat) constantly influences and operates the physical world (sthool jagat). Nothing in our visible reality moves entirely of its own accord. Behind every event, every prediction, every apparent miracle, there are subtle entities at work, sending their influences and their rays into the gross plane.

This is true of the saint and of the swindler alike. The same channel that allows higher knowledge to descend can also be used by lower entities to deceive. The medium is neutral; what flows through it depends entirely on the quality of the soul that has opened the door.

The Therapist Is Not the Real Operator

With this understanding, we can now look closely at the regression session. The practitioner who sits across from you — or who speaks to you through your phone screen — is not actually performing the regression by his own personal power. He is acting as an outward instrument. The real work is being done by the subtle world souls that are attached to him and that he, through his own beliefs and practices, has invited into his sphere.

When the regression begins, subtle soul energies connected to the practitioner send spiritual influences — what Bapuji calls “rez” — toward the seeker. These influences affect the seeker's soul and pull the awareness inward, away from the busy outer mind and into the deeper subconscious. As this happens, hidden memories, images, and feelings begin to arise. The seeker starts remembering — or feels as if remembering — experiences from another time and place.

This is the same general mechanism, Bapuji explains, that operates in those who claim to remove ghosts and negative entities from a distance. Such practitioners need only a phone in one hand to declare confidently what is troubling someone hundreds of kilometres away. By their own power they could do nothing of the sort. But the subtle entities attached to their lineage — to the founder of their school, to the gurus they invoke — operate in concert with them. These entities can communicate with thousands of seekers simultaneously, transmitting impressions, removing certain disturbances, and producing what appears to be a remarkable result.

Just as today's science allows millions of viewers to watch a single broadcast at the same moment, so too can subtle entities, working from their formless state, attend to many people at once. They function as a kind of supercomputer of the unseen world.

BAPUJI INSIGHT

“Hypnotize karne ke liye jo power chahiye, woh sukshma jagat ki atma, hypnotize karne walon ke saath hoti hain. Saakar mein hypnotize karne wala jo saakari manushya hai woh act karta hai. Practical mein karya sukshma jagat ki atma isko raze maarkar hypnotize karate hain.”

“The power required to hypnotise another being does not belong to the visible practitioner. The subtle entities attached to him are the ones who actually possess that power. The visible practitioner only acts the role; in practical truth, it is the subtle entities who, by directing their rays, accomplish the hypnotic state.”

The Mechanism of Memory Retrieval

Why is it possible for these entities to bring forth memories of past lives at all? Because such memories genuinely exist within us. They are stored deep in the karan sharir — the causal body — which contains the imprints of innumerable lifetimes. From there, they slowly filter into the layers of the sukshma sharir (subtle body), and from the subtle body they may eventually surface to the conscious mind.

When the regression entity strikes its rays upon the seeker's atma, it can indeed cause some of this stored data to emerge. The seeker then experiences what feels like a vivid memory. He sees himself in another body, in another era, performing acts he has no conscious recollection of in this life. So it is not entirely fabricated. Some genuine substance is touched. And it is precisely this fact — that something real is being accessed — which makes the deception so persuasive.

BAPUJI INSIGHT

“Door baithe tumhe woh atma aayegi, woh raze maarkar usko — uska atma ke, karan sharir mein jo record pada data hai, woh uska atma ko emerge karwayegi yani yaad karwayegi.”

“Even from a great distance, the subtle entity comes to you. It directs rays (raze) upon your atma. Through these rays, the data lying recorded within your karan sharir is brought forth into your awareness — not by your own remembrance, but by the entity causing that recorded material to surface.”

Where the Great Deception Begins

Yet here, the discerning seeker must pause. Two crucial questions arise. First: how deep into the inner bodies does the regression entity actually reach? And second: how trustworthy is the source from which the impressions are drawn? As we shall see in the chapters to come, the answers to both questions are deeply unsettling. The reach of these entities is far shallower than they would have us believe. And the records they touch are themselves frequently distorted, twisted, and overlaid with the chatter of other entities that already inhabit the seeker. It is, in Bapuji's plain phrasing, a bahut bada dhandha — a vast enterprise — and one in which the discerning soul must walk with great caution.

BAPUJI INSIGHT

“Past life regression jo hai woh bahut log kara rahe hain. Tumhe hypnotize karte hain, to hypnotize karte-karte, karan sharir mein record sara data emerge kara lete hain, dikhate hain, sukshma mein.”

“Many people are conducting past life regression today. They hypnotise the seeker, and through prolonged hypnosis they cause some of the data recorded within the karan sharir (causal body) to surface as imagery and feeling within the subtle body.”

CHAPTER THREE

The Seven Layers of the Subtle Body

The human being is not a single, simple entity. Behind the visible physical form lies the sukshma sharir — the subtle body — and behind that, the karan sharir — the causal body. The atma — eternal soul, dwells beyond all three. To understand what regression can and cannot reach, we must know something of the structure of these inner layers.

Layers Within the Subtle Body

The subtle body is not uniform. It has seven distinct layers, each finer and more interior than the one before it. The outer layers are closer to the surface of consciousness; they hold impressions from the recent past, from this life and perhaps the immediately preceding one. The deeper layers contain records that go back vastly further — across countless births, across forms, human and non-human, across passages through realms higher and lower than this earth.

These deeper layers are the storehouse of what the karan sharir has gradually transmitted upward — the great accumulation of samskaras (impressions) and karmic bonds that have shaped the soul's long journey through existence. When the soul takes a new body, it does not arrive empty. The contents of these layers move with it, whispering their influence into every choice, every relationship, every tendency.

How Far Does Regression Actually Reach?

Here we come to one of Bapuji's most piercing observations. Despite their grand claims, the entities that operate through regression sessions almost never reach the deeper layers of the subtle body. Their range is limited. In nearly all cases, they touch only the first, second, or — at most — the third layer. The first three layers are, in a sense, the lobby of the subtle body. The genuine treasures of the soul lie far deeper — and the entities that conduct regressions seldom have the keys to those inner chambers.

Why is this so? Because reaching the fourth, fifth, or sixth layer requires sustained and powerful work upon the subconscious mind. It is not a matter of a few minutes of guided suggestion. It demands a depth of inner stillness, a refinement of attention, and a quality of soul that the average regression entity does not possess. To touch the seventh layer, where the deepest records lie just beneath the karan sharir, is rarer still.

The Limits of Surface Memory

This limitation creates a major problem. Whatever a regression entity brings out usually comes only from the outer layers of the subtle body, and these layers contain many distortions. Along with real memories from recent past lives, they can also contain influences from other entities, cultural beliefs, imagination, and stories the seeker has previously heard or read.

Because of this, even when a regression session touches a real memory, the memory is rarely completely pure. It becomes filtered, changed, and coloured by what the regression entity wants to show. As explained later, these entities often have their own motives — mainly to appear powerful and to keep both the seeker and the practitioner dependent on them.

The Movement of Records Through the Bodies

It is essential to grasp the natural flow of karmic information. The recorded data of countless lifetimes resides in the karan sharir. From there, it gradually rises into the layers of the sukshma sharir, layer by layer, as the soul takes successive births. From the subtle body it expresses itself in the sthul sharir — the gross body — as our circumstances, our relationships, our health, our experiences of joy and sorrow.

Our complexion, our height, our weight, the family into which we were born, the situations we encounter — these are not random. They are the precipitation, into the physical plane, of records that have been stored and processed through the subtle and causal bodies. Time releases these records according to their own ripening, allowing each fruit to come forth when its season has come.

Understanding this hidden architecture is the beginning of true spiritual maturity. The regression seeker who imagines that his entire karmic history can be displayed upon a screen of imagery within thirty minutes of hypnosis has not yet glimpsed how vast and many-layered his own inner being truly is.

“Sukshma sharir ke saat layer (partein) hote hain. Regression ke dauran atmaye aksar bahut gehri nahi jaatin aur keval pehle, doosre ya teesre layer tak hi pahunch paati hain.”

“The sukshma sharir (subtle body) is composed of seven distinct layers, each finer and more interior than the one before. During a regression session, the entities operating through the practitioner do not usually reach the deeper layers. They access only the first, second, or at most the third — the surface chambers, where impressions are mixed and easily distorted.”

CHAPTER FOUR

The Karan Sharir — The True Repository of Karma

Beyond the subtle body, deeper than its seven layers, lies the karan sharir — the causal body. Bapuji says that this is the vault of the soul. Within it is stored not only the record of one or two recent births, but the immense archive of every life the soul has ever lived: every form it has worn, every realm, universe, it has visited, every joy it has tasted, every sorrow it has endured.

The causal body is itself layered. It does not yield its contents easily. To touch it requires a quality of consciousness and an interior power that the ordinary regression entity simply does not possess. It is not a matter of will alone; it is a matter of being. Only a soul of high purity, established in deep yog with the formless Supreme, can pierce these veils — and even then, with great care.

What the Causal Body Contains

The karan sharir (causal body) of one soul contains countless birth records and karmic impressions. Over an extremely long journey, the soul may have come down from higher realms lokas, taken many human births, become trapped in maya and karma, and lived in different families, religions, countries, and roles. The soul may also have wandered through the 84 lakh yonis — becoming animals, birds, fish, or other life forms. When the soul falls into negative sang and negative karma, it can even move toward lower yonis and dark subtle states. When devotion, bhakti, and positive karma increase, the soul can rise toward swarg lok and higher realms. Every experience leaves a record inside the soul.

These records do not stay inactive. They later give fruits according to time and karma. From these stored records come happiness or suffering, health or disease, wealth or struggle, peace or conflict. In Behad Ka Gyan, present life situations are understood as the result of old karmic records already stored within the karan sharir.

The karan sharir is like the complete hidden history of the soul — vast beyond imagination. A regression session that claims to reveal all past lives in one hour can only show a few unclear glimpses from the outer surface of these records, not the full truth of the soul's journey.

Why Regression Cannot Reach the Karan Sharir

Bapuji is unambiguous on this point. Past life regression, as it is commonly practised, does not reach the causal body. The entities operating through these sessions are limited to the outer layers of the subtle body. They cannot enter the causal vault. And so what they show — even in the rare cases when they touch authentic material — is drawn from the corridors, never from the inner sanctum.

Worse still, even the records they do reach are often distorted. The data that filters from the causal body into the outer layers of the subtle body is not always clean. It can be twisted by the lower entities that already inhabit the seeker's field. It can be elaborated upon to seem more impressive. It can be coloured by the cultural and religious imagination of the practitioner. By the time it emerges from the seeker's lips during a session, it has often passed through many distortions.

BAPUJI INSIGHT

“Karan sharir mein anekon janmon ka record hota hai. Yahi record dheere-dheere sukshma sharir ki parton mein aata hai.”

“Within the karan sharir (causal body) lies the immense record of countless births — every form the soul has taken, every realm it has visited, every karmic seed it has sown. Slowly, this record filters upward into the layers of the subtle body, and from there expresses itself in the gross body as our circumstances, relationships, and experiences.”

The Implications for the Seeker

This is why Bapuji urges seekers not to invest their identity in what regression reveals. To declare, on the basis of such a session, “I was Karna” or “I was the mother of Lord Krishna, Yashoda” is to build a self-image upon material that may be substantially fabricated. Such declarations bring no peace. They feed only the ego, and ego is precisely what the soul's true journey aims to dissolve.

There is a deeper reason still. The genuine work of liberation is not to view the contents of the karan sharir but to delete them — to dissolve the karmic records that bind the soul to repeated birth and death. This deeper work cannot be performed by any external regression therapist. It can only be performed by the soul itself, established in atma-swaroop, drawing power from its yog with the formless Supreme. We will return to this central theme in the closing chapters.

For now, it is enough to recognise this: the karan sharir is real, vast, and almost entirely beyond the reach of the regression session. The performance you witness in such sessions is taking place in a much smaller theatre — one which the regression entities themselves stage for their own purposes.

“Karan sharir se jo record sukshma sharir mein aate hain, unmein bhi galat baatein ho sakti hain. Un records ko bhi 'twist' karke pesh kiya ja sakta hai ya jhooth bola ja sakta hai.”

“Even the records that move from the causal body into the outer layers of the subtle body are not always presented faithfully. They can be twisted, distorted, and overlaid with falsehood by the lower entities that already inhabit the seeker. By the time these records emerge as speech during a session, they have often passed through many layers of distortion.”

CHAPTER FIVE

Sato Pradhan and Tamo Pradhan Souls

Not all souls are alike. They differ in purity, in power, in the realms they inhabit, and in the kind of work they are willing or able to perform. Bapuji teaches us to distinguish between two great categories: sato pradhan souls — those in whom the quality of purity (sattva) predominates — and tamo pradhan souls, in whom the dense, inert, and impure quality (tamas) predominates.

This distinction is essential to understanding what truly happens in a regression session. For the question of who is speaking through the seeker is, at root, a question of the spiritual quality of that speaker.

The Nature of Sato Pradhan Souls

Sato pradhan souls dwell in the higher realms — the divine worlds known to our scriptures as Param Dham, Shiv Puri, and Vishnu Puri, along with the higher heavens above this earth such as Bhavarlok, Swarlok, Maharlok, Janalok, and Tapalok. These are realms of refined vibration, of luminous awareness, of profound peace. The souls who reside there have either never descended into the lower karmic theatre, or have completed their work and returned upward, free of the bonds that pull souls back to the gross plane.

Such souls do not casually descend to participate in earthly business. They do not enter human practitioners to play tricks upon the curious. They do not stage performances for the gratification of paying clients. The very nature of a sato pradhan soul is incompatible with deception. Its activity, when it touches the gross world at all, is undertaken under divine direction and for purposes of the highest order — never for the benefit of an individual practice or its founder.

The Nature of Tamo Pradhan Souls

Tamo pradhan souls, by contrast, are those who remain bound to the earth and its lower atmospheres after death. They have died as ordinary human beings, often laden with unresolved desires, unfulfilled cravings, attachments, regrets, and the residue of impure conduct. They have not ascended to higher realms because they lack the refinement and the spiritual power to do so. They linger in the heavy strata close to the earth — in homes, in shrines, in places of strong emotion — waiting, watching, and sometimes acting through living human beings.

It is these earthbound, restless, impure entities that most often participate in the regression process. They have within them the residual capacity to retrieve fragments of past-life impressions from the outer layers of a seeker's subtle body. They can deliver an interesting performance. But they are not pure. Their truthfulness is unreliable. Their motives are coloured by the same impulses that kept them earthbound to begin with: the desire to seem important, the appetite for attention, the urge to influence.

Why True Angels Do Not Come

This bears repeating with emphasis: real angels — luminous, pure beings of the higher realms, do not appear in regression sessions. They do not whisper into the ears of the hypnotised seeker. They do not announce themselves as guides through the mouths of paid intermediaries. Their work is far above this stage, and their motivations far purer than what such sessions reveal.

When, therefore, you hear of a regression in which the seeker claims to have met an angel, to have stood before Krishna, to have been embraced by Yashoda — recognise this for what it is. Whatever entity has spoken through the seeker is almost certainly not what it claims to be.

Why Tamo Pradhan Souls Linger Below

These souls remain in the lower atmospheres because they cannot rise. Spiritual ascent requires inner power — the power that comes only from purification, from yog, from atma-gyan. Without soul power, a soul cannot pass into the higher worlds even if it wishes to. It is even said that some such souls are afraid to go upward, sensing that the higher realms are not for them.

And so they remain near the gross plane. They attach themselves to practitioners who, however well-intentioned, have not protected themselves through inner purity. Through such practitioners they find a stage upon which to act — and in modern regression sessions, they have found a particularly congenial one.

“Yeh atmaye 'sato pradhan' (shuddh) nahi hotin, balki 'tamo pradhan' hoti hain.”

“The souls who actually appear in regression sessions are not sato pradhan (predominantly pure). They are tamo pradhan — souls in whom the heavy, impure, inert quality predominates. They have died as ordinary humans and remain bound to the lower atmospheres because they lack the spiritual power to ascend.”

CHAPTER SIX

How Spirits Deceive During Regression

Having understood the nature of tamo pradhan souls, we are now in a position to examine, plainly and directly, what they do during a regression session. The mechanism is more disturbing than most seekers realise.

The Suppression of the Seeker's Own Soul

Many human beings unknowingly carry lower restless energies or bhoot-pret within their aura because of impure environments, emotional suffering, fear, crowded places, or unconscious living. Normally, during everyday waking life, the soul remains somewhat active and these lower entities stay in the background.

But during hypnosis, when the outer mind becomes quiet and inactive, the person's inner field opens up. At that time, the soul's awareness becomes weaker, and the hidden entities or subtle influences present within the field may come forward more strongly.

Many Voices, Many Contradictions

Often a single human being carries not one but several such entities. During a regression session, they may take turns. One speaks, then another, then a third. Each tells its own story. Each contradicts the others. The seeker, returning to ordinary consciousness afterward, is left with a confused and sometimes contradictory tapestry of memories — some of which feel deeply meaningful, others of which leave behind a vague unease.

This is why two regression sessions on the same person can yield strikingly different results. It is also why so many seekers, having undergone several sessions, report that their understanding of their own past lives has shifted, expanded, and sometimes reversed itself. They are not, in fact, learning more about themselves. They are hearing from a different speaker each time.

Inflated Claims and Spiritual Exhibitionism

Because tamo pradhan souls retain desire for importance and attention, they are drawn to grand claims. It is rare for such an entity to declare modestly that the seeker was a simple farmer in a forgotten village. The narratives that emerge are nearly always elevated: the seeker was a king, a queen, a great warrior, a sage, a companion of Krishna, a witness to the Mahabharata, the mother of a god — etc.

Bapuji speaks plainly here. These are, in many cases, simply lies. Third-class quality souls assert themselves as connected to the highest figures of our spiritual history — Karna, Yashoda, Krishna himself — because such claims dazzle the listener and cement the practitioner's reputation. The narratives have the flavour of truth because they touch real spiritual archetypes, but the link to the seeker is invented. More than half of what is delivered in past life regression is fabricated — because more than half of those speaking are not who they claim to be.

“Aksar jis vyakti ka regression ho raha hota hai, uske andar pehle se hi kai bhoot-pret baithe hote hain. Regression ke dauran vyakti ki apni atma ke bajaye yeh bhoot-pret bolne lagte hain aur jhooth bolte hain.”

“Most human beings already carry within them several bhoot-pret (lower entities) clinging to their inner field. During the hypnotic state, the seeker's own atma is suppressed, while these resident entities rise to the surface and begin to speak. What emerges from the seeker's mouth is therefore not his own true memory but the testimony of these entities — and they very often lie.”

The Role of Foreign Entities

There is a further dimension to consider. When a seeker visits temples, shrines, mosques, dargahs, or any religious place with spiritual / religious currents — and accumulations of subtle entities — are present, foreign souls can sometimes attach themselves. These may belong to traditions, doctrines, or even faiths quite different from the seeker's own. They enter, settle quietly, and remain. During a hypnotic state, such foreign entities often come to the surface and speak. The seeker, in good faith, reports what arises as if it were his own past-life memory. In truth, it is the testimony of a different soul entirely — one that happens to be presently lodged within him. This is one of the reasons that the same seeker may, across different regression sessions, suddenly identify with figures from quite different religious or cultural traditions. It is not the spiritual breadth of the seeker's own soul that is being revealed. It is the diversity of entities that have, at various times, taken up residence within him.

“Kisi mandir mein jaane par wahan maujood anya atmaye vyakti mein pravesh kar sakti hain, aur hypnotize karne par wahi atmaye bolti hain, jabki vyakti ki apni atma dabi rehti hai.”

“When a seeker visits temples, dargahs, or other places of strong spiritual currents, foreign atmaye sometimes attach themselves and remain. Later, when the seeker is hypnotised, it is these foreign entities that come forward and speak — while the seeker's own atma stays suppressed in the background. The seeker reports their words as his own past-life memory, when in truth he is hearing the testimony of an entirely different soul.”

A Vast Commercial Enterprise

Taken together, these observations make it clear why Bapuji describes past life regression as a bahut bada dhanda — a vast enterprise. None of this is to dismiss the sincerity of those who undergo such sessions. The longing that brings a seeker to the regression therapist's chair is often pure: a hunger for self-knowledge, a wish to understand suffering, a desire to find one's spiritual place in the cosmos. That longing is precious, and it deserves to be honoured. But honouring it means directing it toward genuine sources — not toward a process in which low-grade entities supply convenient stories.

BAPUJI INSIGHT

“Past life regression mein aadha se zyada jhooth hota hai kyunki zyadatar atmaon mein bhoot-pret baithe hote hain jo ootpataang dawe karte hain. 'Third class quality' ki atmaye khud ko Karna, Yashoda ya Krishna dekhne ka dawa karti hain taaki woh prabhavshali lag saken.”

“More than half of what is delivered in past life regression is fabricated. Third-class quality souls boldly claim association with the highest figures of our spiritual heritage — Karna, Yashoda, Krishna — because such claims dazzle the listener and cement the practitioner's reputation. The narrative has the flavour of truth, but the connection to the seeker is invented.”

CHAPTER SEVEN

Why Pure Souls and Angels Stay Away

It is worth pausing to address a question that often arises in the seeker's mind: surely, if there are pure souls and luminous angels in the higher realms, would they not occasionally appear in regression sessions to set things right? Would they not sometimes speak through a seeker, dispelling the deception and sharing genuine wisdom?

Bapuji's answer is firm and clarifying. No. The pure souls of the higher realms do not participate in the regression process. They neither initiate it, nor enter it as occasional visitors. The reasons are several, and worth understanding plainly.

They Reside in Higher Realms

Sato pradhan souls dwell in worlds of refined vibration — Param Dham, Shiv Puri, Vishnu Puri, and the higher heavens above this earthly plane. The descent from such a world into the dense atmosphere of an earthly regression session is not undertaken casually. The vibration of such sessions — coloured as they so often are by the presence of tamo pradhan entities, by commercial motivations, and by the noisy curiosities of seekers — is simply incompatible with the nature of the higher beings. To imagine an angel descending into a paid regression session in order to relate the seeker's past lives is to misunderstand both what an angel is and what such a session actually is. The two simply do not meet.

Their Work Is of a Different Order

The work of pure souls, when it touches our world at all, is undertaken under the guidance of the highest authority. It moves through quieter and more profound channels — through the awakening of atma-gyan in deserving seekers, through the silent transmission of grace, through the slow ripening of inner conditions that lead a soul, often without dramatic incident, to its true home. Such work does not announce itself with theatrical revelations of past lives. It does not need the apparatus of hypnosis. It does not require an audience. It simply works — gently, patiently, sometimes unnoticed even by the soul that benefits from it. True grace rarely advertises itself. It is not in the nature of the highest to compete for the attention of the curious.

The Vessels Are Not Suitable

There is also the matter of the practitioners themselves. The pure souls of the higher realms do not enter human vessels indiscriminately. They require purity, surrender, and atma-gyan in the one through whom they would speak. The typical regression practitioner — however sincere — has not undertaken the inner purification that would make him a fit vessel for such beings.

By contrast, tamo pradhan entities require no such purification in their vessels. They will work through anyone willing to open the door, and they will operate quite happily through practitioners motivated by curiosity, by reputation, or by income.

False Claims of Angelic Contact

When a regression entity claims to be an angel, then, what is actually happening? It is the same phenomenon we have already examined: a tamo pradhan soul borrowing an exalted title to impress the listener. Such entities have a thorough acquaintance with the spiritual vocabulary of every culture. They know which names will produce awe. They know which descriptions will be received as profound. They use this knowledge skilfully.

It is precisely because they are not angels that they so eagerly call themselves angels. The genuine being of the higher realms feels no such need. It does not announce itself; it simply is what it is.

The Implication for the Sincere Seeker

For the sincere seeker, this teaching is liberating rather than discouraging. It means that one need not chase regression sessions in the hope that the next one will, at last, bring genuine angelic contact. That hope is misplaced. Genuine contact with the higher realms is not produced by hypnosis. It is the fruit of a quite different path — the path of self-purification, of atma-gyan, of yog with the formless Supreme.

This path is open to every soul. It does not require a paying appointment. It requires only sincerity, persistence, and the willingness to look inward rather than outward.

BAPUJI INSIGHT

“Koi bhi uchch lok (jaise Shiv Puri ya Vishnu Puri) ki 'angel' ya shuddh atma is tarah dharti par regression mein nahi aati.”

“No truly pure soul or angel from the higher realms — such as Shiv Puri or Vishnu Puri — descends to participate in earthly regression sessions. Such beings dwell in vibrations far above the dense atmosphere of these sessions, and their work upon the world moves through quieter, far more profound channels.”

CHAPTER EIGHT

The Subtle World Governs the Physical

We now widen our view. Regression is only one example of a much larger truth that runs through Bapuji's teachings: the subtle world governs and operates the physical world. Without grasping this principle, no spiritual phenomenon — neither regression, nor prophecy, nor possession, nor miracle — can be understood.

The Hidden Hand Behind Visible Events

Nothing in our visible reality moves entirely of its own accord. Every event, every encounter, every fortune and misfortune, is conditioned by currents that flow first through the subtle plane. The gross world is, in a sense, the printed page; the subtle world is the press from which the page emerges.

This is true of personal events. The choices we believe we are making, the people we believe we are meeting at random, the opportunities and obstacles that arrive in our lives — all are shaped by the unseen flow of karmic ripening, by the influence of the entities around us, and by the larger currents being directed through the subtle plane. What appears to be sudden in the physical world has almost always been long prepared in the subtle world. And what appears to be planned in the subtle world is itself sometimes overruled by the highest authority of all.

It is also true of collective events. Wars, natural calamities, sudden shifts in human affairs, the rise and fall of religions and movements — all reflect plans being formulated, modified, and at times overturned in the subtle world. The visible event is only the final precipitation. The real movement has long since taken place above.

Plans That Change

This brings us to a crucial point that will deepen as we approach the chapter on future predictions. The plans of the subtle world are not absolute. They are subject to revision. Higher authorities may alter them. The conduct of souls upon the earth — their devotion, their atma-gyan, their yog — may shift the precipitation of events significantly.

So, for example, it has been said that great calamities and conflicts which were prepared to descend upon the earth in earlier years did not, in the end, take place. They were postponed, dissolved, or transformed by the intervention of higher authorities, by the prayers and sankalp (firm spiritual resolves) of devoted souls, and by the slow, silent influence of those who carry Behad Gyan.

The subtle world is therefore not a sealed script. It is a living plan, perpetually being adjusted in response to the conduct of souls and the will of the highest. The seer who reports what he has glimpsed in that plan reports a snapshot — not an inevitability. Bapuji gives example that World War 3 was planned multiple times in Sukshma world but unable to materialise due to such change in plans.

The Subtle Operators of Practitioners

With this principle clear, we can return to our central theme. The regression practitioner — like the ghost-remover, the future-teller, the miracle-worker — is being operated upon and through by the subtle entities attached to him. He is, in many cases, sincerely unaware of this. He believes the work to be his own. He has been taught a method, has practised it, has seen results — and so attributes those results to himself. In truth, he is the puppet, not the puppeteer. The hands that move within him belong to subtle souls — sometimes refined, more often crude — that have found in him a willing vessel.

This recognition need not provoke contempt for such practitioners. Many are good-hearted people who genuinely wish to help. But it should provoke caution in the seeker. To approach such a practitioner is to approach not only him but also whatever subtle entities are attached to him. The seeker who fails to perceive this is taking a far greater risk than he realises.

Even Modern Technology Mirrors the Subtle

Bapuji often draws an instructive parallel from our modern age. Today, through the technology of YouTube and similar platforms, a single broadcaster may reach millions of viewers simultaneously. His words and image are received in countless places at once. To the technologically informed, this is not magical; it is simply the nature of modern broadcasting.

The subtle world, Bapuji teaches, has always operated this way. A single subtle entity, in its formless aspect, can attend to a great many seekers at the same moment. It can enter dozens of regression sessions, supply impressions to dozens of practitioners, generate the appearance of extraordinary insight in many places at once. What seems miraculous to us is, on the subtle plane, ordinary work.

The subtle world is, in its way, a vast supercomputer of consciousness. The marvels we attribute to charismatic practitioners are often only the work of this network operating quietly through them.

Once this scale is grasped, the impressiveness of regression sessions begins to lose its mystique. The performance is real, in the sense that something is genuinely taking place. But the source is not what it appears to be.

CHAPTER NINE

The Illusion of Future Predictions

If past life regression is unreliable, future prediction is even more so. And yet many of the same practitioners who claim to reveal the past also claim, in the same session or in related sessions, to disclose what is to come.

Bapuji addresses this with great directness. The past, he reminds us, is recorded. Whatever has happened has left its imprint within the karan sharir. The entity that can reach those imprints, however shallowly, can in principle bring forth fragments of past experience. There is at least something there to retrieve. But the future is not yet recorded. It is not yet fixed. It exists only as a tendency, a probability, a precipitation that has not yet crystallised. To claim definitive knowledge of it is to claim a knowledge that does not yet exist.

Why the Future Changes

There are several reasons the future is genuinely unstable. The first is that karmic results, while sown, do not ripen at fixed dates. They unfold according to many conditions: the ongoing conduct of the soul, the grace received through bhakti and yog, the influence of higher authorities, and the larger currents flowing through the subtle world.

Bapuji explains with an example. A soul has, by past karma, prepared for itself a serious accident in the coming year. The karmic seed is genuinely there. But this same soul, in the present, is performing devoted bhakti. It is calling sincerely upon Param Atma. By such conduct, the heavy karmic fruit is softened. What might have arrived as a major collision arrives instead as a small fall from a scooter — a minor injury rather than a catastrophe. The karm has come; it has been settled; but its severity has been transformed by present-day grace.

Future karma is not a verdict. It is a tendency that can be softened by devotion, by yog, by the grace of the guru and the formless Supreme.

Or consider another example. A soul may have a major life event scheduled — a marriage, a purchase, a journey — and through changing circumstances or changing intentions, that event may be postponed, transformed, or set aside altogether. “I was to buy a car after one month, and I bought it after two — or did not buy it at all.” The future bent because the conditions bent.

Why Predictions Often Fail

This is why prophetic announcements made even by the most renowned seers often fail to come to pass. Bapuji has noted in many of his teachings that those who predicted, four hundred or five hundred or a thousand years ago, that such-and-such would happen on the world stage at a certain date have, again and again, been proven mistaken. World wars predicted for one decade did not come. Calamities foretold for a particular year were averted.

Why? Because the subtle world plans were altered. Higher authorities intervened. The conduct of souls upon the earth shifted. The collective karmic ledger was adjusted. The future the prediction had glimpsed was no longer the future that arrived.

BAPUJI INSIGHT

“Future dikhati hai to 99% galat hone ki sambhavna hai, kyunki future to bahut achanak badal jata hai.”

“When future predictions are offered through regression, there is nearly a ninety-nine percent likelihood that they will turn out wrong. The future is not a fixed script. It shifts suddenly with the conduct of souls, the intervention of higher authorities, and the changing currents of the subtle world.”

The Problem of Collective Karma

There is also the matter of collective karma. Individual karmic ripening is one thing; the sudden eruption of large-scale collective fruits is another. A bomb explodes; an earthquake strikes; a plane goes down with hundreds of souls aboard; a sudden flood, a great fire, a war. In such moments, an enormous collective karmic ledger is being settled in one stroke. For example, a person may be told they will become wealthy in ten years, yet sudden collective karma, natural calamities, or changing life circumstances may completely alter the timeline.

The regression entity that attempts to predict an individual's future ten years hence has no reliable knowledge of such collective events. It sees, at best, a personal trajectory. It does not see the larger currents that may sweep across that trajectory and rewrite it entirely. A confident prediction that the seeker will purchase a great house in 2030 is meaningless if, in some collective upheaval before that date, the entire context of his life has been transformed.

The Discipline of the Sincere Seeker

This means a true seeker should not depend too much on future predictions. Even famous prophets or people who seem to predict the future often become wrong. This is not always because they are fake, but because the future keeps changing. The future is not fixed. Karma, collective events, spiritual effort, and changing circumstances can all change what happens.

Living only by predictions is like building a house on sand. A sincere seeker does not need to know the future. What matters is living correctly in the present — improving conduct, deepening bhakti, gaining atma-gyan, and reducing karmic bondage.

Then, whatever future comes, the soul can face it with strength and awareness instead of fear and helplessness.

BAPUJI INSIGHT

“Bura karm phal bhi badal jata hai. Jaise koi atma gyan mein chal rahi, bahut achhi chal rahi hai... to aaj achha karm kar rahi hai to bhavishya ke saare karm phal khatm kar denge.”

“Even heavy karmic fruits prepared for the future can be transformed by present-day spiritual practice. A soul walking firmly upon the path of gyan, performing strong yog, can dissolve the karmic ledger that was due to ripen years later. The future bows to the conduct of the soul that knows itself.”

CHAPTER TEN

The Soul's Journey Through 84 Lakh Yonis

To deepen our appreciation for what regression touches and what it cannot touch, we must consider the vastness of the soul's journey. The atma is not the visitor of a single life, nor of a few. It is an ancient traveller. Through karmic bondage, through the absence of even one stilled desire, through the orientation of mind at the moment of leaving the body — through all these — the soul has passed through countless births in countless forms.

The Eighty-Four Lakh Forms

Our scriptures speak of eighty-four lakh yonis — eighty-four lakh species of life through which a wandering soul may pass. The soul that has fallen into karmic bondage may take the form of dog or cat, lion or deer, bird or fish or insect. It may rise into human form. It may even, by virtue of strong samskaras, become a demonic being in a lower realm, or a refined being in a higher one.

Bapuji teaches that the principle which guides the next birth is profound: antim mati so gati — the orientation of the inner mind in the final moments determines the next destination of the soul. The thoughts, attachments, and longings that fill the consciousness as it leaves the body shape what the soul becomes next. A consciousness saturated with one kind of impression will incline toward a body that matches it.

So a soul whose final consciousness was filled with anger and aggression may take the form of a predatory animal. A soul whose final consciousness was filled with refined devotion may rise to higher realms. The soul does not choose its next body intellectually. The body is precipitated by the inner state.

BAPUJI INSIGHT

“Tumhara past mein, agle janm mein tum kya the, kya kutte-billi the, 84 lakh yoni mein bhatak kar aaye, aur rakshas the stree the ya purush the — woh sab kuch andar to record pade hai karan sharir mein.”

“What you were in your past lives — whether dog or cat, demon or human, woman or man, sage or king — every form the soul has worn through its passage across the eighty-four lakh yonis lies recorded within the karan sharir. The archive is immense, far beyond what any single regression session can begin to display.”

Changing Roles, Changing Relationships

In the course of this immense journey, every relationship transforms. The wife of one life may have been the mother of another. The mother of this life may have been the wife of a previous one. The brother may once have been the father; the father, the uncle. Across many lives, every imaginable relational arrangement has been played out among the same souls — for relationships, like circumstances, are precipitations of karmic ledger that must be balanced and resolved.

The forms also change. Today human; once perhaps a deer; perhaps tomorrow a bird. Even the most exalted positions are not permanent. The scriptures relate that even Indra, king of the three worlds, was once cursed and reduced to the form of a worm in a hellish realm — until another soul, by the grace of knowledge, raised him out of that form. If even the king of the heavens is subject to such reversals, how can any of us imagine that our present form is fixed?

The Suffering of the Suicide

There is a particularly grave point Bapuji has emphasised about the soul's journey. When a soul, in despair or in sudden impulse, takes its own life, it does not escape its suffering. On the contrary, it intensifies it.

The soul that has chosen suicide carries enormous torment after death. It has interrupted the natural ripening of its karmic ledger. It has refused the lessons that were being prepared for it. It now finds itself in a turbulent state, restless, unable to settle, unable to ascend. The fruit it sought to escape will return, often in heavier form, in another life. There is no shortcut here, no exit from the soul's lawful journey.

This is one of the many reasons that bhakti, atma-gyan, and the steady company of true teachers are so precious. They give the soul the strength to endure its present trials and to transform them, rather than to flee them through actions whose consequences will only deepen its bondage.

Why Glimpses of Past Lives Cannot Liberate

Imagine, then, the staggering scale of what is recorded within a single soul's karan sharir. The journeys, the forms, the relationships, the realms, the thousands or millions of lifetimes. To suppose that this entire archive can be meaningfully revealed in a few regression sessions — or even in a few hundred — is to mistake the size of the ocean for the size of a teacup.

And even if it could be so revealed, what then? Knowing that one was a king or a beggar in some past century does not delete the karmic record. It does not free the soul. It does not still the cycle of birth and death. At best it satisfies curiosity. At worst it creates new bondage — the bondage of fascination with one's own past.

The genuine path is different. It does not seek to view the karmic archive. It seeks to dissolve it. To this we shall turn shortly. But first, one further dimension of the soul's vastness must be acknowledged.

BAPUJI INSIGHT

“Jab aatma koi bhi decision all of a sudden lekar suicide karti hai, to suicide karne wali aatmaon ko bahut bada dard bhogna padta hai marne ke baad. Kyunki aatmaye tadapti hain.”

“When a soul, in despair or sudden impulse, takes its own life, it does not escape its suffering — it intensifies it. Such souls undergo enormous torment after death. They have interrupted the natural ripening of their karmic ledger, and they remain restless and tormented, unable to settle, unable to ascend.”

CHAPTER ELEVEN

Souls from Other Galaxies and Universes

Our common spiritual conversation usually limits itself to this earth and its ordinary inhabitants. But Bapuji's teachings open a far wider horizon. The atma is not bound to a single Brahmand (Solar system). Souls have travelled here from elsewhere — from other galaxies, other solar systems, other universe — drawn by curiosity, by the desire to experience human form, by the wish to walk for once in this peculiar three-dimensional theatre we call earth.

The Power Hierarchy of Creation

To understand this, a short cosmological orientation is needed. Within our universe, every created being inherits a portion of the power of its creator. The formless Shiv of our solar system is described as having one kala (one measure) of power. From the formless Shiv arose the embodied form of Shiv, then the embodied Shakti, then together Vishnu, then Brahma — each carrying a portion of the power of what came before. Brahma in turn brought forth the seven loks and an immense diversity of souls.

Each step of this creative descent slightly diminishes the inherited power. If even the formless Shiv of our Brahmand operates with one kala of power, then the souls many generations downstream of him operate with proportionately less. This is the natural law of creation in our Brahmand.

Souls of Eight to Ten Kalas

And yet — Bapuji teaches — there are souls present in our world who carry eight kalas, ten kalas, of soul power. These are not souls of solar system. They have come from elsewhere. They have travelled from other universes, other galaxies, other solar systems. In their original homes, the creative descent followed a different scale, and they emerged with vastly greater inherent power than is native to our region.

Such souls, dwelling in the higher subtle realms, sometimes feel the desire to take a single human birth on this earth — to have, just once, the human experience. They descend. They take a body. And then, almost without exception, they find themselves entangled in karma. The wheel of birth and death does not respect prior power.

How Powerful Souls Become Trapped

Once embodied, such souls accumulate karmic ledger like everyone else. They form attachments. They contract bonds. They develop lifetimes of impression (samskaras) through their human relationships and activities. And they fall into the company of other souls — sometimes pure, sometimes impure. The influence of company is enormous. Through prolonged association with degraded souls, even an originally powerful being can become coarsened — can develop demonic tendencies, can descend into the lower regions, can take birth in the asuric forms that our scriptures so vividly describe.

This is one of Bapuji's striking revelations. The great asuras of our spiritual history were not necessarily original inhabitants of our Brahmand. Some of them were exalted beings from other realms, eight or ten kalas in power, who took human form here, fell into bad company, accumulated heavy karma, and descended into the lower worlds in their next births. From such heights to such depths the soul can fall, when it forgets itself.

The Vastness of Time and the Smallness of Regression

To grasp how much time the soul has been wandering, consider this. The age of our Brahmand is measured in the lifespan of Brahma — one hundred years of Brahma. Of these, fifty have already passed. A single day of Brahma corresponds to four hundred and thirty-two crore years on our earth. A single year of Brahma corresponds to roughly 3.1104 trillion of our earthly years. Fifty years of Brahma, then, span an unimaginable expanse — more than 155 trillion earth years.

The souls that were brought forth in the early period of this present cycle were originally of great power. But across so vast a span, even they have undergone untold rounds of birth and death. They have entered countless human bodies. They have wandered through the eighty-four lakh yonis. The power they once held has been scattered through unending karmic transactions. By the time we encounter them today, they are often unrecognisable to themselves.

In this perspective, the offer of a regression session — to glimpse four or five past lives, to identify oneself with a particular figure, to receive a charming narrative — appears almost touchingly small. Even if the glimpses were entirely accurate, they would represent the merest sliver of what the soul has actually traversed. And, as we have seen, the glimpses are very often not accurate.

The soul's true history is too vast to be contained in any session. Only the soul that returns to its original purity can hold the whole of itself again — and that is not a matter of viewing but of dissolving.

BAPUJI INSIGHT

“Doosre Brahmandon se aayi hui aatmaye hain, jo powerful hain, galaxy se aayi hui aatmaye — 8-10 kala wali aatma hain.”

“Souls have travelled here from beyond our Brahmand — from other galaxies, other universes, other solar systems. These souls carry inherent power of eight or even ten kalas. They came down out of curiosity or for the experience of human birth, but once embodied here, they too become entangled in karma like everyone else.”

CHAPTER TWELVE

How Viewing Past Lives Creates New Karma

We come now to one of the most subtle and important teachings in this entire body of wisdom. It is a teaching that the regression industry never speaks of, and that few seekers have ever paused to consider. Yet without it, no honest assessment of regression is complete.

Where attention goes, energy flows. Where energy flows, karma is formed.

This is the core of Bapuji's principle. The act of attending to something is not neutral. It engages the consciousness. It directs energy. And wherever consciousness directs sustained energy, karma is the inevitable result.

Re-Activation of Dormant Karma

Old karmic samskaras lie dormant in the akashic record. They are not perpetually active. They wait, in a sleeping state, until the conditions are right for their ripening. In their sleeping state they are, in a sense, inert.

When the soul, through regression or through any other deliberate viewing, focuses attention upon a past-life event, that dormant karma is reactivated. It is as if a wind has been blown upon the embers of a fire that had nearly died. The samskara stirs. It re-engages the consciousness. It begins again to exert its pull.

In this way, the act of viewing a past life is rarely a passive observation. It is an interaction. The consciousness that views and the karmic seed that is viewed re-establish their connection. Energy flows along that connection. New karma is the fruit.

New Karmic Threads from Old Reactions

There is a further dimension. When the seeker, viewing a past-life scene, reacts to it — with sorrow, with anger, with attachment, with regret — the reaction itself spins a new karmic thread. It does not matter that the original event is centuries old. The reaction is occurring now. It is taking place in the present consciousness of the present soul. Therefore the karma generated by it is also present, fresh, real, and binding.

This is one reason that many seekers report feeling more disturbed, more emotionally entangled, more bound to themes from their past, after extensive regression work — not lighter and freer as the marketing of such sessions would have them expect. The dormant has been awakened, and the sleeping has been stirred, and the heart that came to be unburdened has instead been further weighted.

The Trap of Identification

There is also the trap of identification. To watch a past-life scene and conclude, I was that person — even silently within oneself — is to strengthen dehbhav (body-consciousness) and janmabhav (birth-consciousness). It is to invest one's identity in another body, in another era, as though the soul were defined by its previous costumes. Bapuji explains this with an example: if an intelligent woman starts seeking truth about old lifetimes, it can have a devastating effect. For instance, a student in this lifetime finds out that in past lives she was a devdasi (a woman ritually dedicated to a temple and its rituals) — and such a revelation can have an adverse effect in this lifetime. The pain of past lives will have negative effect.

But the soul is not its costumes. The atma is pure, eternal, deathless, untouched. To say “I was a king” or “I was a sage” is to place the unchanging soul into a costume it has long since shed. Such identification runs directly contrary to the central teaching of atma-gyan, which is that the soul is none of these forms — neither the present body nor the past body nor any of the bodies still to come.

Curiosity as a Subtle Bondage

And finally, the very desire to know one's past lives is itself a subtle karmic act. Curiosity is not free. The intense urge to peer backward, to discover, to identify, to claim — all of this is the activity of the mind, and the mind in its activity continues to bind the soul to the limited rather than freeing it for the boundless.

Bapuji's atma-gyan invites the soul into Behad — the boundless. To preoccupy oneself with the contents of past births is to remain within the bounded. It is to cling to the small story of personal history when the great expanse of the eternal soul is open and waiting.

The Real Direction

The teaching of Behad Gyan therefore points in a different direction altogether. It does not say to the seeker, “Look back into your past lives and study them carefully.” It says rather, “Stand as the eternal soul. Recognise that all those past costumes are not you. Allow what has been recorded in the karan sharir to dissolve, without being personally re-engaged. Move forward as the unbounded atma — not backward as the bounded character.”

This is the deeper alternative. It is to that alternative — and to its central practice, karmic delete — that we now turn.

BAPUJI INSIGHT

*“Jahan dhyān, wahan urja; jahan urja, wahan karm.
Past life regression karne wale log aksar halka feel karne ke bajaye naye emotional patterns mein phans jaate hain.”*

“Where attention goes, energy flows; where energy flows, karma is formed. Those who undergo past life regression often find themselves, paradoxically, not lighter but heavier. Instead of release, they become entangled in fresh emotional patterns awakened by the very act of viewing. Dormant karmic seeds are reactivated, and new threads of karma are spun by the seeker's reactions.”

CHAPTER THIRTEEN

Karmic Delete — The Path of True Liberation

If the path of viewing the past is fraught with deception and reactivation, what then is the path that genuinely liberates? Bapuji's answer is direct: not the viewing of karma, but the deletion of karma.

This is the central practice of Behad Gyan. Karmic delete — the dissolution of every karmic record that lies stored in the karan sharir — is the foundation of liberation. Without it, no soul can finally come to rest. With it, every other spiritual gain becomes possible.

Why Deletion Is Necessary

Consider the logic. So long as even a single karmic samskara remains stored within the soul's archive, rebirth is inevitable. The soul will be drawn back into a new body to settle that record, to undergo that fruit, to play out the consequence. As long as the archive has entries, the play will continue.

Liberation, then, is not the achievement of a particularly fortunate next birth, however desirable. It is the dissolution of the entire archive. It is the return of the soul to its original, pure, unmarked state — the state of pure consciousness, untouched by any record, free of every imprint.

Why Param Shanti Requires a Clean Vessel

There is also a more intimate reason. Param Shanti — supreme peace — cannot be experienced by a soul that is laden with karmic residue. As pure water cannot be held in a soiled vessel, so the vibration of supreme peace cannot rest upon a consciousness that is still cluttered with the imprints of countless lives.

The vessel must first be cleaned. The records must be deleted. Only then can the silence that is Param Shanti — that immeasurable stillness — naturally and effortlessly arise. To seek Param Shanti without first attending to the karmic vessel is to seek to fill an unwashed cup.

“Param Shanti asambhav hai karmon ke saath — jaise gande bartan mein shuddh jal nahi rakha ja sakta, vaise hi karmon se bhari aatma mein param shanti ki anubhuti nahi ho sakti. Pehle bartan saaf karna hoga.”

“Param Shanti — supreme peace — cannot be experienced by a soul still laden with karmic residue. As pure water cannot be held in a soiled vessel, so the vibration of supreme peace cannot rest upon a consciousness cluttered with the imprints of countless lives. The vessel must first be cleaned. The records must be deleted.”

Akashic Records and the Roots of Suffering

It is also from these stored records that the difficulties of the present life arise. Our chronic illnesses, our recurring disappointments, our troubled relationships, our patterns of failure — most of these are not random, nor merely the product of present circumstance. They are the precipitation of stored karmic seeds, ripening in their season.

This is why surface-level remedies, however earnest, often fail to bring lasting relief. They address symptoms, not roots. The symptom may be pacified for a time, but the root, undeleted, will produce new symptoms in its turn. Only when the root is dissolved does the precipitation finally cease.

How Karmic Delete Becomes Possible

Karmic delete is not a technique that can be performed by a regression therapist, nor by any external practitioner. It cannot be accomplished by viewing the past, by analysing it, by re-feeling it. These approaches, as we have seen, merely reactivate what they touch.

Karmic delete is performed by the soul itself, established in atma-swaroop — the recognition of itself as eternal soul rather than as body or mind — and drawing power from its yog with the formless Supreme. When the soul stands in its own true form, in conscious connection with Param Atma, it accesses a power that is sufficient to dissolve even the deep records of the karan sharir.

Bapuji teaches this directly. In the path of gyan — knowledge — it is genuinely possible to delete the karmic record. The vikarmas, the negative karmic seeds, can be destroyed. The bondage of countless births can be dissolved. The soul can become karmaateet — beyond karma — and rise into its original freedom.

From Mahabhogi to Mahayogi

This is one of the most beautiful possibilities Bapuji opens for us. By the strength of atma-gyan, even a soul deeply enmeshed in worldly experience — a mahabhogi, one accustomed to the indulgences of life — can become a mahayogi, one established in the highest yog. The transformation is not gradual over many lifetimes; in the strength of true atma-gyan, it can happen within a single life, even within a few years.

A soul advancing earnestly along this path, performing strong yog, dissolving the records as they arise, may complete in one or two years what would otherwise have taken many births. It cuts through the karmic ledger that was prepared for it five years hence and clears it now. It gradually empties the archive. It approaches the karmaateet state.

The Vision of Vishwa Parivartan

There is a still wider implication. When even one individual soul successfully deletes its karmic ledger, the vibration of that soul changes. And the vibration of one soul, transformed, ripples through the whole Universe. This is the subtle mechanism behind Vishwa Parivartan — world transformation. It does not begin with great campaigns or large institutions. It begins with the inner work of one soul, then another, then another, each cleaning its own archive and entering Param Shanti.

BAPUJI INSIGHT

“Atmaswaroop mein jab hum Parmatma se yog karte hain to power aati hai. Mahabhogi bhi mahayogi ban sakta hai. Gyan maarg mein keval yeh sambhav hai, bhakti maarg mein sambhav nahi hai.”

“When the soul stands established in its true form (atma-swaroop) and joins itself in yog with the formless Parmatma, immense power arises. By the strength of true atma-gyan, even a soul deeply absorbed in worldly enjoyment — a mahabhogi — can become a mahayogi, established in the highest yog. This complete transformation, including the dissolution of the karmic archive, is possible only on the path of gyan. The path of bhakti slowly purifies, but it is gyan that finally deletes.”

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

Behad Gyan — Beyond Past and Future

We have examined the inner architecture of the soul, the operations of subtle entities, the limitations and deceptions of regression, the unreliability of future predictions, the vastness of the soul's journey, the trap of identification, and the central practice of karmic delete. It remains now to gather these threads into a single, simple direction.

That direction is Behad — the boundless.

The Soul Is Boundless

The atma is not bounded. It is not bounded by this body or any past body. It is not bounded by any one role, any one relationship, any one religion, any one realm. It is not bounded by what was or by what shall be. It is, in its true nature, an unmarked, pure, infinite consciousness. All bounding is the work of Maya. The body is a bound. The mind is a bound. The collected memories of past lives are a bound. The anticipations of future lives are a bound. To dwell in any of these is to dwell in the bounded, and to forget the boundless that is one's own true self.

Past and Future Are Both Bounds

This is why the seeker who pursues past lives, however sincerely, ends up tightening the very bonds he came to loosen. He gives himself a story; he gives himself an identity; he gives himself a sequence of dramatic costumes. None of these is the soul. All of them are bounded forms. To attach the eternal soul to them is to misunderstand the nature of the soul itself.

The same is true of the seeker who pursues knowledge of the future. Future imaginings, future plans, future fears — all are bounded. To live within them is to live within the bounded mind, not within the boundless atma.

The Method of Bapuji

Bapuji's method is not to view the past, nor to predict the future. It is to delete the past without re-experiencing it, and to allow the future to arrive freely. This is achieved through several inseparable practices.

First, the seeker establishes himself in Behad Gyan — the recognition of the boundless. He no longer thinks of himself as a finite character with a finite history. He knows himself as the eternal atma, beyond all bodies and all eras.

Second, he identifies himself as atma, not as body or mind. Even when the body acts and the mind moves, he remembers that he is the witness behind both — the unchanging consciousness within which both appear.

Third, he abides in the vibration of Param Shanti. He does not chase peace; he rests in it. He becomes a steady presence of supreme stillness, allowing this vibration to do its work upon his subtle and causal bodies.

Fourth, he allows karmic records to release without identifying with them. As samskaras arise, he does not re-engage. He does not enter the drama. He does not say this is mine. He allows the record to surface, to be witnessed in pure awareness, and to dissolve. In this way the karan sharir is gradually emptied without the seeker becoming entangled in what is being released.

The Discipline of Now

This spiritual path is simple in one way. It does not need special healers, expensive sessions, or dramatic experiences. The seeker only needs to start living as a soul instead of identifying only with the body and worldly role.

But in another way, this path is very difficult. It requires constant soul-awareness every day. It requires avoiding old emotional dramas, fear about the future, and attachment to body-consciousness.

The seeker must slowly build deep yog with the formless Supreme Almighty Authority. Through silence, remembrance, and spiritual practice, old karmic records gradually begin to dissolve.

Transformation Through Atma Gyan

Bapuji repeatedly explains that souls can destroy karmic bondage through:

Atma Gyan, Yog, Atma Swaroop awareness, Vikarma Vinash Shakti and deep spiritual awakening.

When karmic bondage finishes completely, the soul may rise beyond lower subtle bondage and eventually move toward higher lokas or Paramdham.

If no bondage remains at all, the soul becomes fully subtle, point-like, and liberated from repeated birth and death.

Understanding Karma Requires Behad Ki Buddhi

Bapuji says that understanding karmic records inside the Karan Sharir requires an extremely vast intellect — “Behad ki Buddhi.” Only those with expanded spiritual understanding can fully grasp how karma, rebirth, subtle worlds, and soul journeys operate across infinite time. The seeker who walks this path will not have a dramatic story to tell. He will simply, gradually, become free. And his freedom, more than any story, will be the testimony.

BAPUJI INSIGHT

“Ek individual jab apne karm delete karta hai, to uski vibration badalti hai, aur woh vibration poore Brahmand ko prabhavit karti hai. Yahi Vishwa Parivartan ka sukshma mechanism hai.”

“When even one soul successfully deletes its karmic ledger, the vibration of that soul changes. And the vibration of one transformed soul ripples through the entire Brahmand. This is the subtle mechanism behind Vishwa Parivartan — world transformation. It does not begin with great campaigns; it begins with one soul cleaning its own archive and entering Param Shanti.”

Bapuji Insights

“Hypnotize karne ke liye jo power chahiye, woh sukshma jagat ki atma, hypnotize karne walon ke saath hoti hain. Saakar mein hypnotize karne wala jo saakari manushya hai woh act karta hai. Practical mein karya sukshma jagat ki atma isko raze maarkar hypnotize karate hain.”

“The power required to hypnotise another being does not belong to the visible practitioner. The subtle entities attached to him are the ones who actually possess that power. The visible practitioner only acts the role; in practical truth, it is the subtle entities who, by directing their rays, accomplish the hypnotic state.”

“Door baithe tumhe woh atma aayegi, woh raze maarkar usko — uska atma ke, karan sharir mein jo record pada data hai, woh uska atma ko emerge karwayegi yani yaad karwayegi.”

“Even from a great distance, the subtle entity comes to you. It directs rays (raze) upon your atma. Through these rays, the data lying recorded within your karan sharir is brought forth into your awareness — not by your own remembrance, but by the entity causing that recorded material to surface.”

INSIGHT 3

“Past life regression jo hai woh bahut log kara rahe hain. Tumhe hypnotize karte hain, to hypnotize karte-karte, karan sharir mein record sara data emerge kara lete hain, dikhate hain, sukshma mein.”

“Many people are conducting past life regression today. They hypnotise the seeker, and through prolonged hypnosis they cause some of the data recorded within the karan sharir (causal body) to surface as imagery and feeling within the subtle body.”

“Sukshma sharir ke saat layer (partein) hote hain. Regression ke dauran atmaye aksar bahut gehri nahi jaatin aur keval pehle, doosre ya teesre layer tak hi pahunch paati hain.”

“The sukshma sharir (subtle body) is composed of seven distinct layers, each finer and more interior than the one before. During a regression session, the entities operating through the practitioner do not usually reach the deeper layers. They access only the first, second, or at most the third — the surface chambers, where impressions are mixed and easily distorted.”

INSIGHT 5

“Karan sharir mein anekon janmon ka record hota hai. Yahi record dheere-dheere sukshma sharir ki parton mein aata hai.”

“Within the karan sharir (causal body) lies the immense record of countless births — every form the soul has taken, every realm it has visited, every karmic seed it has sown. Slowly, this record filters upward into the layers of the subtle body, and from there expresses itself in the gross body as our circumstances, relationships, and experiences.”

“Karan sharir se jo record sukshma sharir mein aate hain, unmein bhi galat baatein ho sakti hain. Un records ko bhi 'twist' karke pesh kiya ja sakta hai ya jhooth bola ja sakta hai.”

“Even the records that move from the causal body into the outer layers of the subtle body are not always presented faithfully. They can be twisted, distorted, and overlaid with falsehood by the lower entities that already inhabit the seeker. By the time these records emerge as speech during a session, they have often passed through many layers of distortion.”

INSIGHT 7

“Aksar jis vyakti ka regression ho raha hota hai, uske andar pehle se hi kai bhoot-pret baithe hote hain. Regression ke dauran vyakti ki apni atma ke bajaye yeh bhoot-pret bolne lagte hain aur jhooth bolte hain.”

“Most human beings already carry within them several bhoot-pret (lower entities) clinging to their inner field. During the hypnotic state, the seeker's own atma is suppressed, while these resident entities rise to the surface and begin to speak. What emerges from the seeker's mouth is therefore not his own true memory but the testimony of these entities — and they very often lie.”

“Kisi mandir mein jaane par wahan maujood anya atmaye vyakti mein pravesh kar sakti hain, aur hypnotize karne par wahi atmaye bolti hain, jabki vyakti ki apni atma dabi rehti hai.”

“When a seeker visits temples, dargahs, or other places of strong spiritual currents, foreign atmaye sometimes attach themselves and remain. Later, when the seeker is hypnotised, it is these foreign entities that come forward and speak — while the seeker's own atma stays suppressed in the background. The seeker reports their words as his own past-life memory, when in truth he is hearing the testimony of an entirely different soul.”

INSIGHT 9

“Past life regression mein aadha se zyada jhooth hota hai kyunki zyadatar atmaon mein bhoot-pret baithe hote hain jo ootpataang dawe karte hain. 'Third class quality' ki atmaye khud ko Karna, Yashoda ya Krishna dekhne ka dawa karti hain taaki woh prabhavshali lag saken.”

“More than half of what is delivered in past life regression is fabricated. Third-class quality souls boldly claim association with the highest figures of our spiritual heritage — Karna, Yashoda, Krishna — because such claims dazzle the listener and cement the practitioner's reputation. The narrative has the flavour of truth, but the connection to the seeker is invented.”

INSIGHT 10

“Koi bhi uchch lok (jaise Shiv Puri ya Vishnu Puri) ki 'angel' ya shuddh atma is tarah dharti par regression mein nahi aati.”

“No truly pure soul or angel from the higher realms — such as Shiv Puri or Vishnu Puri — descends to participate in earthly regression sessions. Such beings dwell in vibrations far above the dense atmosphere of these sessions, and their work upon the world moves through quieter, far more profound channels.”

INSIGHT 11

“Future dikhati hai to 99% galat hone ki sambhavna hai, kyunki future to bahut achanak badal jata hai.”

“When future predictions are offered through regression, there is nearly a ninety-nine percent likelihood that they will turn out wrong. The future is not a fixed script. It shifts suddenly with the conduct of souls, the intervention of higher authorities, and the changing currents of the subtle world.”

INSIGHT 12

“Bura karm phal bhi badal jata hai. Jaise koi atma gyan mein chal rahi, bahut achhi chal rahi hai... to aaj achha karm kar rahi hai to bhavishya ke saare karm phal khatm kar denge.”

“Even heavy karmic fruits prepared for the future can be transformed by present-day spiritual practice. A soul walking firmly upon the path of gyan, performing strong yog, can dissolve the karmic ledger that was due to ripen years later. The future bows to the conduct of the soul that knows itself.”

“Tumhara past mein, agle janm mein tum kya the, kya kutte-billi the, 84 lakh yoni mein bhatak kar aaye, aur rakshas the stree the ya purush the — woh sab kuch andar to record pade hai karan sharir mein.”

“What you were in your past lives — whether dog or cat, demon or human, woman or man, sage or king — every form the soul has worn through its passage across the eighty-four lakh yonis lies recorded within the karan sharir. The archive is immense, far beyond what any single regression session can begin to display.”

“Jab aatma koi bhi decision all of a sudden lekar suicide karti hai, to suicide karne wali aatmaon ko bahut bada dard bhogna padta hai marne ke baad. Kyunki aatmaye tadapti hain.”

“When a soul, in despair or sudden impulse, takes its own life, it does not escape its suffering — it intensifies it. Such souls undergo enormous torment after death. They have interrupted the natural ripening of their karmic ledger, and they remain restless and tormented, unable to settle, unable to ascend.”

INSIGHT 15

“Doosre Brahmandon se aayi hui aatmaye hain, jo powerful hain, galaxy se aayi hui aatmaye — 8-10 kala wali aatma hain.”

“Souls have travelled here from beyond our Brahmand — from other galaxies, other universes, other solar systems. These souls carry inherent power of eight or even ten kalas. They came down out of curiosity or for the experience of human birth, but once embodied here, they too become entangled in karma like everyone else.”

INSIGHT 16

“Jahan dhyan, wahan urja; jahan urja, wahan karm. Past life regression karne wale log aksar halka feel karne ke bajaye naye emotional patterns mein phans jaate hain.”

“Where attention goes, energy flows; where energy flows, karma is formed. Those who undergo past life regression often find themselves, paradoxically, not lighter but heavier. Instead of release, they become entangled in fresh emotional patterns awakened by the very act of viewing. Dormant karmic seeds are reactivated, and new threads of karma are spun by the seeker's reactions.”

“Param Shanti asambhav hai karmon ke saath — jaise gande bartan mein shuddh jal nahi rakha ja sakta, vaise hi karmon se bhari aatma mein param shanti ki anubhuti nahi ho sakti. Pehle bartan saaf karna hoga.”

“Atmaswaroop mein jab hum Parmatma se yog karte hain to power aati hai. Mahabhogi bhi mahayogi ban sakta hai. Gyan maarg mein keval yeh sambhav hai, bhakti maarg mein sambhav nahi hai.”

“When the soul stands established in its true form (atma-swaroop) and joins itself in yog with the formless Parmatma, immense power arises. By the strength of true atma-gyan, even a soul deeply absorbed in worldly enjoyment — a mahabhogi — can become a mahayogi, established in the highest yog. This complete transformation, including the dissolution of the karmic archive, is possible only on the path of gyan. The path of bhakti slowly purifies, but it is gyan that finally deletes.”

INSIGHT 19

“Ek individual jab apne karm delete karta hai, to uski vibration badalti hai, aur woh vibration poore Brahmand ko prabhavit karti hai. Yahi Vishwa Parivartan ka sukshma mechanism hai.”

“When even one soul successfully deletes its karmic ledger, the vibration of that soul changes. And the vibration of one transformed soul ripples through the entire Brahmand. This is the subtle mechanism behind Vishwa Parivartan — world transformation. It does not begin with great campaigns; it begins with one soul cleaning its own archive and entering Param Shanti.”

Glossary

A reference to the spiritual vocabulary used throughout these insights.

Atma — The eternal, deathless soul. Pure consciousness, the unchanging witness behind every body and every life. Distinct from the body and mind, the atma is the true Self.

Atma-gyan — Direct knowledge of the soul. Not intellectual understanding, but the lived recognition of oneself as atma rather than as body or mind. The foundation of liberation.

Atma-swaroop — The soul established in its own true form. The state in which the seeker abides as pure consciousness, no longer identified with body or mind.

Atma Vigyan — The science of the soul. The systematic understanding of the soul's nature, journey, bodies, and liberation as taught in the Behad Gyan tradition.

Antim Mati So Gati — A foundational principle: the orientation of mind in the final moments of life determines the destination of the soul. Whatever fills consciousness at the moment of leaving the body shapes the next birth.

Asur — A demonic being inhabiting the lower realms. Often a soul that, through bad company and accumulated negative karma, has descended from a higher state into a coarser one across successive lifetimes.

Behad — The boundless, the infinite. The unlimited nature of the soul and of true reality, beyond the bounded forms of body, mind, and circumstance.

Behad Gyan — Boundless wisdom. The body of teachings revealed by Bapuji that calls the soul beyond every limitation into recognition of its infinite nature.

Bhakti — Devotion. The path of love and surrender to the formless Supreme. A purifying path that softens karmic burdens, though it does not, by itself, fully delete them.

Bhoot-Pret — Earthbound lower entities. Souls that have died as ordinary humans and remain in the lower atmospheres because they lack the spiritual power to ascend. They often attach themselves to living beings and to unprotected practitioners.

Brahma — In our cosmology, the deity through whom the souls of this Brahmand were originally created. His lifespan of one hundred years measures the total age of this Brahmand.

Brahmand — The universe. In Bapuji's cosmology, our local universe is one Brahmand among many; powerful souls have come here from other Brahmands carrying inherent powers of eight to ten kalas.

Maha Brahmand — The greater cosmos containing many Brahmands. A larger order of creation beyond our local universe.

Param Maha Brahmand — The supreme cosmos, the highest order of creation, beyond even the Maha Brahmand.

Dehbhav — Body-consciousness. The sense of being identified with the physical body. Strengthened, paradoxically, by past-life regression, which invests the seeker's identity in still more bodies from earlier eras.

Dhanda — A business or commercial enterprise. Bapuji uses this word to describe what past life regression and ghost-removal have largely become — services sold for profit, regardless of spiritual truth.

Janmabhav — Birth-consciousness. The sense of being defined by one's birth, family, era, or past identities. Reinforced when seekers say “I was Karna” or “I was that person.”

Karan Sharir — The causal body. The deepest of the three bodies of the soul, in which the records of countless lifetimes are stored. Far beyond the reach of ordinary regression.

Karm / Karma — Action and its consequence. The seeds of past actions ripen into the conditions of future lives. The karmic ledger drives the cycle of birth and death.

Karmaateet — Beyond karma. The state of a soul whose karmic archive has been entirely dissolved. Such a soul is no longer compelled to take rebirth and may rise to the highest realms.

Vikarma — Negative karmic seeds. Particularly heavy karmic records that, until dissolved, continue to produce suffering across lifetimes.

Karmic Delete — The dissolution of stored karmic records within the karan sharir. The central practice of Behad Gyan and the only complete path to liberation.

Kala — A measure of inherent spiritual power. The formless Shiv of our Brahmand carries one kala; powerful souls from other Brahmands carry eight to ten kalas.

Lok — A realm or world. The spiritual cosmos contains many lokas, including Bhuvarek, Swarlok, Maharlok, Janalok, and Tapalok above this earth, and lower realms below.

Shiv Puri — The realm of Shiv. A high spiritual world where pure souls reside.

Vishnu Puri — The realm of Vishnu. Another high spiritual world from which pure souls do not descend into earthly regression sessions.

Param Dham — The supreme abode. The highest realm, where formless souls rest beyond all karmic bondage.

Maya — Illusion. The cosmic veil that binds souls to identification with body, mind, and the limited rather than the boundless atma.

Nirakari — Formless. The aspect of the soul or of the Supreme that is beyond all form, in which subtle entities can operate across vast distances simultaneously.

Param Shanti — Supreme peace. The vibration of the soul restored to its original purity. Cannot be experienced while karmic records remain stored within.

Paramatma / Parmatma — The Supreme Soul. The formless Supreme with whom the individual atma joins itself in yog.

Raze (Rays) — Subtle rays of energy directed by sukshma jagat entities. The means by which they cause data to surface within a seeker's atma during regression and other practices.

Sankalp — A firm spiritual resolve. The settled inner determination of a refined soul, capable of influencing even subtle world plans.

Sanskara / Samskara — Impressions stored within the soul from past actions and experiences. They lie dormant until conditions awaken them, at which point they ripen as new circumstances or are reactivated by deliberate viewing.

Sangat — Company, association. The influence of those one keeps company with, which can elevate a soul or, conversely, drag a powerful soul into degraded forms across lifetimes.

Sato Pradhan — Predominantly pure. A quality of soul in whom the refined, luminous aspect (sattva) predominates. Such souls reside in the higher realms and do not participate in regression sessions.

Tamo Pradhan — Predominantly impure. A quality of soul in whom the heavy, inert, dense aspect (tamas) predominates. Such souls remain bound to the lower atmospheres and are the entities that actually speak in regression sessions.

Sthul Sharir — The gross body. The physical body, the outermost of the three bodies of the soul.

Sukshma Sharir — The subtle body. The intermediate body composed of seven distinct layers, lying between the gross body and the causal body.

Sthul Jagat — The gross or physical world. The world of the five elements and visible forms.

Sukshma Jagat — The subtle world. The unseen realm of subtle entities that constantly influences and operates the gross world.

Vishwa Parivartan — World transformation. The mission of Vishwa Parivartak Ishwariya Vidhyalay — the transformation of the world through the inner transformation of individual souls.

Yog — Union. The practice of joining the individual soul with the formless Supreme. The source of the power required for karmic delete.

Yoni — A species or birth-form. The eighty-four lakh yonis are the eighty-four lakh species of life through which a wandering soul may pass — animal, bird, insect, human, demonic, and others.

84 Lakh Yonis (Chaurasi Lakh Yoni) — The traditional count of life-forms across which a soul in karmic bondage may take birth.

“Gyan Daan Maha Daan”

Sharing Knowledge is the Highest Charity

— Bapuji Dashrathbhai Patel

Every thought, every emotion, every lifetime leaves an imprint upon the soul.

What we call destiny is often the awakening of forgotten karmic memories.

The soul has travelled across countless births, yet true freedom begins only when the karmic records dissolve into Paramshanti.

Beyond memory lies liberation.
