About Bapuji

Bapuji (full name: Bapuji Dashrathbhai Patel, also lovingly called “Dadaji” by the younger generation) was born in 1956 in the small village of Akhaj in the Mehsana district of Gujarat. However, he spent his childhood in another village named Ambasan, also located in the Mehsana district.

In the early part of his life, he was a highly successful lawyer. Later, he devoted his life to realising the supreme spiritual truth and bringing this divine knowledge forward for the welfare of humanity. Today, this supreme knowledge serves as a guiding light for true seekers to realise their ultimate destiny. It is a blessing of the highest divinity that the present time is witnessing the rise of this supreme spiritual knowledge, guiding souls on Earth to return to their original source.

Despite being raised in a very poor family and facing challenging circumstances, Bapuji had a deep desire to transform this sorrowful and suffering world into a better place. At the young age of six, he questioned God repeatedly, asking why God remained silent about the suffering of humanity. This intense longing to end human suffering eventually led him to attain the highest level of spirituality later in life.

Even as a child, Bapuji would spend hours alone in the fields, often neglecting his own comfort. Due to poverty, he would walk barefoot without shoes or sandals, frequently getting pricked by thorns. Many times, he would stay late in the fields and, on his way back home, encounter subtle world entities. These experiences sparked his interest in communicating with subtle world souls.

Bapuji was courageous from a young age, which helped him overcome many obstacles. Alongside his studies in chartered accountancy (CA), he gave tuition classes to support himself financially. Later, he completed his Bachelor of Law (LLB) degree and became a well-known lawyer in Ahmedabad.

In 1997, he established a spiritual institution called “Vishwa Parivartak Ishwariya Vidhyalay” in Chenpur, Ahmedabad, with the mission of transforming this mortal world, filled with suffering and disorder, into an eternal divine world of immortality. Smt. Sushma Tandon, lovingly known as “Maa,” worked alongside Bapuji in this grand divine mission.

To accomplish this mission, Bapuji worked tirelessly, dedicating all his resources to this divine purpose. During that time, he would deliver continuous spiritual discourses for up to 18 hours without rest. In these discourses, he explained the highest dimensions of divine knowledge, which he realised through deep meditation and divine vision in a state of superconsciousness. This knowledge goes beyond the imagination of the ordinary human mind.

Bapuji’s teachings cover a vast range of topics, including the types of celestial creators across different dimensions, the creation of our solar system, galaxy, and universe, and most importantly, the transcendental knowledge of the multiverse and realities beyond it. His knowledge is supremely profound and is intended for highly evolved seekers, referred to as “behad souls.” According to Bapuji, these behad souls will play a key role in transforming this mortal world into an eternal divine realm.

At present, Bapuji remains deeply engaged in intense meditation and samadhi for long hours. He does not meet anyone, as he is continuously immersed in his transcendental mission in a superconscious state.

Every soul on this Earth carries the same silent question deep within: Who am I? Where have I come from? Why am I here? The world around us rarely gives us time to sit with these questions. And when we do sit with them, the answers often feel distant, unclear, or locked inside complicated words.

This book has been created to bring one of the most important answers close to the heart of the common reader. It gently guides the soul from atma gyan — the knowledge that “I am a soul” — to atma swaroop — the living, direct experience of being a soul. Bapuji has revealed again and again that there is a vast difference between these two stages. Knowing about the soul is one thing. Actually experiencing the soul in light, power, and silence is something else entirely.

The teachings in this book have been gathered from Bapuji’s own discourses and presented in clean, beginner-friendly English. Nothing has been added. Nothing has been interpreted. The voice you will hear through these pages is Bapuji’s alone — steady, warm, and ancient in its depth.

May this book find the soul that has been searching. May the reader slowly move from thoughts about the soul to the direct feeling of the soul. And may the light of the Almighty Father of the Infinite shine through every seeker who opens these pages.

Overview

This book is an unhurried journey into one of the deepest subjects of spirituality — atma swaroop, the experience of soul consciousness. It is structured to take the reader step by step, starting from the very first question of life and gradually opening into the highest dimensions of inner experience.

The early chapters settle the foundation: Who am I? Where does the soul reside? What does it mean to truly know oneself as a soul? Here, Bapuji separates a key misunderstanding that holds many seekers back. Simply repeating “I am a soul, I am a soul” is not the same as experiencing the soul. One is thought. The other is light.

The middle chapters open the heart of the teaching — the matter of power. Soul consciousness is not an idea. It is a state that requires real spiritual energy. Bapuji shows, with great clarity, where this power comes from, and why connection with deities, saints, ancestors, or subtle beings cannot give what the soul is actually searching for. The soul needs the Almighty Powerhouse. Nothing less.

Later chapters move into the subtle mechanics of realisation — kundalini, Om, aagya chakra, sahasrara, and the opening of the third eye. Bapuji also reveals the deeper cosmology: infinite souls, children of the infinite, and the vast multiverse stretching up to G17 and beyond. They are for souls who came from far-away galaxies and who now, with the right knowledge, can remember their true origin.

The closing chapters gather the fruits of this journey: the signs of real soul consciousness, the life of a karmyogi who lives in the world without being tied to it, the vibrations of Paramshanti that transform home, office, and atmosphere, and the tender helpline of the Infinite Father who is always with the soul — never far, never silent.

The book may be read from beginning to end, or returned to chapter by chapter. Either way, the request from Bapuji is gentle and steady: remain light, remain loving, remain a seeker of the truth. Let the soul slowly begin to shine as it was always meant to shine.

Chapter I

Who Am I? The First Question

Before a seeker can walk towards any spiritual truth, one question must be asked with full honesty: Who am I?

Bapuji says that, in today's world, almost every person has at least a basic common sense to recognise: "I am a soul." This awareness is not limited to any one religion or culture. Muslims know about the soul and call it Ruh. Christians too know about the soul. Across traditions, across languages, people carry this quiet understanding that something conscious within them is more than the body.

So the starting point is not unknown to the reader. It is already there, waiting to be awakened. The question is simply whether this awareness remains at the level of words, or whether it is allowed to become a living, direct experience.

A soul is not just an idea. It is not just a belief. It is the conscious presence that governs the body itself. Every breath, every thought, every feeling, every moment of waking and sleeping is supported by this quiet power within. The body is the instrument. The soul is the one who uses the instrument.

Yet, despite having this understanding, science still does not have the equipment to prove the existence of the soul. Science cannot measure it. Science cannot detect it. In fact, science does not know anything about the soul. In modern thought, consciousness is sometimes spoken of — a kind of awareness, a kind of subtle knowing. But the true power of the soul, its origin, its journey, its destination, remain outside the reach of laboratory instruments.

This is why this journey must be walked inwardly. It cannot be borrowed from science. It cannot be imported from textbooks. The soul can only be discovered by the soul itself.

♦ Insight: “Sabse pehle hume samajhna padega ki main kaun hoon?”

“First of all, we need to understand — who am I?”

The first question — Who am I? — is the gentle doorway. As soon as a seeker begins to live with this question, a slow shift begins. Attention starts turning from the outside world to the inner presence. Life starts to feel less like random activity and more like a quiet search for the One behind everything the senses are doing.

This book begins here. Not with complicated theories. Not with heavy rituals. Only with the silent honesty of this single question, allowed to grow day by day, until the soul itself begins to answer.

Chapter II

What Is a Soul? The Three States

Once the seeker accepts “I am a soul,” a deeper question naturally arises: what exactly is a soul? Is it a body? Is it a thought? Is it a feeling? Bapuji answers this with great precision. The soul is not the physical body. The soul is not the subtle body. The soul is not the causal body. The soul is none of these. The soul is the witness of all three.

In Bapuji’s own words, the soul is only a point of param prakash — supreme divine light. It is pure power, extremely subtle, beyond what any human eye can see and beyond what any scientific instrument can detect. It has no physical weight. It has no size that can be measured. It is simply a conscious point of light.

Soul and Supreme Soul — One Light

Bapuji reveals a profound truth: in the pure nirakar (formless) state, there is no real difference between the soul and the Supreme Soul. The Supreme Father, the Paramatma, is made of param prakash. The souls he creates are also made of param prakash. As is the Father, so are the children.

This is why a soul in its nirakar form can rightly say Shivoham — “I am Shiv.” The statement Aham Brahmasmi belongs here too. In that original state, the child carries the very nature of the Father. Nothing covers the soul. Nothing separates it. It is simply light within light.

♦ Insight: “Ekdam nirakari stage mein atma ke saath koi bhi baahar ka aavaran nahi hota... aur us param

prakash ki nirakari atma ko hi Paramatma kehte hain."

"In the completely formless stage, no outer covering remains around the soul — and this supreme-light, formless soul itself is called Paramatma."

The Three States of the Soul

Bapuji explains that the soul passes through three states, one leading naturally to the next:

First is the nirakar state — the formless, pure-light state. The soul rests in Paramdham, the Supreme Abode. It has no body. It has no buddhi. It has no sanskars. It simply is. This is also called the beej roop — the seed form — and the anadi swaroop — the eternal original state. Scripture calls this poorn brahm, the complete form, because the soul is fully itself, without loss, without covering.

Second is the aakari state — the subtle, formed state. Here the soul begins to take divine elemental body. In our galaxy, for example, Maha Shiv created countless Shiv through a single divine affirmation. Each such Shiv appeared as a break-up of formless power. At this stage, the soul's body is made of param tattva — the supreme elements. This is the level of Shivpuri, where the karan sharir alone exists, built entirely of param akash, param vayu, and param agni.

Third is the sakaar state — the visible, physical state. As the soul descends further, its energy gradually reduces, and additional coverings gather around it. At the level of Vishnupuri, roughly fifty percent of the param tattva is replaced by ordinary elements. The subtle body begins to form around the causal body. Descending further to the swarga realms, the body becomes one of three elements — akash, vayu, and agni. Finally, when the soul enters mrityuloka, the mortal world, it takes on a body made of all five gross elements.

Our Brahmand Is Different

Bapuji shares an important detail that most readers will not have heard before. In our own brahmand (Solar System), souls did not pass through a long nirakar beginning. Brahma created the seven saptarishis directly in aakar form — seven subtle forms emerged from him, resembling his own. Because of this, the souls of our brahmand were born with a form already attached. For them, returning to the full nirakar stage requires immense spiritual effort. Souls in other brahmands that began in the formless realm have a different journey.

The Coverings Gather One by One

As the soul descends from higher to lower dimensions, its soul power reduces and its coverings above soul increases. Every action that a soul performs is recorded in the causal body. Over time, this record grows heavy. Around the causal body, a subtle-element covering forms. Around that, the physical-element covering forms. The soul itself never changes its nature — it remains pure light — but the layers around it grow thicker and thicker.

Bapuji gives a beautiful summary in the ancient phrase yatha brahmand tatha pind — “as is the universe, so is the body.” Whatever constitutes the atmosphere of a particular loka also constitutes the body of the souls living there. If a soul is in the realm of supreme elements, its body is made of supreme elements. If it is in the realm of three elements, its body is of three elements. If it is in the five-element world, its body is of five elements. The outer shell always matches the world around it.

Why the Soul Is Called the Witness

This entire teaching answers a question that scripture has long asked. Why is the soul called the witness — the sakshi — of the three bodies? Because the soul is not any of them. The soul is separate. When the soul was formless (Nirakari), there was no subtle body (Sukshma Sharir), no causal body (Karan Sharir), no physical body (Sthool Sharir) at all. These bodies came later, added layer by layer. Because the soul is distinct from all three, it can stand behind them as their silent observer. The bodies act. The soul watches.

When a seeker begins to experience atma swaroop, this witness-nature becomes alive. The soul starts to recognise, from within, that the body is not me; the subtle body is not me; even the causal body with all its records is not me. I am the light that was there before all of these, and I will be there after all of these.

Returning to the Original State

Bapuji reminds the reader that the same journey can be travelled in reverse. If a soul fell from nirakar to aakar to sakaar, it can also rise back from sakaar to aakar to nirakar. This return is not mechanical. It happens through knowledge, remembrance and the steady inflow of divine power. Each covering dissolves in its own time. Each layer becomes transparent under the light of param prakash.

The soul that remembers its original state — as a point of pure divine light, as a child of the Supreme Father, as one with the Supreme in its formless nature — begins to travel upward. Slowly, the physical body feels lighter. Slowly, the subtle body refines. Slowly, the causal body is charged. And one day, the soul stands once again in its seed form, in the Supreme Abode, where it always belonged.

This is the quiet direction of every teaching in this book. To recognise the soul as it truly is, in its simplest, purest, most luminous form — and to begin, gently, the long journey home.

Chapter III

Where the Soul Resides

Once the seeker accepts that “I am a soul,” the next natural question arises: where inside me does this soul actually live? Bapuji answers this very simply and very precisely. The soul resides at the centre point of our forehead — in between the eyes, at the exact place where tilak is traditionally applied.

This is not a random spot. This is the subtle seat of the soul. It is from here that the soul governs the entire body. Every movement of the hand, every thought in the mind, every word from the mouth — all of this is connected to this one silent point.

When Bapuji describes this, there is no complication. He does not ask the seeker to imagine anything fantastic. He simply points to a place that every human being can easily bring their attention to. Close the eyes. Feel the space between the eyebrows. That is the centre. That is the residence.

In spiritual practice, meditators have long focused on this inner point. Devotees place a mark there. Saints describe their inner light as rising from this very spot. The body may be large, but the soul is small — very small — and its home is in this one still centre. The forehead is the throne, and the soul is the silent king who sits upon it.

At the level of pure form, Bapuji reveals that a conscious soul is just like a sparkling diamond; just like a white shining star. When the soul is full of its original power, it radiates light. When the soul is weakened by the burdens of countless births, it still resides in the same place — but its light grows dim. The seat does not change. What changes is how much light the soul is able to hold.

♦ Insight: “Atma hamare mind ke centre point mein rehkar body ko chalati hai — maathe ke beech mein.”

“The soul governs our body from the centre point of the mind — at the middle of the forehead.”

Therefore the practice is deeply natural. The seeker is not asked to travel to any distant pilgrimage first. The seeker is asked only to travel two inches inwards, to the centre of the forehead, and to rest the attention there.

From this simple, still point, the entire inner journey begins.

Chapter IV

Atma Gyan and Atma Swaroop

This is perhaps the most important chapter in the entire book. Bapuji places a clean, careful line between two stages that most seekers confuse: atma gyan and atma swaroop.

Atma gyan is the knowledge of the soul. It is the understanding that “I am a soul, and the soul resides in the middle of the eyebrows.” This is mental knowledge. It can be read in a book. It can be heard in a discourse. It can be repeated on the lips.

Atma swaroop is something else. It is not an idea. It is not a thought. It is the direct experience — the living feeling — that “I truly am a soul.” In Bapuji’s own words: soul consciousness means to experience and see practically that I am a soul.

There is great difference between the two. Simply saying “I am a soul” is not the same as having experienced atma swaroop. A seeker may repeat this line a thousand times. Thoughts and mental resolutions may quiet down for a short while. This is a helpful first lesson. But it is not realisation.

Bapuji explains why. For the soul to actually feel itself as a soul, something deeper must happen inside. The soul must receive light. The soul must receive power. And this cannot happen by repetition alone.

♦ Insight: “Sirf ‘Main atma hoon, main atma hoon’ bolne se koi atma ko realize nahi kar sakta.”

“Only by saying ‘I am a soul, I am a soul,’ no one can realise the soul.”

This is why Bapuji treats this difference with such importance. Many sincere seekers live their entire life in atma gyan without ever reaching atma swaroop. They know the teaching. They can explain it beautifully to others. But when they look inside themselves, the soul still feels heavy, the mind still runs, the atmosphere still disturbs, the body still pulls the attention away.

Real realisation is practical. It is not only about understanding. It is about seeing — seeing oneself as a soul, feeling oneself as a soul, living as a soul. This is the stage that high quality souls can master. It is the stage that turns knowledge into light. And in the chapters that follow, Bapuji shows the way.

Dehbhav and Atmabhav — A Quiet Shift

Bapuji gently shows how close this truth already is to daily speech. When a person says, “This is my body,” they have already admitted something important. My body implies an owner. Who is the owner? The soul. In that very sentence, the real speaker is the soul and the body is spoken of as a possession — not as identity.

Yet most human beings live as if they are the body. This is called dehbhav — body-consciousness. All pain and pleasure, all fear and craving, flow from this single misunderstanding. Bapuji’s whole teaching on soul consciousness is a gentle invitation to reverse this. To move from dehbhav to atmabhav — soul-awareness. To recognise, in every moment, “I am a soul. The body is only my instrument of action in this world.”

Becoming Sakshi Drishta — The Witness

As atmabhav deepens, a beautiful inner state begins to awaken. Bapuji calls it sakshi drashta — the witness, the silent observer. The soul begins to watch the mind without being shaken by it. It watches thoughts rise and fall like clouds across a still sky. It watches emotions come and go. It even watches the body perform its daily work — eating, walking, speaking — without being lost in any of it.

This witness-state does not arrive through force. It arrives naturally, once the soul has begun to feel its own atma swaroop and has started to receive real power from the Almighty. Desires that once felt irresistible begin to lose their heat. Bapuji uses two precious phrases here: iccha matram avidya — the recognition that every desire is only a form of ignorance — and nashtomoha smriti labdha — the return of true memory once delusion has fallen away.

♦ Insight: “Atm swaroop ki anubhooti karo, sakshi drashta aa hi jayenge.”

“Experience atma swaroop, and the witness-state will arise on its own.”

Atama-Darshan — Seeing the Soul

Beyond atma gyan and even beyond the initial experience of atma swaroop, there lies a still deeper stage — atama-darshan, the actual inner vision of the soul. Bapuji explains that atama-darshan is not merely knowing about the soul, and not merely feeling like a soul. It is seeing oneself clearly in the original nirakar form — as a point of param prakash, resting in the beej roop, the eternal seed stage.

This is rare. Bapuji says openly that atama-darshan in a human body is very difficult, and comes only after a deep longing has taken root in the heart. The seeker reaches a point where mind (Mann) and Intellect (buddhi) both cry out together: “I must see my own soul. I must know who I truly am, where I came from, and why I came here.” When this longing grows sincere enough, and the connection with the Almighty becomes strong and steady, this deeper vision becomes possible.

The reader need not be troubled if this stage feels far away. The path is gradual. First comes atma gyan. Then atma swaroop begins. Then the witness-state settles in. And one day, in its own time, the inner light stands revealed to itself. Until then, the sincere practice of simply feeling “I am a soul, I am receiving power from my Father” continues to prepare the ground. Every moment of such practice brings that deeper seeing silently closer.

Before that journey continues, the seeker must hold this distinction clearly. To know is one thing. To experience is another. And to see is something deeper still. The purpose of this entire book is to move the reader, gently and steadily, from knowing, to experiencing, to finally seeing the soul as it truly is.

Chapter V

Truth About Shivoham and Aham Brahmasmi

To understand soul consciousness deeply, one must look at how different spiritual traditions have tried to express it. In the scriptures and in the paths of devotion, several profound sentences have been preserved — among them, Shivoham and Aham Brahmasmi. Bapuji explains these with clarity and compassion.

The soul is a creation of God. The God of our Solar System is Shiv. And the creation of Shiv naturally resembles Shiv himself. As Bapuji gently says, like father, like children. This is why a soul can say Shivoham, Shivoham — “I am Shiv, I am Shiv.” The children carry the title of the father.

According to scripture, the soul can also be of Brahm swaroop. If the soul is like Brahm, and Brahm means light, then the soul too is a form of light. God is light. The soul resembles light. This is why seekers across ages have declared Aham Brahmasmi — “I am like God, I am one with the light.” Souls with the knowledge of Brahm realise themselves in the form of light.

The Three Forms

Bapuji explains that Shiv has three forms. The first is the incorporeal (Nirakari) Shiv, who resides in the Supreme Abode, called Paramdham. This formless supreme presence is what many traditions call God. The one who admits this incorporeal form is called Brahm — for Brahm means incorporeal, light itself. Those who worship incorporeal Shiv are worshipping Brahm. To give this formless reality a shape for human worship, Jyotirlingas were first created. From Jyotirlingas, Shivalingas were made. And finally, the corporeal form of Shankar became known — the visible form through which the common devotee could feel the presence of the Almighty.

But Words Alone Are Not Enough

Bapuji now returns to his central teaching with beautiful honesty. By merely saying Shivoham or Brahmasmi, one cannot realise soul consciousness. These are profound declarations. They point to the highest truth. But declarations alone do not open the soul.

For realising soul consciousness, the soul needs power. This is Bapuji's unshakable message. A seeker may know Shivoham. A seeker may proudly say Aham Brahmasmi. But unless the soul is actually filled with divine light, these words remain on the surface of the mind.

♦ Insight: “‘Shivoham’ ya ‘Brahmasmi’ bolne se koi soul consciousness ko realize nahi kar sakta.”

“Merely by saying ‘Shivoham’ or ‘Brahmasmi,’ one cannot realise soul consciousness.”

In this way, Bapuji honours the scriptural truths while at the same time pointing beyond them. The words are not wrong. They are simply incomplete. They are signposts. The journey itself still has to be walked. And that journey, as the next chapters will show, depends entirely on the question of power.

Chapter VI

Why the Soul Needs Power

In the present age, Bapuji says with quiet directness, the soul has become very temporal. The soul has weakened. That is why most human beings, in their current state, do not have the inner power required for the realisation of atma swaroop.

When the soul is conscious and full of its original light, it is just like a sparkling diamond; just like a white shining star. But when the soul is weakened by countless births, by accumulated karmic records, by constant worldly engagement, that brilliance fades. The soul is still there, but it no longer shines.

This is the real reason why repetition alone does not work. A weak soul can say “I am a soul” a million times without experiencing anything. The mouth speaks, but the soul cannot respond, because the soul has lost the strength required to recognise itself.

Bapuji explains the remedy with complete clarity. For realisation of the soul, one must have connection with the Almighty. When the soul connects with the Almighty, the soul receives power. And only then does the soul shine. Only then does the seeker actually feel soul consciousness.

♦ Insight: “Jab atma Almighty se connect hoti hai, tab atma ko power milti hai aur woh shine karti hai — tab aapko atma swaroop, yaani soul consciousness, ka anubhav hota hai.”

“When the soul connects with the Almighty, it receives power and begins to shine — then you experience atma swaroop, soul consciousness.”

Why Karmic Records Block Realisation

There is a deeper mechanic at work here. The soul carries recordings of all past karmas — every deed, every thought, every intention, layered one upon another across many lifetimes. These recordings press down upon the soul’s natural light and power. Bapuji says that for realising soul consciousness, these inner burdens must be removed. And burdens of this depth cannot be removed by words. They can only be dissolved by divine power.

Even the great sages and monks of the past, who did penance for epochs to liberate the soul, struggled. Why? Because for salvation, the soul needs power. For realising soul consciousness, the soul also needs power. Without power, even intense effort can fall short. This is why Bapuji gently but firmly redirects every sincere seeker towards the real question: not “what should I say,” but “from where will I receive the power the soul is asking for?” Once that source is understood, everything in the journey begins to make sense. In the following chapters, this question gets answered very clearly.

Chapter VII

The Almighty — The True Powerhouse

Bapuji's answer to the question of power is direct, simple and uncompromising. The soul needs power. And power comes only from the Powerhouse.

When we connect with the Powerhouse, we receive power. If we remember those who do not have power, then nothing will happen. This sentence from Bapuji is the entire secret of spiritual practice placed in one short line. For this reason, Bapuji asks the seeker to understand who the Powerhouse actually is. The Powerhouse is the Supreme Almighty Authority — the incorporeal Supreme Father, the source of all creation. He is not one among many. He is the ocean of power from whom all other powers take their existence.

Connecting Directly

The instruction is both practical and tender. While eating, drinking, walking, working, wandering — at every moment — the seeker should quietly remember: I am a soul, conscious soul. The soul is in the form of white light, sparkling like a diamond, resting at the centre of the forehead. The soul governs this body. And this soul is now connecting to the Almighty Authority.

In that remembrance, the Almighty — who is the ocean of power — pours light into the soul. From the ocean, immense power can be received.

♦ Insight: “Soul consciousness mein rehkar Almighty ko yaad karo — Almighty se power milegi. Jab hum Powerhouse se connect hote hain, tab power aati hai.”

“Remember the Almighty while in soul consciousness — power will flow from the Almighty. When we connect with the Powerhouse, we receive power.”

In Relation with the Father

Bapuji then gives a beautiful, personal key. For the ordinary world, the Almighty may feel distant. But for the children of the infinite, the Almighty is intimately near — he is great-great grandfather. Realise that he is my Great-Great-grandfather. Feel that I am receiving power from him.

This relationship is not just a clever idea but a living thread. When a soul remembers in relationship — as a child remembers a loving father — the flow of power becomes much stronger. The heart softens. Love begins to rise. And through that love, the soul receives more than it ever could through formal repetition.

The seeker is therefore encouraged to carry this relationship through daily life. While eating. While drinking. While doing household work, office work, travelling — quietly inside, the soul is receiving shower from the Father. And along with receiving, the soul also begins to give — spreading vibrations of Paramshanti, supreme peace, into the surrounding atmosphere.

This is the double gain that Bapuji speaks of: you receive power, and you also make vibrations of supreme peace. Slowly, slowly, the soul moves into true soul consciousness. The aura itself becomes an aura of supreme peace.

And all of this begins with one simple inner decision — to stop connecting with weak sources, and to connect directly with the true Powerhouse.

Chapter VIII

Why Weak Sources Cannot Give Real Power

This chapter answers a question that every honest seeker eventually asks. If I already remember my ancestors, my family deity, great saints, enlightened teachers — am I not already connecting with a powerful source? Why does Bapuji insist on direct connection with the Almighty?

The answer requires a clear, steady look at where power actually comes from. Bapuji turns to the Gita itself. In the Gita it has been said that if you remember ghosts or evil spirits, you will achieve and receive what ghosts and evil spirits have. If you remember your ancestors, you will find your ancestors and get what they had. If you remember a deity, you will be linked to that deity's power — whatever it may be.

In other words, the law is simple. A soul is connected to whatever it remembers. And from that source, it receives whatever that source is actually able to give.

The Problem of Ghosts and Ancestors

Bapuji gently explains that ancestors and departed souls, however beloved, are themselves still continuing their own spiritual journey within the wider creation. With deep reverence we honour them. Yet for the unlimited inner power the soul is seeking for true atma swaroop, the source must be the Almighty Father himself — the original ocean of infinite power.

Reverence for ancestors is a sacred and beautiful part of our tradition. Yet for the unlimited power that is required for full soul consciousness, the soul naturally looks beyond every intermediate level to the Supreme Father — the original and unlimited Powerhouse from whom every other current of love and power ultimately flows.

Saints, Sages and Deities

Bapuji speaks with equal gentleness and reverence about great saints, sages, and monks. The love a devotee feels for them is pure and beautiful. Bapuji simply invites the seeker, with humility, to also turn directly to the Almighty Father — the unlimited Powerhouse — for the additional inner power that the soul requires for full atma swaroop.

In the path of devotion, devotees worship gods, goddesses, and deities, carry out rituals, and sing praises with deep love. Bapuji holds all these traditions with profound respect. From his own inner vision he gently adds that the additional inner power required for the full experience of atma swaroop flows most directly when the soul connects with the Almighty — the supreme Powerhouse from whom every divine current ultimately arises.

♦ Insight: “Bade Powerhouse — Almighty se direct connection jodo, atma ko unlimited power milegi.”

“Connect directly with the great Powerhouse — the Almighty — and the soul will receive unlimited power.”

The direct connection with the Almighty — the one and only unlimited ocean of power — gives the soul, by his grace, everything it has been seeking across many lifetimes.

The Misuse of Partial Power

There is another danger that Bapuji reveals with great compassion. When souls receive only a small quantum of power and do not understand how to use it, they can misuse it. They may spread vibrations of destruction instead of vibrations of peace. They may think negatively for others. They may imagine the fall of the world. Over time, this becomes its own kind of darkness.

Since the modern era, many partial movements have spread such vibrations — thinking for destruction rather than for welfare. The energy borrowed from a limited source was not enough to elevate them, and yet it was enough to disturb the atmosphere of the world. This is why partial power, without the highest guidance, can create new problems even while trying to solve old ones.

The message is therefore clear and kind. If the soul is to receive true power — and receive it safely, for the good of the self and for the welfare of the world — then the connection must be direct, unbroken and pure. The Almighty alone is this source.

As Bapuji says, you should connect directly with the Powerhouse.

Chapter IX

The Path of Devotion and the Path of Knowledge

Spiritual life has long been divided into many paths. Bapuji focuses on two great streams: the path of devotion and the path of knowledge. Understanding the difference between them is essential, because the two paths lead to different experiences and to different levels of realisation.

The Path of Devotion

The path of devotion is the path of bhakti. Here, the seeker pours heart and surrender into a chosen form. Worship, chanting, rituals, pilgrimages, emotional love for a deity — all of this belongs to devotion. Many sages and monks of earlier times followed this path. They awakened kundalini. They produced the sound of Om. They performed penance for thousands of years.

Devotion softens the heart. It steadies the mind. It creates a deep personal relationship with the Divine. And for many souls, it is the only door they can open in their present state. Bapuji honours this path. It is not wrong. It is not empty. It has nourished millions across ages.

But on the level of power for true soul consciousness, devotion alone may fall short. Bapuji says that even Sage-Monks who did penance for epochs to liberate the soul often failed to fully liberate themselves — because for liberation, and for realisation of the soul, real power is required. And real power comes only through the deeper inner connection that knowledge opens up.

The Path of Knowledge

The path of knowledge is different in its very structure. It is not an emotional approach alone. It is an inner understanding of who the soul is, where it came from, what power it needs, and where that power must come from.

On this path, the soul first learns its true identity — not just as a soul, but as a soul of a specific origin, a specific category, a specific lineage in the infinite creation. Then, with this understanding, the soul connects directly to the Supreme source and begins to receive power in soul consciousness itself.

Bapuji says that on this path, the soul emerges through the eighth igneous cycle and receives power directly from the Supreme Soul in soul consciousness. Above it lies millennium — a deeper, higher dimension of creation. The path of knowledge therefore carries the seeker not merely to liberation from suffering, but into the very structure of the infinite.

How the Two Paths Differ in Practice

In practice, the path of devotion often uses external forms: gyotirlingas, shivalingas, idols, pictures, chants, songs, ishta dev. Devotion flows through these forms. The path of knowledge uses the form only as a starting reference and then moves inward — to the soul at the centre of the forehead, to the light of the Almighty in the Supreme Abode, to the silent flow of power from source to seeker.

Both paths agree that the goal is union with the Supreme. But the path of knowledge adds something crucial — the awareness that realisation is not a poetic feeling alone. It is a tangible, measurable transformation, built on real, received power.

♦ Insight: “Gyan marg aur bhakti marg mein bahut bada farak hai.”

“There is a big difference between the path of knowledge and the path of devotion.”

Bapuji is not asking the reader to reject devotion. He is inviting the seeker to add knowledge to devotion — so that love becomes light, and light becomes power, and power becomes realisation. When devotion and knowledge walk together, the soul is no longer only moved emotionally. It begins to shine.

Chapter X

Kundalini, Om and the Awakening of the Chakras

Across many spiritual traditions, seekers have heard of kundalini, the mystical energy that lies dormant within the human being. Bapuji speaks of this with both respect and clarity, placing it in the wider context of soul consciousness.

In the older times, sages and monks followed specific practices to awaken the soul's inner fire. They awakened kundalini. They produced the sound of Om. They performed penance for thousands of years. These practices are not imagination. They are part of a long, sincere tradition of inner work.

What Kundalini Actually Does

Awakening kundalini means that whatever power resides at the umbilicus — the navel region — rises upward from the bottom to the top. This rising current passes through many subtle centres within the body, each associated, in the ancient understanding, with different levels of consciousness and different celestial powers.

At the base there is the seat of Ganesha — hence the common practice of beginning with Ganeshay Namaha. Above, there is the seat associated with Brahma. Above that, the seat associated with Vishnu. Then Lakshmi. Each of these, Bapuji says, is an “owner” of kundalini — governing different levels as the energy moves upward.

The Limitation of These Practices

And yet, despite all these efforts, sages and monks performed penance for epochs to bring salvation to the soul but could not always liberate it. Bapuji explains why. Because for salvation, the soul needs power. For realising soul consciousness, the soul also needs power. Awakening kundalini gives real subtle experiences and real internal movements — but on its own, it does not necessarily bring the full power the soul is seeking.

This is a gentle, important point. Kundalini awakening, Om chanting, penance — all of these are respectable practices. But the soul's true realisation depends on where the power is coming from. When the seeker is working only with the inner power of the body and the lower chakras, progress is bound by what those centres can hold.

♦ Insight: “Mukti ke liye atma ko power chahiye. Soul consciousness ko realize karne ke liye bhi atma ko power chahiye.”

“For liberation, the soul needs power. For realising soul consciousness, the soul also needs power.”

A Different Approach

Bapuji therefore offers a different approach. Instead of first trying to awaken the lower energy and raise it upward through the subtle body, the seeker begins directly at the seat of the soul — the centre of the forehead. Attention is placed there. The soul is felt as white light, sparkling like a diamond. And from this seat, direct connection is made upward and outward to the Almighty.

In this approach, it is not that the chakras are ignored. They will eventually open in their own time, as the soul receives real power. But the opening will now be caused from above — by the flow of divine light descending into the soul — rather than from below, by effort alone.

This is a quieter, gentler path. It does not require years of physical austerity. It requires inner connection, faithfulness to that connection, and the sweet remembrance of the Father. From that remembrance, the right doors open at the right time.

Chapter XI

Sahasrara, the Third Eye and the Tenth Chakra

As the soul experiences soul consciousness for a longer period, something beautiful begins to happen within. More power begins to flow in. And as this power grows, it opens sahasrara — the thousand-petalled lotus at the crown, the gateway to higher vision.

What the Opening of Sahasrara Reveals

When sahasrara opens, it connects the seeker to the infinite brahmands — not just to this solar system, but to countless creations. Knowledge of these worlds and inner visions of them begin to emerge. The soul can see infinite galaxies, including the Milky Way. It can witness far-away sights of space. If the soul is from the infinite world, the knowledge of the infinite world starts rising within, as the soul receives more and more power.

In the path of devotion, this is sometimes called brahmgyan — the knowledge of Brahm. But here, through the path of knowledge and direct connection, what opens is not merely an idea. It is a real, perceptible opening of subtle vision.

Where the Vision Actually Comes From

Bapuji gives a remarkable detail. The power of vision itself does not reside in sahasrara. Sahasrara has trillions upon trillions of cells, and once they receive power they begin to function. Through them, the recordings of the subtle world are transferred into the soul. The soul opens its third eye, and visions of the subtle world begin to appear.

Soul consciousness, at this stage, means the opening of the third eye. Bapuji reminds us that Shankar opened his divine third eye and held the full vision of this brahmand. The souls being spoken of here are infinite souls who have travelled from far-away dimensions; when their third eye opens, their vision naturally extends to the infinite, boundless space of their own original creation.

♦ Insight: “Atma ka third eye khul jata hai, aur sukshm duniya ke visions dikhne shuru ho jaate hain.”

“The soul opens its third eye, and visions of the subtle world begin to appear.”

How to Open These Higher Doors

In devotional traditions or bhakti marg, it is said that chanting Om opens aagya chakra — the inner command centre at the forehead. Then, in turn, sahasrara chakra opens. But Bapuji reveals that above sahasrara lies an even higher door: the tenth chakra.

The Tenth Chakra

The tenth chakra is the highest subtle gateway. When it opens, the soul can actually leave the body while the body remains still. The subtle body too can come out through this tenth chakra. Ascetic souls in the past have sometimes achieved such openings through prolonged practice. They were able to maximise their own subtle powers. But even with these openings, they did not possess the power of full transformation of the physical body.

Bapuji describes the progression beautifully. The opening of sahasrara enables a soul to view the visions of the higher world. After such visions, the soul naturally loses interest in this materialistic world. It develops inner willpower — strong, quiet, unshakable. Then, as practice deepens, the opening of the tenth chakra is reached. At that stage, the soul gains the yogic power of iccha-mrityu — the capacity, described in the ancient traditions of great masters such as Bhishma Pitamah, to depart from the body at its own divinely chosen moment.

In the devotional path, such yogis have been known to leave the body at will or even enter another body. People of certain monastic traditions have even declared, long before their physical death, the next place where they would be reborn. Bapuji confirms that such things are possible. Power comes to overcome death according to one's own choice.

After the opening of the tenth chakra, the soul can fly to higher dimensions — to the second loka, the third loka, to the Supreme Abode itself, or take a new birth by choice. But Bapuji gently reminds the seeker that all this takes enormous spiritual effort and perseverance. These are not shortcuts. They are the natural outcomes of a soul that has walked the inner path with sincerity and with the power of the Almighty.

In this way, the chapters of the inner body — sahasrara, the third eye, and the tenth chakra — are not mysterious fantasies. They are real stages that the soul enters when it has received enough power from the true source.

Chapter XII

Children of the Infinite and the Multiverse

This chapter opens a dimension of Bapuji's teaching that very few other traditions reach. It is the chapter of identity — of who the souls on this earth really are.

Most Souls Today Are Not Earth-Bound

Bapuji reveals that at present, the majority of souls currently in ordinary human form on earth are not ordinary at all. They are at least in the category of Mahashiva. They have come from far-away galaxies. Many are owners of distant universes. A soul that looks like any other person in the street may actually be carrying the history and recordings of enormous celestial journeys.

For example, the 33 crore (330 million) deities mentioned in the scriptures came from G2; now they are 66 crores. As these souls experience soul consciousness, their sahasrara opens. Sahasrara then acts like an antenna, connecting the intelligence back to G2 — the universe of their origin. The recordings of their soul's true knowledge, already immersed within, begin to emerge.

G2, G3, G4... Up to G17

The cosmology Bapuji reveals is vast beyond ordinary comprehension. G2 means great great universe. Then comes G3, G4, and so on. Our multiverse itself extends up to G17. Souls are here from very, very far away.

Bapuji illustrates this gently with reference to the Bhagavata tradition. The tradition describes how Lord Krishna liberated 16,100 highly evolved souls who had been held captive by Narakasura. Through the Lord's divine leela, these freed souls came under his eternal protection. When Krishna took them under his divine protection, the Lord's love continued to envelop them as a higher leela far beyond ordinary worldly understanding. These 16,100 shakti (feminine energy souls) remained under the Lord's divine grace, and through his protection and love, Krishna continued to bless them throughout their journey on earth as part of his higher divine leela, far beyond ordinary worldly understanding. Bapuji shares, from his own inner vision, that these shakti (feminine energy souls) had originally come from the dimensions of G1 and G2.

However, souls from G1 and G2 are still continuing their own journey of receiving the full power of their original light. With meditation and soul consciousness, the deeper recordings of their soul's original source can gently begin to emerge. Sahasrara chakra will be energised. And as they experience atma anubhuti, the direct feeling of the soul, deeper layers of self-understanding naturally unfold from within.

Why This Knowledge Is Only for Certain Souls

This is also why Bapuji says with gentle clarity that this Behad knowledge naturally resonates with souls who carry within them the cell of the infinite. Many sincere souls find their spiritual home in temple-based devotion, in love for a saint or sage, or in deep reverence for a chosen deity — and that is their beautiful path, fully honoured here. The teachings in this book are simply offered, with the deepest respect for every path, to souls who feel a particular pull towards the unlimited dimensions of creation described in the shastras and other ancient scriptures. Each soul's journey is sacred and unfolds in its own time, in its own way — this particular knowledge simply finds its home with those whose inner recordings feel ready to remember the boundless creation.

Bapuji shares this with great tenderness, not as a comparison, but simply as a truthful description of how inner recordings work. Every soul carries the knowledge that resonates with its own original journey. If the cell of the infinite is already present within, the knowledge of the infinite gently rises to meet it. If that cell has not yet awakened, the same teaching may be heard again and again, simply waiting for its right moment.

The soul of the infinite, on the other hand, has the cell of knowledge. In this cell lies the entire drama of infinite creation — from its origin, through its middle, towards its completion. When a soul of the infinite begins to experience soul consciousness, these inner recordings begin to open. Old knowledge is not being learned anew; it is being remembered.

♦ Insight: “Aaj dharti par jo bhi sadharan manushya roop mein atmayein hain, woh kam se kam Mahashiv ki category ki hain — door door ki galaxies se aayi hui hain.”

“At present, every soul in ordinary human form on earth is at least of the category of Mahashiva, having come from far-away galaxies.”

This is why Bapuji gives this knowledge with special care. It is aimed at the souls for whom it will resonate — the children of the infinite, the far-travelling souls who are finally beginning to hear the call of home.

Chapter XIII

What Happens When Subtle and Causal Bodies Are Charged

When a soul, in soul consciousness, connects with the Almighty and receives power, where does this power actually go? Bapuji explains the process in such a clear and practical way that the entire inner transformation becomes easy to understand.

First, the Destruction of Sins

The power received from the Almighty is not an ordinary energy. It is param prakash, supreme divine light. This power first reaches directly into the causal body — the deepest inner body that carries the recordings of all past karmas.

There, in silence, it begins its first work. It destroys sinful actions accumulated over many lifetimes. This is the deep cleansing that no external practice, however beautiful, can fully accomplish on its own. Only light of this calibre can dissolve layers that have collected over such immense time.

Then, the Charging of the Causal Body

Once the destruction of old burdens is well underway, the power begins to be stored. It accumulates in the causal body, known in spiritual terminology as the great karan sharir. Slowly, slowly, this charging progresses — 10 percent, 20 percent, 30 percent, 40 percent, 50 percent. These are not numbers to be calculated mechanically. They are inner thresholds, each one bringing its own experience, its own shift of consciousness.

When approximately 50 percent of the great causal body is charged, a new phase begins. The aura of the subtle body starts to develop. The subtle body itself starts to convert. It moves from being constituted of ordinary subtle elements into being constituted of supreme elements.

The Aura of Supreme Elements

As the subtle body changes, the aura begins to radiate supreme elements. From this stage, the seeker starts experiencing a level of confidence and clarity that was not there before. Whatever the soul thinks, within the boundaries of divine will, begins to manifest. Negative thoughts lose their grip and naturally fall away. At the same time, the soul experiences ultimate happiness — an inner joy that flows continuously, regardless of outer circumstances.

Bapuji describes this as ecstatic pleasure, divine pleasure. What the scriptures speak of as the bliss of the soul in its incorporeal state can be tasted even here, in a corporeal body, once enough power has been received. At this level, the soul feels light — sometimes even as though flying through air. Silence becomes sweet. Solitude becomes dear.

♦ Insight: “Jab atma ko power milti hai, tab atma ko param prakash mil jata hai.”

“When the soul receives power, the soul receives supreme divine light.”

Charging from 60 to 100 Percent

As the causal body continues to charge — 60 percent, 70 percent, 80 percent — the mind grows deeply silent. Sounds and voices fall away. The body may be here in the world, but the mind lives in the Supreme Abode. In that state, the soul remembers the Almighty Authority almost without effort. It reincarnates its remembrance, again and again, and nothing else really interests it.

When aura fully incorporates this power, vision begins. Others in contact with such a soul may receive glimpses of higher dimensions simply through that soul's presence. Gradually, the soul may also realise the power of flight — of rising upward, of leaving ordinary dimensions behind.

Finally, Bapuji speaks of the ultimate stage: the power of self-transformation. When the causal body is fully charged to 100 percent, the soul can transform automatically from the manifest form to the imperceptible form, without any support, moving upward on its own.

This entire journey — from the first destruction of sins to the full self-transformation — is not reserved for a distant future. It is unfolding silently inside every soul that keeps receiving power from the true Powerhouse. The details may vary from soul to soul, but the pattern is the same, and the process is real.

Chapter XIV

Soul, Mind, Intellect and Impressions — The Inner Chain

Once a seeker understands that the soul is separate from all three bodies, a natural next question appears. If the soul is not the body, and not even the thoughts in the mind, then who actually decides what happens inside a human being? Who chooses? Who acts? Who remembers? Bapuji answers this by unfolding a beautiful inner chain — the chain of soul (Atma), mind (Mann), Intellect (buddhi), and Impressions (sanskars).

The Hidden Order Within

Bapuji gives a simple but profound structure. Inside the soul is the mind. Inside the mind is the Intellect. Inside the Intellect are the impressions, the accumulated impressions of many lifetimes. This is the inner order. The soul is the centre. Soul is highest. Everything else sits around it, layer by layer.

♦ Insight: “Atma ke andar mann hai, mann ke andar buddhi hai, buddhi ke andar sanskar hain.”

“Within the soul is the mind. Within the mind is the buddhi. Within the buddhi are the sanskars.”

From Soul To Mind

This is a remarkable teaching. In its original nirakar state, there was only param prakash. There were no thoughts. There was no thinking. There were no impressions. A soul in its pure form simply shines.

The mind arose only when the soul made its first subtle affirmation — a gentle sankalp — “let me gradually take an aakar form.” That first movement gave birth to the mind. As the soul moved into its subtle form, the atmosphere of each dimension it entered began to imprint upon it. The buddhi formed according to the loka in which the soul dwelt. Its surroundings touched it. And from that touching, its intellect took shape. The sanskars followed — the record of thoughts, actions, and tendencies laid down over countless experiences.

This is why the buddhi of a deity is different from the buddhi of a human. The buddhi of a soul in Vishnupuri is different from the buddhi of a soul in a galaxy, a universe, or a multiverse. The soul is the same soul. But the intellect has been shaped by the atmosphere of each world it passed through.

Why Mind Wanders

Bapuji gently explains why the mind wanders so much in ordinary human life. The mind has developed a habit across many lifetimes. Over countless births, it has become used to believing that the five-element world is the whole reality. Car, house, status, respect, relationships — these have become the mind’s familiar objects. The mind says, “This is what is true. There is nothing beyond this.” Because it has no knowledge of anything higher, it keeps running after these things, hoping somewhere to find satisfaction.

But satisfaction does not come. The five-element world gives only suffering in the end. Bodies change. Relationships change. Achievements fade. The mind, not finding what it truly seeks, becomes restless, anxious, scattered. This is why, without knowledge, the mind is never still.

Intellect Runs on Old Impressions

Even the buddhi is not free. It runs on the basis of sanskars — deeply grooved records from many births. When the mind suggests, “Let me sit in the remembrance of the Father,” the buddhi, heavy with old body-consciousness, often refuses. It pulls the attention back to the body, back to relationships, back to habitual concerns.

So a subtle struggle begins. The mind, touched by some spark of knowledge, begins to seek something higher. But the buddhi, weighed down by old impressions, keeps dragging it back into familiar patterns. This is why knowledge alone is not enough, and why mere willpower is not enough. The tools the seeker has at the beginning are themselves shaped by the very conditioning that needs to change.

Only Knowledge Can Change the Mind

Bapuji names the only door out of this circle. The one force that can truly transform the mind is knowledge — real, deep, divine knowledge. When such knowledge enters, the buddhi slowly begins to refine. Its judgment power awakens. It begins to say, “Yes, this is true. This is what I actually need. The rest is a passing dream.”

As the buddhi refines, the mind begins to do something it never did before. It starts churning the ocean of knowledge. It turns the teachings over, again and again, in quiet contemplation. This is what is called vichar sagar manthan — the churning of the ocean of thought. Through this churning, old illusions break. Detachment, vairag, begins to rise. The mind loses its appetite for the old objects and begins to long for something deeper.

♦ Insight: “Mann badalne ka sabse bada kaaran hai — Powerhouse se connection jodna, aur gyan.”

“The greatest cause of mind transformation is connection with the Powerhouse, and knowledge.”

Then Comes Power, and Everything Shifts

Knowledge prepares the ground. But knowledge alone cannot move the soul all the way home. For that, the soul needs power. And power comes only from direct connection with the Almighty — the Powerhouse Bapuji speaks of throughout this book.

When the soul connects, real power flows in. With this inflow, something new becomes possible. The mind is no longer at the mercy of the buddhi. Now, for the first time, the mind receives supreme peace and supreme happiness from its source. Once it has tasted this, it knows. It no longer needs to be forced. It naturally turns toward the place where the peace is coming from. It moves toward the Supreme by itself. Then the chain reverses. Mind changes first. As the mind changes, the buddhi follows. As the buddhi follows, the sanskars begin to shift. And as the sanskars shift, the bodies themselves begin to refine — the physical, the subtle, the causal, the great causal, the param mahakar body. Everything transforms, from the inside outward, in one living chain.

The Soul Finally Takes Back Its Seat

Through this whole process, the soul is gently returning to its true position. At the start, the soul had almost no control, because it had almost no power. The sanskars ran the show. Sanskars drove the buddhi. Buddhi drove the mind. The mind drove the body from the outside.

But once the soul begins to receive real power, the direction reverses. Now the soul, full of light, works through the mind. The mind, steady and peaceful, guides the buddhi. The buddhi, refined and wise, shapes the sanskars. And the sanskars, gently transformed, begin to carry only the qualities of the original state — peace, mercy, love, light.

This is the true role of the soul. This is the true purpose of every human birth. Not to run after the world. Not to be a prisoner of old grooves. But to take back its own seat, from within, and to bring the whole of its inner household — mind, buddhi, and sanskars — back into the shining silence of its original nature.

Chapter XV

The Signs of True Soul Consciousness

How does the seeker recognise that soul consciousness has actually begun — not as an idea, but as a living experience? Bapuji gives a detailed, beautiful description of the signs. These signs appear slowly, in layers, and they cannot be faked, because they come from within.

Knowledge of the Infinite Begins to Emerge

The first sign is that, as the soul receives power, knowledge of the infinite begins to emerge from within. It is not that the soul is learning new things from outside. Rather, existing recordings — stored in the soul from its original journey across the vast creation — begin to open. Subjects that once felt strange begin to feel familiar. Deeper teachings begin to make calm, obvious sense.

Detachment from the Vanishing World

Along with knowledge, a quiet detachment develops. Detachment from this vanishing world. Things that once held great importance — reputation, status, small pleasures, small disappointments — gradually lose their grip. The mind does not run after them any more. It is not that the soul becomes cold or uncaring. It is that the mind naturally goes again and again into the highest Supreme Abode, and once it has tasted that height, the lower pulls of the world become less attractive.

Desirelessness

Another sign is desirelessness. The soul no longer needs any position or status to feel worthy. There is no craving for recognition. There is no wish to attend big gatherings, to be invited everywhere, to be seen. The soul enters a stage of pure inner contentment, what Bapuji describes as becoming ignorant of the knowledge of desire and detached from this physical world.

Love of Solitude and Silence

The soul begins to enjoy solitude. There is no great desire even to speak. Meetings, public events, endless conversations — these begin to feel unnecessary. The soul prefers to sit quietly, with the Father, in its own light. This is not isolation. It is inner fullness. A soul that has found its real source no longer needs continuous outer noise.

♦ Insight: “Atma ka asli swabhav soul consciousness hi hai.”

“The original nature of the soul is soul consciousness itself.”

The Original Qualities Begin to Return

Bapuji speaks with great tenderness about the soul’s true nature. The original quality of a soul, at the time of its creation, is the embodiment of peace and mercy. All the qualities of the Supreme Soul are naturally immersed within. When soul consciousness awakens, these qualities start returning to the surface.

The soul becomes soft-hearted. It becomes an ocean of ruth, an ocean of mercy. It develops compassion for all — even for those who have wronged it. It begins to see those still trapped in the perishable world with kindness, thinking, “They are sick, they are far from this knowledge. Let me forgive, let me bless.”

Love arises naturally. The heart becomes kind for all. Work gets done through love rather than through force. Voice itself becomes full of sweetness, full of mellowness. Even when someone abuses the soul, it chooses to give love in return — knowing that abusing is their nature; loving is its own.

A Powerful Aura

Because a soul conscious soul is a powerful soul, its aura grows. The aura spreads in a radius — ten feet, twenty feet, thirty feet, forty feet — into an entire room, an office, a home. People in that field feel unusually peaceful, without understanding why. They begin to love the soul without any effort on its part. They receive power simply by being near.

Many seekers of Bapuji have shared that after receiving this knowledge, they began to be loved by those around them. Bapuji confirms: yes, they are receiving power from you. Ultimate peace begins to be felt. Negative thinking stops. Values are quietly transformed. The soul becomes an ocean of love, spreading its peace into every atmosphere it enters.

The Longing for the Supreme Abode

Finally, there comes a particular sign that marks a soul truly moving into soul consciousness: a strong, steady wish to reach the highest Supreme Abode. The soul begins to feel that this world is not its home. The supreme abode is its home. And it wants to go there.

Again and again, the mind turns upward. Again and again, the soul remembers its Father. Again and again, it recognises itself as a traveller, not a permanent resident of the earth. When all these signs appear together, the seeker can be sure that the inner journey has truly begun.

Chapter XVI

The Experience of Bapuji — Meditation, Light Body, and Divine Vision

Throughout this book, Bapuji has guided the reader gently, step by step, into the teaching of soul consciousness. In this chapter, he shares something more personal — his own inner journey. Not as autobiography, but as a living example of what the path actually looks like when a soul walks it with complete sincerity.

The details in this chapter are not meant to be imitated exactly. They are meant to show what becomes possible when the soul turns towards the Father fully, and when the practice of atma swaroop is sustained day after day, year after year, across decades.

The Beginning — 1987

Bapuji's formal turn toward soul consciousness began in 1987. The basic concept he first received was simple: you are a soul; remember incorporeal Shiv Baba in the Supreme Abode. For him, this was not just another teaching. Something inside awakened. A deep inner resolve took hold — “I must experience atma swaroop. This alone is the purpose of this life.”

From that moment, his entire life quietly reorganised around this one aim. He continued his office work — he was still a lawyer then. He took care of his family. He carried every ordinary responsibility. But inwardly, the whole day, while eating, drinking, walking, working, he kept returning to a single inner position: I am a soul. My intellect is resting in the highest Supreme Abode. I am receiving power from the Father.

The Depth of the Practice

Bapuji describes the depth of his practice with quiet honesty. He used to wake at two-thirty or three in the morning and sit in yog. On Sundays, there were sessions where he would meditate from early morning until eight o'clock at night — twelve hours, with only a sip or two of water — in a separate meditation room at the centre.

The result was a state so powerful that when he emerged from those sessions, he could not even walk to his car or drive home. The body had become so filled with light that the faculties of ordinary movement had quietly stepped back. He would sit outside the meditation room for a while, allowing himself to return gently to body-awareness, so that he could reach home and resume his duties.

♦ Insight: “Mujhe itni atma swaroop ki anubhooti hoti thi, poori light-light body ho jaati thi.”

“I used to experience such deep atma swaroop that my whole body would become a body of light.”

Apart from roughly four hours of sleep — and his sleep was already short — he treated almost every moment as yoga. Even sleeping itself became a form of nidra yog, sleep-yoga, entering meditation through placing a conscious affirmation at the moment of falling asleep. The unconscious mind began to open. Deeper and deeper recordings began to rise to the surface.

Karmyogi in Every Setting

This practice was never separate from ordinary work. Bapuji was a karmyogi in the full sense. In his office, when he worked as a lawyer, tasks would be completed in a fraction of the usual time. Complicated cases that might take an hour would finish in ten minutes. The work seemed to flow through him, almost as if it was being done by itself.

When he stood before senior officials in important meetings, he would remain quietly inside in atma swaroop and make a simple inner affirmation — let the work be done. And the work would be done. He describes how, walking out in the afternoon heat when the temperature was at its peak, he did not feel the heat at all. The power of yoga inside had become so strong that the outside hardly touched him.

This is the teaching within his story. The seeker does not have to leave the world to do this. The practice is strongest when it is carried into real life — into offices, courts, meetings, conversations, household duties. The soul that remains light and connected, even in the middle of worldly work, is the one that grows fastest.

The Opening of the Third Eye

After years of such practice, something opened. Bapuji recalls the moment when, in 1998, what the scriptures call the opening of the brahmastra — the divine inner gateway — happened for him. He puts it simply: become atma swaroop fully, and the third eye opens.

The third eye, as explained in the earlier chapter on sahasrara, is the eye of subtle vision. When it opens, the soul begins to see dimensions beyond the physical. From 1998 onwards, Bapuji could directly see the universe — not through telescopes, not through imagination, but through the inner sight that belongs to a soul fully established in soul consciousness.

♦ Insight: “Atm swaroop bano, teesra netra khul gaya.”

“Become atma swaroop, and the third eye opens.”

Yet he stresses an important point. In the early years, when he tried to share what he was seeing, most listeners could not take it in. Some would listen briefly, feel overwhelmed, and leave. This is why such deep experiences are not the starting point for a beginner. They are the outcome of many years of sincere inner practice, offered only when the soul is truly ready.

The Soul Stays Inside — a Gentle Warning

Bapuji answers a question that many seekers eventually ask: when you do such intense yog, does your soul do astral travel and leave the body? Does your subtle body travel outside?

His answer is quietly firm. “No. My soul does not leave the body. My subtle body also does not come out. I remain inside.”

Then he gives a warning that every reader should carry carefully. Trying to force the subtle body out of the physical body is extremely risky. If the subtle body comes out and the soul does not know how to re-enter, the physical body can die. This is why near-death experiences, where some people describe floating above their bodies, happen only in unusual medical circumstances — not because an ordinary seeker should attempt such things.

Real soul consciousness does not require leaving the body. It requires being the light within the body, fully awake, fully connected, fully at peace. Everything the soul needs to experience can be experienced from within. The vision, the knowledge, the peace, the power — all of it unfolds inside a steady, living human form.

♦ Insight: “Meri atma kahin baahar nahi nikalti. Mera sukshma sharir bhi baahar nahi jata.”

“My soul does not leave and go anywhere. My subtle body also does not come out.”

How Knowledge Emerged From Within

Another beautiful thread in Bapuji’s experience is the way deep knowledge rose from within once the inner recordings began to emerge. He did not learn the knowledge from a book. He did not inherit it from a teacher. He sat in atma swaroop for long hours, and the knowledge itself unfolded.

While reading certain scriptural passages, the inner meaning would rise up clearly, as though the pages were becoming windows. Subjects that had remained hidden for ages became visible. This is not something to be sought for its own sake; it is simply a description of what happens when the soul’s layers begin to thin and the recordings immersed within begin to shine through.

The Message for the Seeker

The point of this chapter is not that every reader must meditate for twelve hours and see the universe. The point is something quieter and more reachable. The point is: the path is real. The experience is real. The promise made in all the earlier chapters is not theoretical. One soul has already walked it with complete devotion and has arrived at the other side.

And because one soul has done it, others can do it too, in their own measure, in their own time. Each reader is invited to take what is possible now. Even fifteen minutes a day, held with full sincerity, in the feeling “I am a soul, I am receiving power from my Father,” will begin to do real work inside.

Bapuji’s own life quietly carries a single message to every reader: remain light, remain loving, remain a soul. Do your work in the world, but carry the Father within. The rest will follow, in its own time, in its own way. As the soul becomes full of power, the world itself begins to feel different, and the deepest wish of the soul — to return to its original light — slowly, softly, becomes reality.

Chapter XVII

Living as a Karmyogi

Soul consciousness is not a monastic achievement reserved only for those who leave the world. Bapuji teaches something far more practical, far more balanced. The seeker is to live as a karmyogi — a soul rooted in spiritual awareness while actively carrying out the duties of ordinary life.

No Need to Take Holidays from Life

Bapuji's instruction here is beautifully gentle. You don't have to take holidays from your job. You don't have to walk away from your family. You don't have to run into the forest. Keep your work. Keep your home. Keep your responsibilities. Simply remain as light as possible. Be a karmyogi. Always remain happy.

This simple sentence — always remain happy — carries the entire secret of karmyogi living. The seeker is not asked to become serious, heavy, or withdrawn. They are asked to keep their heart light while inwardly holding the remembrance of the Father.

Balancing the Worldly and the Spiritual

Here we have to be a karmyogi, managing family too. We have to balance the two lives — the laukik (family, material) and the alaukik (spiritual, transcendent).

Bapuji gives a remarkable promise here. When a seeker maintains this balance with inner connection, the ordinary acts of life automatically transform. Secular actions convert into something supernormal on their own. In other words, when the soul works in the continuous remembrance of the Father, the work itself begins to carry divine vibrations. Home, office, meeting, journey — every setting becomes a place of silent service.

Receiving Power While Working

When the soul receives power from the Father and works while remembering the Father, everyone around the soul begins to receive power as well. Wherever the seeker works, people in that atmosphere feel unusually peaceful. The space itself begins to fill with supreme peace. Others often realise this intuitively, even if they cannot explain it in words.

♦ Insight: “Karmyogi bano, hamesha khush raho.”

The Purpose of Income and Resources

Bapuji illustrates the karmyogi attitude through his own life. Even when he earned a great deal as a successful lawyer, resources were not used selfishly. They were given to the welfare of the world. Simple living and high thinking became the natural way. Use whatever resources you have for a great purpose, for the welfare of the entire world — this is the quiet principle.

Living Above Pride and Honour

A karmyogi living in soul consciousness does not live for pride. There is no craving for titles, no need for public respect. Even if people wish to invite such a soul to conferences and ceremonies, the inner answer is often a gentle no. There is no need to be seen. There is no need to prove anything. The soul simply continues its inner service, sharing knowledge freely through whatever medium naturally comes to hand.

This does not mean arrogance. It means freedom. The seeker becomes independent of applause and criticism alike. The soul is too full to need the world's approval, and too loving to shy away from the world's help.

In this way, the karmyogi walks through the world quietly — doing the work, earning what is needed, caring for family, attending to duties — while the inner light grows brighter with every passing day.

Chapter XVIII

Paramshanti Vibrations and World Transformation

Perhaps the most tender, practical teaching in the entire stream of Bapuji's discourses is this: wherever you go, spread vibrations of paramshanti. Supreme peace, flowing outward from one soul, can change the atmosphere of an entire home, an entire workplace, an entire circle of people.

How One Soul Affects Many

When a soul is in remembrance of the Almighty and is spreading vibrations of supreme peace from within, the subtle effect is enormous. The aura of such a soul does not stay confined inside the body. It radiates outward — into the room, the home, the office — touching every soul that enters that field.

People begin to love that soul without any outward effort on its part. Atmospheres where disputes once arose begin to quieten. Tensions begin to dissolve without open confrontation. Souls in distress feel, without being told, that near this person, they are somehow safe. This is not imagination. This is the real working of subtle vibrations. Bapuji repeatedly affirms that others will realise the supreme peace in the atmosphere around such a seeker.

Take the Form of the Father

Bapuji gives a very specific inner posture. Take the form of the Almighty Authority, the Infinite Father. Keep the intelligence in the highest of the highest Supreme Abode.

And from that position, quietly spread the vibrations of absolute param param shanti.

When this is done, the aura automatically changes. The soul begins to imbibe good personality traits. It receives power from above. And the atmosphere begins to carry the same supreme elements that exist in the higher dimensions of creation.

♦ Insight: “Jahan bhi jao, paramshanti ke vibrations phelao.”

“Wherever you go, spread vibrations of paramshanti.”

Self-Transformation as World Transformation

This is the heart of Bapuji’s mission. Transformation of the world does not begin with armies, speeches, or external reform. It begins inside one soul. When that soul becomes paramshanti, it begins to pour paramshanti into the atmosphere. That atmosphere touches other souls. Other souls, softened and supported, begin their own inner turn. Slowly, silently, through subtle currents, the vibration of peace moves across the world.

Bapuji therefore repeats this instruction with great care. Spread experience of paramsukh and paramshanti — divine happiness and divine peace — to family members at home. Be happy and make others happy. Wherever you go, spread vibrations of paramshanti. Share these vibrations with your circle. Do as much as you can, happily, while balancing your laukik and alaukik responsibilities.

A World-Welfare Feeling

This is also why, in a soul that has truly begun to experience soul consciousness, a powerful world-welfare feeling naturally awakens. Bapuji speaks of this tenderly as a longing from childhood — a wish to change the world for the better. Such feelings, rooted in love and not in ambition, themselves become the engine of realisation. They carry the soul forward, guide its actions, and make it a fit instrument for the Father's work.

Every reader of this book is therefore invited — not burdened, only invited — to carry a small quiet prayer while walking through life: may peace flow from me; may peace reach everyone I meet; may this day, wherever I am, become a small instrument of the Father's light. That prayer alone, held sincerely, is already a form of service.

Chapter XIX

The Helpline of the Infinite Father

This final chapter turns the reader towards the softest, most comforting truth of all. In the entire journey towards soul consciousness, no seeker walks alone. The Infinite Father himself has arranged a helpline for his children.

Always Available, Always Near

Bapuji shares this with the warmth of a father speaking about a father. The children of the infinite are getting helpline all the time. It has been arranged so that every child may feel secure. Help is always available. The Father is always there when there is a need.

This is not poetry. It is a living reality. Seekers connected to this knowledge have shared countless real experiences — warnings given in dreams, protection given in danger, gentle guidance appearing at exactly the right moment. Bapuji himself pays attention to such reports. He listens to audios and videos of seekers describing their experiences. Through physical form, through subtle means, the connection is maintained.

You Are Not Alone

Bapuji's closing instruction is deeply moving in its simplicity. Children must experience good. Always remain cheerful. Happiness is a good source of diet for the soul. Your Father is always there to help you. Experience his helpline. Always feel him with you.

♦ Insight: “Tum akele nahi ho. Shant raho. Father har pal tumhare saath hai. Kisi ke paas itni power nahi ki tumhe disturb kare ya nuksan pahuncha sake.”

“You are not alone. Stay calm. The Father is with you every moment. Nobody has the power to distract or harm you.”

Read these words slowly. You are not alone. Stay calm. The Father is with you every moment. Nobody has the power to distract or harm you. This is not a general message. This is a direct, living transmission for every soul that sincerely turns toward the Almighty.

The Tender Heart of the Father

Bapuji reveals more about this Father. No father can see his children in pain. No father wishes to keep anyone behind. The Father wants all of his children — as many as are willing — to rise together. His heart is very soft towards the children.

So the children need not over-worry. They need not be afraid of failure. They need not fear that they have not done enough. Bapuji has been told by the Father of the Infinite himself: if the children charge their causal body even a little — even 20 to 25 percent — he will lift them up, pour power into them, and carry them forward. His compassion does not wait for perfection. It only waits for sincerity.

Simple, Steady Practice

The invitation, then, is very simple. Remain as light as possible. Be a karmyogi. Always remain happy. Experience paramsukh, paramanand, and divyanand swaroop — divine happiness, divine bliss, divine embodiment. Let the intelligence rest in the Supreme Abode. And in every moment, quietly feel: my Father is with me.

In that feeling, soul consciousness grows. In that feeling, the soul is held. In that feeling, the long journey across many lifetimes finds its completion.

May every reader of this book come to know this helpline personally. May every reader feel that silent, steady presence. May every reader step, step by step, from being a body in the world to becoming a soul at home in the light of the Father.

Bapuji Insights

The following are selected lines directly from Bapuji's own discourses. Each one carries the essence of an entire teaching in a single sentence. They are gathered here so the seeker may return to them again and again, in quiet moments, as pointers to the deepest truths explored throughout this book.

♦ Insight: "Sabse pehle hume samajhna padega ki main kaun hoon?"

"First of all, we need to understand — who am I?"

♦ Insight: "Ekdam nirakari stage mein atma ke saath koi bhi baahar ka aavaran nahi hota... aur us param prakash ki nirakari atma ko hi Paramatma kehte hain."

"In the completely formless stage, no outer covering remains around the soul — and this supreme-light, formless soul itself is called Paramatma."

♦ Insight: "Atma hamare mind ke centre point mein rehkar body ko chalati hai — maathe ke beech mein."

"The soul governs our body from the centre point of the mind — at the middle of the forehead."

♦ Insight: "Sirf 'Main atma hoon, main atma hoon' bolne se koi atma ko realize nahi kar sakta."

“Only by saying ‘I am a soul, I am a soul,’ no one can realise the soul.”

♦ Insight: “Atm swaroop ki anubhooti karo, sakshi drashta aa hi jayenge.”

“Experience atma swaroop, and the witness-state will arise on its own.”

♦ Insight: “‘Shivoham’ ya ‘Brahmasmi’ bolne se koi soul consciousness ko realize nahi kar sakta.”

“Merely by saying ‘Shivoham’ or ‘Brahmasmi,’ one cannot realise soul consciousness.”

♦ Insight: “Soul consciousness mein rehkar Almighty ko yaad karo — Almighty se power milegi. Jab hum Powerhouse se connect hote hain, tab power aati hai.”

“Remember the Almighty while in soul consciousness — power will flow from the Almighty. When we connect with the Powerhouse, we receive power.”

♦ Insight: “Bade Powerhouse — Almighty se direct connection jodo, atma ko unlimited power milegi.”

“Connect directly with the great Powerhouse — the Almighty — and the soul will receive unlimited power.”

♦ Insight: “Gyan marg aur bhakti marg mein bahut bada farak hai.”

“There is a big difference between the path of knowledge and the path of devotion.”

♦ Insight: “Mukti ke liye atma ko power chahiye. Soul consciousness ko realize karne ke liye bhi atma ko power chahiye.”

“For liberation, the soul needs power. For realising soul consciousness, the soul also needs power.”

♦ Insight: “Atma ka third eye khul jata hai, aur sukshm duniya ke visions dikhne shuru ho jaate hain.”

“The soul opens its third eye, and visions of the subtle world begin to appear.”

“At present, every soul in ordinary human form on earth is at least of the category of Mahashiva, having come from far-away galaxies.”

♦ Insight: “Jab atma ko power milti hai, tab atma ko param prakash mil jata hai.”

“When the soul receives power, the soul receives supreme divine light.”

♦ Insight: “Atma ke andar mann hai, mann ke andar buddhi hai, buddhi ke andar sanskar hain.”

“Within the soul is the mind. Within the mind is the buddhi. Within the buddhi are the sanskars.”

♦ Insight: “Mann badalne ka sabse bada kaaran hai — Powerhouse se connection jodna, aur gyan.”

“The greatest cause of mind transformation is connection with the Powerhouse, and knowledge.”

♦ Insight: “Atma ka asli swabhav soul consciousness hi hai.”

“The original nature of the soul is soul consciousness itself.”

♦ Insight: “Mujhe itni atma swaroop ki anubhooti hoti thi, poori light-light body ho jaati thi.”

“I used to experience such deep atma swaroop that my whole body would become a body of light.”

♦ Insight: “Atm swaroop bano, teesra netra khul gaya.”

“Become atma swaroop, and the third eye opens.”

♦ Insight: “Meri atma kahin baahar nahi nikalti. Mera sukshma sharir bhi baahar nahi jata.”

“My soul does not leave and go anywhere. My subtle body also does not come out.”

♦ Insight: “Karmyogi bano, hamesha khush raho.”

“Be a karmyogi, always remain happy.”

♦ Insight: “Jahan bhi jao, paramshanti ke vibrations phelao.”

“Wherever you go, spread vibrations of paramshanti.”

♦ Insight: “Tum akele nahi ho. Shant raho. Father har pal tumhare saath hai. Kisi ke paas itni power nahi ki tumhe disturb kare ya nuksan pahuncha sake.”

“You are not alone. Stay calm. The Father is with you every moment. Nobody has the power to distract or harm you.”

Glossary

Simple, beginner-friendly meanings of the Hindi and Sanskrit terms used in this book. These definitions follow the understanding given by Bapuji in his discourses.

Atma — The soul. The conscious point of energy that governs the body. Its original state is pure divine light.

Atma Gyan — The knowledge of the soul. The understanding that “I am a soul and the soul resides in the middle of the eyebrows.”

Atma Swaroop — The direct experience of being a soul. The living realisation of soul consciousness, beyond mere repetition or thought.

Atma Anubhuti — The inner feeling or direct experience of the soul.

Paramatma — The Supreme Soul. The creator of souls. When a soul is in its full divine light form, capable of creating other souls, it is called Paramatma.

Paramdham — The Supreme Abode. The highest incorporeal world where creation exists as pure supreme divine light.

Paramshanti — Supreme peace. The original state of the soul when it is established in its pure divine incorporeal form of supreme light.

Param Prakash — Supreme divine light. The energy of a soul in its incorporeal form.

Param Tattva — Supreme element. Finer than the ordinary elements of the physical world.

Param Maha Tattva — Supreme great element. Present around Param Prakash, carrying the highest divine brilliance.

Param Agni Tattva — Supreme fire element. A highly refined fire element that powerful souls receive through connection with the Infinite Father.

Param Akash Tattva — Supreme ether element. The most refined ether-like element existing above our universe.

Tattva — Element. The fundamental components of creation — earth, water, fire, air, ether — in their spiritual sense, finer than the elements of science.

Shiv — The incorporeal creator of a solar system. God of our Universe. Resides in the Paramdham, the Supreme Abode.

Maha Shiv — The incorporeal creator of a galaxy.

Param Maha Shiv — The incorporeal creator of a universe.

Shivoham — “I am Shiv.” A declaration by a soul that it is a child of Shiv and carries the title of the Father.

Brahm — Incorporeal light. The formless supreme presence. One who admits the incorporeal is called Brahm.

Aham Brahmasmi — “I am Brahm.” A scriptural declaration in which the soul recognises itself as being of the nature of divine light.

Brahm Swaroop — The form of the soul as light, like Brahm. A stage of inner realisation described in scripture.

Jyotirlinga — The original symbolic form used to represent the incorporeal Shiv as light.

Shivalinga — The form developed from Jyotirlinga for external worship of the incorporeal Shiv.

Shankar — The corporeal form of Shiv through which the presence of the Almighty could be felt by ordinary devotees.

Behad — Limitless, infinite. Used to describe creation, souls, or the Father when pointing to dimensions beyond the ordinary.

Behad Ki Atma — Infinite soul. A powerful soul constituted of supreme light and supreme great element. A child of the infinite.

Behad Ka Baap — The Father of the Infinite. The supreme master creator of the entire limitless creation. The Almighty Authority.

Behad Gyan — The supreme knowledge about the Almighty Authority and the boundless infinite creation. The ultimate knowledge not recorded in any previous scripture.

Had — Limited, bounded. Used to describe ordinary souls or creations within specific boundaries.

Had Ki Atma — A common soul of limited power, constituted at most of ether-like elements, without supreme light.

Kundalini — The inner spiritual energy traditionally said to reside at the base of the spine, which can rise upward through subtle centres.

Om — A sacred sound used in devotional practice to activate inner centres such as the aagya chakra.

Aagya Chakra — The inner command centre located between the eyebrows, activated in traditional meditation.

Sahasrara — The thousand-petalled crown chakra. Its opening connects the soul to infinite brahmands and enables visions of the subtle world.

Tenth Chakra — The highest subtle gateway above sahasrara. Its opening makes it possible for the soul or subtle body to leave the physical body.

Third Eye — The inner eye of subtle vision. When opened, it allows the soul to see higher dimensions and subtle worlds.

Karan Sharir — The causal body. The deepest inner body that holds the recordings of all karmic accounts. Charged by divine power received from the Almighty.

Subtle Body — The inner body composed of subtle elements such as ether, air, and fire. Lies between the causal body and the physical body.

Karmyogi — A soul that lives a balanced life — remaining active in the world while inwardly holding the remembrance of the Father.

Karma — Action. Also used to refer to the recordings of past actions stored in the soul.

Sankalp — Determination or affirmation. The power of the mind of a soul. Higher the power of the soul, stronger the sankalp shakti.

Yog — Connection. The deep loving connection of the soul with the Almighty Authority after realising its true nature.

Bhakti Marg — The path of devotion. The way of worship, rituals, and emotional surrender to a chosen divine form.

Gyan Marg — The path of knowledge. The way of understanding the soul, the Supreme Father, and the infinite creation, and connecting directly with the Powerhouse.

Brahmand — Solar system.

Maha Brahmand — Galaxy.

Param Maha Brahmand — Universe.

G1, G2, G3 ... G17 — Higher universes in the multiverse as revealed by Bapuji. G2 is great great universe; G3, G4 and beyond extend outward, up to G17 within our multiverse.

Mahashiva — A highly evolved soul. Bapuji reveals that most souls in ordinary human form on earth today are at least in this category, having come from far-away galaxies.

Mukti — Liberation. The stage when the soul no longer exists separately in creation and dissolves into its creator.

Jeevan Mukti — Liberation while living. The stage at which the soul is free from all karmic bondages and rests eternally with its creator in blissful state.

Paramsukh — Divine happiness.

Paramanand — Divine bliss.

Divyanand Swaroop — The embodiment of divine bliss and divinity.

Laukik — Worldly; pertaining to family, work, and ordinary life.

Alaukik — Spiritual, transcendent; pertaining to the inner divine life.

Mrityuloka — The region of birth and death. The mortal world.

Satopradhan Soul — A pure soul with truthfulness in its nature, naturally able to rise above the attraction of materialistic things.

Tilak — A sacred mark traditionally applied at the centre of the forehead, at the very seat of the soul.

Nirakar — The formless state of the soul. Pure divine light (param prakash) without any covering. The original and complete stage of the soul.

Aakar — The subtle, formed state of the soul. The stage in which the soul takes on a fine body made of supreme elements, as in Shivpuri.

Sakaar — The visible, physical state of the soul. The stage in which the soul is covered by the five gross elements, as in the mortal world.

Beej Roop — Seed form. The original undivided state of the soul in pure light, before it enters aakar or sakaar.

Anadi Swaroop — The eternal original state of the soul — the form the soul had from the beginning, identical with its nirakar state.

Poorn Brahm — The complete form. A name for the soul's fully formless, complete original state, identical with Brahm in the incorporeal abode.

Parabrahma Parameshwar — The supreme formless Lord. The name given to the nirakar stage of the Almighty and to souls resting in their own poorn brahm state.

Atm-Darshan — The actual inner vision of the soul. Seeing oneself directly as a point of supreme light in the beej roop — a stage deeper than both atma gyan and initial atma swaroop.

Sakshi Drashta — The silent observer or witness. The inner state in which the soul watches the mind, emotions, and body without being identified with them.

Dehbhav — Body-consciousness. The habit of identifying oneself with the physical body. The root of ordinary suffering.

Atmabhav — Soul-awareness. The living recognition that “I am a soul, and the body is only my instrument of action.”

Buddhi — The intellect. The decision-making faculty that sits within the mind and is shaped by sanskars from many lifetimes.

Sanskars — The impressions, tendencies, and records that have accumulated in the soul across many births. They shape the buddhi and, through it, the mind.

Mann — The mind. The thinking, feeling, wishing faculty within the soul. In soul consciousness, it becomes still and turns naturally toward the Father.

Nisankalp — The thoughtless state. The quiet stage in which the mind has no more scattered affirmations and rests in its own original peace.

Vichar Sagar Manthan — Churning of the ocean of thought. The deep contemplation of divine knowledge that refines the buddhi and transforms the sanskars.

Vairag — Detachment. The natural loss of interest in the worldly pulls that follows the awakening of true knowledge.

Upram — The inner state in which the mind has become calm and no longer runs after the pulls of the five-element world.

Karmateet Awastha — The state beyond karma. The stage at which a soul has become fully free from all karmic bondage and can move upward into higher dimensions.

Yatha Brahmand Tatha Pind — “As is the universe, so is the body.” The principle that the body of a soul in any dimension is composed of the same elements as the atmosphere of that dimension.

Nidra Yog — Sleep-yoga. Entering meditation by placing a conscious affirmation at the moment of falling asleep, so that the unconscious mind opens into higher recordings.

Brahmastra — The divine inner gateway that opens with the full establishment of atma swaroop, enabling the opening of the third eye.

Shivpuri — The abode of Shiv and Shakti. The highest realm of aakar creation within a brahmand, where bodies are fully of param tattva.

Vishnupuri — The realm of Vishnu (Vaikuntha). A lower aakar realm where bodies are half of supreme elements and half of ordinary elements.

Swargaloka — The heavenly realm. A subtle-body world of three elements, the dwelling place of devtas.

Saptarishis — The seven original sages directly created by Brahma in the aakar form at the beginning of our brahmand.
