About Bapuji

Bapuji (full name: Bapuji Dashrathbhai Patel, also lovingly called “Dadaji” by the younger generation) was born in 1956 in the small village of Akhaj in the Mehsana district of Gujarat. However, he spent his childhood in another village named Ambasan, also located in the Mehsana district.

In the early part of his life, he was a highly successful lawyer. Later, he devoted his life to realizing the supreme spiritual truth and bringing this divine knowledge forward for the welfare of humanity. Today, this supreme knowledge serves as a guiding light for true seekers to realize their ultimate destiny. It is a blessing of the highest divinity that the present time is witnessing the rise of this supreme spiritual knowledge, guiding souls on Earth to return to their original source.

Despite being raised in a very poor family and facing challenging circumstances, Bapuji had a deep desire to transform this sorrowful and suffering world into a better place. At the young age of six, he questioned God repeatedly, asking why God remained silent about the suffering of humanity. This intense longing to end human suffering eventually led him to attain the highest level of spirituality later in life.

Even as a child, Bapuji would spend hours alone in the fields, often neglecting his own comfort. Due to poverty, he would walk barefoot without shoes or sandals, frequently getting pricked by thorns. Many times, he would stay late in the fields and, on his way back home, encounter subtle world entities. These experiences sparked his interest in communicating with subtle world souls.

Bapuji was courageous from a young age, which helped him overcome many obstacles. Alongside his studies in chartered accountancy (CA), he gave tuition classes to support himself financially. Later, he completed his Bachelor of Law (LLB) degree and became a well-known lawyer in Ahmedabad.

In 1997, he established a spiritual institution called “Vishwa Parivartak Ishwariya Vidhyalay” in Chenpur, Ahmedabad, with the mission of transforming this mortal world, filled with suffering and disorder, into an eternal divine world of immortality. Smt. Sushma Tandon, lovingly known as “Maa,” worked alongside Bapuji in this grand divine mission.

To accomplish this mission, Bapuji worked tirelessly, dedicating all his resources to this divine purpose. During that time, he would deliver continuous spiritual discourses for up to 18 hours without rest. In these discourses, he explained the highest dimensions of divine knowledge, which he realized through deep meditation and divine vision in a state of superconsciousness. This knowledge goes beyond the imagination of the ordinary human mind.

Bapuji’s teachings cover a vast range of topics, including the types of celestial creators across different dimensions, the creation of our solar system, galaxy, and universe, and most importantly, the transcendental knowledge of the multiverse and realities beyond it. His knowledge is supremely profound and is intended for highly evolved seekers, referred to as “behad souls.” According to Bapuji, these “behad souls” will play a key role in transforming this mortal world into an eternal divine realm.

At present, Bapuji remains deeply engaged in intense meditation and samadhi for long hours. He does not meet anyone, as he is continuously immersed in his transcendental mission in a superconscious state.

Preface

Gyan Daan Maha Daan

(Sharing Knowledge is the highest charity — share to the maximum extent with all.)

— Bapuji Dashrathbhai Patel

Every night, as the body comes to rest and the mind falls into stillness, something remarkable happens. The ordinary mind, with all its noise and activity, gradually withdraws. Sleep descends. And yet, one thing never sleeps — the soul.

This book has been compiled by the Paramshanti Team, inspired by the spiritual discourses of Bapuji Dashrathbhai Patel. In these teachings, Bapuji illuminates what truly happens when we sleep. He explains the state of deep sleep, the origin of dreams, the mechanics of how the mind reads its stored recordings, and the eternal wakefulness of the soul that lies beneath all of this.

Bapuji's knowledge cuts through the confusion of ordinary understanding and presents the inner reality with extraordinary precision. His explanation of the mind's layers — the conscious, subconscious, and unconscious — and how each interacts with the body's subtle sheaths opens a doorway to genuine self-understanding.

These teachings are presented in good faith for the spiritual upliftment of sincere seekers, with the editorial wording and arrangement being the responsibility of the Paramshanti Team.

Chapter I

The Soul Is Always Awake

There is a common question that arises in the mind of many seekers: when the body falls into deep sleep, does the soul also sleep?

Bapuji answers this with absolute clarity.

The soul never sleeps.

The atma is chaitanya — it is consciousness itself. It is a divine power, a supreme light. It is eternal, indestructible, and self-luminous. The concept of sleep does not apply to the soul. Sleep belongs to the mind and the body. The soul simply is — always aware, always present, always alive.

♦ Bapuji’s Original Words: “Atma to chaitanya hai. Woh hamesha ek divine power hai, param prakash hai. Woh kabhi nahi soti.”

This understanding is foundational. The atma is not something that needs rest. It is the mann — the mind — that requires sleep. It is the body, with all its layers, that requires sleep. The soul simply witnesses, unchanging, beneath everything.

Chapter II

The Layers That Cover the Soul

To understand what happens during sleep, one must first understand the structure of the human being according to Bapuji's teachings.

The soul is not the body. The soul is far more subtle than the physical form we see. Surrounding the soul are multiple layers — subtle coverings — through which it experiences life in this world.

The Sheaths of the Soul

Bapuji describes these layers as: the gross physical body, the sukshma sharir (subtle body), the karan sharir (causal body), the mahakaran sharir (super causal body), and the param mahakaran sharir (supreme super causal body).

Within these layers resides the mind. The mann (mind) is covered by the buddhi (intellect), and within the intellect reside the sanskar — deep impressions formed by the actions of many lifetimes.

The soul lies at the innermost centre of this entire structure. It is covered by all these layers, one upon another. Because of this, the soul — though always conscious and luminous — remains, as Bapuji puts it, compressed beneath them.

These coverings belong to the mind. The mind is what is entangled in the world. The soul itself is not entangled. It is pure, beyond all of this — but the coverings make it appear otherwise.

Chapter III

What Happens in Deep Sleep

When the body rests and sleep descends, a systematic withdrawal takes place across all these layers.

The Withdrawal of the Mind

In the first stage of sleep, the conscious mind grows inactive. As sleep deepens, the subconscious mind becomes active. In the deepest sleep, even the subconscious withdraws and the unconscious mind becomes dominant.

As the mind sinks deeper, the buddhi also enters sleep. The sanskar — the impressions — also become dormant. The entire mental structure, layer by layer, settles into stillness.

In this state, nothing is remembered. No thoughts arise. No images form. Even dreams do not appear, because dreams require at least the partial activity of the subconscious mind. In the deepest sleep, that activity too has ceased.

The Soul in Deep Sleep

Through all of this, the atma remains unchanged. It does not go anywhere. It does not sleep. It is simply no longer obscured by the noise of the mind. The coverings have quietened. The soul is still — present, conscious, and untouched.

Bapuji is precise on this point: it is the mind that sleeps. It is the body that rests. The soul has no need for either.

◆ Bapuji's Original Words: "Sone ki zaroorat mann ko padti hai, sharir ko padti hai. Atma ko kabhi bhi sone ki zaroorat nahi padti."

Chapter IV

The Mystery of Dreams

Having understood deep sleep, we can now turn to the question of dreams. Where do they come from? Why are they so strange and disjointed? Why do we dream of things we have never seen, never thought of, never known in this lifetime?

The Subconscious Mind and the Causal Body

Dreams arise when the mind enters the subconscious state. In this partial sleep, the conscious mind switches off, but the subconscious mind becomes active. The subconscious mind then reads the recordings stored in the karan sharir — the causal body.

The karan sharir contains the records of many lifetimes — innumerable stories, events, and impressions accumulated over countless births. The subconscious mind reads all of this data simultaneously.

Bapuji explains that the mind does not read these recordings one at a time. It images everything at once. Every story, every impression, every event recorded in the causal body is read together in a single sweep. The mind then constructs a combined picture from all of this data, merging scenes and events from entirely different lifetimes into one stream.

Why Dreams Are Distorted

The records in the causal body come from many different lifetimes, many different worlds, many different dimensions. When the subconscious mind reads these records, it does not present them in an organised or sequential manner.

Records from two, three, or four different lifetimes get mixed together. Fragments from one story merge with fragments from another. As a result, what appears in the dream seems very strange — disconnected, unusual, and unlike anything from the waking life of this birth.

Furthermore, even when the subconscious mind is fully active, only a small portion of what it reads transfers into the conscious mind. This is why one remembers only fragments of a dream upon waking, if anything at all.

Bapuji clarifies this further. When the mind is still slightly active — when it has not yet fully withdrawn — a thin channel remains open between the subconscious and the conscious mind. Whatever passes through this narrow channel is what the dreamer remembers. Everything else, which the mind reads in full from the causal body, is lost. The dreams that seemed vivid moments before waking dissolve instantly, because the conscious mind was simply not open enough to receive them.

Dreams in the Deepest Sleep

When sleep is so deep that even the subconscious mind is no longer active, the unconscious mind becomes dominant. In this state, the soul descends even deeper — into the mahakaran sharir (super causal body) and the param mahakaran sharir (supreme super causal body).

In this depth, the soul may be observing the recordings of these far subtler layers — records of journeys across galaxies, universes, and great universes. But because the unconscious mind's data does not transfer into the conscious mind, none of this is remembered upon waking.

No dream is seen. Nothing is recalled. From the outside, it appears as a completely blank, dreamless sleep. But on the inside, the soul is resting in dimensions far beyond the ordinary mind.

Chapter V

The Yogi and Deep Sleep

Bapuji draws a remarkable parallel between the deepest sleep and the state of a yogi established in soul-conscious awareness.

The Yogi in Atma Swarup

When a yogi is established in atma swarup — soul-conscious state — their unconscious mind opens. This opening provides access to the karan sharir, the mahakaran sharir, and even the param mahakaran sharir.

In this state, the yogi can know the information encoded across all these layers. The soul knows the recordings in the causal body and the super causal body. The yogi can know where the soul has come from — whether from a galaxy, a universe, a great universe, or beyond. The third eye activates. The sahasrara chakra opens. And when the sahasrara opens, the soul comes into connection with infinite numbers of galaxies, universes, and cosmic realms.

Bapuji emphasises that the opening of the third eye is itself a profound event, but what lies beyond it is far deeper still. When the soul connects outward through the third eye, its awareness reaches across infinite crores of universes and galaxies. Everything that the soul perceives in this expanded state is recorded into the mahakaran sharir. Upon returning to ordinary body-consciousness, the soul forgets all of this data. The experience vanishes, but the record remains.

The soul, in this state, downloads the data encoded in the causal, super causal, and supreme super causal bodies directly into its intellect.

The Forgetting Upon Return

However, Bapuji explains, when the yog is over and the yogi returns to body-conscious state, they forget everything. Whatever was seen or known during the yog is lost upon re-entering body-consciousness.

This is why even advanced yogis may struggle to retain the full knowledge received in deep meditation. The ordinary conscious mind, upon resuming activity, cannot hold what the soul witnessed in those deeper dimensions.

The state of deep, dreamless sleep and the state of a yogi in soul-conscious awareness are, in their inner quality, remarkably similar. Both involve the quietening of the conscious mind. Both involve the soul moving through deeper and deeper layers. The difference lies in awareness — the yogi moves consciously, while the sleeping person moves unknowingly.

Chapter VI

How Yog Dissolves the Records

Bapuji explains that the impressions and records stored in the causal body, the super causal body, and the supreme super causal body are the very source of dreams. As long as these records exist, dreams will continue.

The Power of Yog

When a soul practises yog — genuine meditation and soul-conscious union — the power generated by this practice begins to delete the data encoded in these subtle layers. The records in the karan sharir, the mahakaran sharir, and the param mahakaran sharir are gradually erased.

A State Without Dreams

When the soul becomes fully established in soul-conscious state and the records have been completely dissolved, there will be no impressions left to surface. No data will remain to emerge into the subconscious mind. And because there is nothing left to rise, there will be no dreams.

This is the natural outcome of deep yog. It is not merely a spiritual aspiration — it is an inner science. The practice dissolves what was accumulated, layer by layer, until the soul rests in absolute clarity.

Dreams, in this understanding, are not random. They are reflections of what remains recorded within. As these impressions fade through practice, the dreams too begin to dissolve. And the soul, ever conscious, ever luminous, is finally free to rest in its own natural state — complete, undisturbed, and awake.

◆ Bapuji Insight: “When the soul is established in Soul-conscious State, there won’t be any records left and hence there won’t be any dreams.”

Bapuji Insights

The following lines are drawn directly from Bapuji's discourses. They are presented here without modification.

◆ Bapuji Insight: “In a very deep sleep, the state of the soul is actually similar to that of a yogi established in Soul-conscious State.”

◆ Bapuji Insight: “With the power of Yog, the data encoded in the causal body, super causal body, and supreme super causal body gets deleted.”

◆ Bapuji Insight: “The mind does not read the recordings one by one. It images everything simultaneously — all the stories, all the impressions, all at once.”

Glossary

The following terms appear in this book. Hindi and Sanskrit terms are italicised on first use in the text.

Atma — The soul; a point of conscious energy, eternal and self-luminous.

Atma Swarup — Soul-conscious state; the state in which a being is fully identified with the soul rather than the body or mind.

Behad — Beyond limits; transcendental; that which surpasses the boundaries of the ordinary cosmos.

Buddhi — Intellect; the faculty of discernment and reasoning within the mind.

Causal Body (Karan Sharir) — The subtlest layer of the human form that stores the recordings of all actions across lifetimes.

Chaitanya — Consciousness; the living, aware quality inherent in the soul.

Conscious Mind — The active, waking state of the mind that processes immediate experience.

Had — Within limits; finite; the ordinary bounded cosmos.

Karan Sharir — The causal body; a body composed of subtle impressions and karmic records.

Kundalini — The dormant spiritual energy coiled at the base of the spine, which rises through the chakras upon awakening.

Mahakaran Sharir — The super causal body; a body beyond the causal, containing even deeper cosmic records.

Mann — Mind; the faculty of thought, imagination, and emotion.

Param Mahakaran Sharir — The supreme super causal body; the deepest cosmic record body of the soul.

Paramdham — The supreme abode; the original home of all souls.

Paramshanti — Supreme peace; the highest state of inner stillness.

Sahasrara Chakra — The crown energy centre at the top of the head; when opened, it connects the soul to infinite cosmic awareness.

Sanskar — Deep impressions or tendencies stored within the mind from past actions and experiences.

Subconscious Mind — The semi-active layer of mind that operates just below waking awareness, holding memories and dreams.

Subtle Body (Sukshma Sharir) — The non-physical body of the soul that carries the mind, intellect, and impressions.

Super Causal Body — A body finer than the causal body, containing records of the soul's journey across vast cosmic dimensions.

Unconscious Mind — The deepest layer of the mind, linked to the causal body and beyond.

Yog — Union of the soul with the divine; deep meditative practice leading to soul-conscious awareness.

Yogi — One who practises Yog; a being established in soul-conscious union with the divine.
