About Bapuji

Bapuji (full name: Bapuji Dashrathbhai Patel, also lovingly called “Dadaji” by the younger generation) was born in 1956 in the small village of Akhaj in the Mehsana district of Gujarat. However, he spent his childhood in another village named Ambasan, also located in the Mehsana district.

In the early part of his life, he was a highly successful lawyer. Later, he devoted his life to realizing the supreme spiritual truth and bringing this divine knowledge forward for the welfare of humanity. Today, this supreme knowledge serves as a guiding light for true seekers to realize their ultimate destiny. It is a blessing of the highest divinity that the present time is witnessing the rise of this supreme spiritual knowledge, guiding souls on Earth to return to their original source.

Despite being raised in a very poor family and facing challenging circumstances, Bapuji had a deep desire to transform this sorrowful and suffering world into a better place. At the young age of six, he questioned God repeatedly, asking why God remained silent about the suffering of humanity. This intense longing to end human suffering eventually led him to attain the highest level of spirituality later in life.

Even as a child, Bapuji would spend hours alone in the fields, often neglecting his own comfort. Due to poverty, he would walk barefoot without shoes or sandals, frequently getting pricked by thorns. Many times, he would stay late in the fields and, on his way back home, encounter subtle world entities. These experiences sparked his interest in communicating with subtle world souls.

Bapuji was courageous from a young age, which helped him overcome many obstacles. Alongside his studies in chartered accountancy (CA), he gave tuition classes to support himself financially. Later, he completed his Bachelor of Law (LLB) degree and became a well-known lawyer in Ahmedabad.

In 1997, he established a spiritual institution called “Vishwa Parivartak Ishwariya Vidhyalay” in Chenpur, Ahmedabad, with the mission of transforming this mortal world, filled with suffering and disorder, into an eternal divine world of immortality. Smt. Sushma Tandon, lovingly known as “Maa,” worked alongside Bapuji in this grand divine mission.

To accomplish this mission, Bapuji worked tirelessly, dedicating all his resources to this divine purpose. During that time, he would deliver continuous spiritual discourses for up to 18 hours without rest. In these discourses, he explained the highest dimensions of divine knowledge, which he realized through deep meditation and divine vision in a state of superconsciousness. This knowledge goes beyond the imagination of the ordinary human mind.

Bapuji’s teachings cover a vast range of topics, including the types of celestial creators across different dimensions, the creation of our solar system, galaxy, and universe, and most importantly, the transcendental knowledge of the multiverse and realities beyond it. His knowledge is supremely profound and is intended for highly evolved seekers, referred to as “behad souls.” According to Bapuji, these “behad souls” will play a key role in transforming this mortal world into an eternal divine realm.

At present, Bapuji remains deeply engaged in intense meditation and samadhi for long hours. He does not meet anyone, as he is continuously immersed in his transcendental mission in a superconscious state.

— by Bapuji Dashrathbhai Patel

Every human heart is drawn to music. A melody can calm us, lift us, or move us to tears. Yet very few have ever asked the deeper question: where did music truly come from, and why does it touch the soul so completely?

This book gathers the words of Bapuji Dashrathbhai Patel on this very subject. In his discourses, Bapuji explains that music is not a human invention. Sound and music are woven into the very fabric of creation. They exist on Earth, in the heavenly realms, and in the supreme abode of Paramdham as the very form of supreme bliss.

Here you will learn how sound first arose at the moment of creation, how it remains recorded throughout the cosmos, how the ancients used sound to reach the deities, and what the seers truly meant by the unstruck sound that liberates the soul. You will also learn the difference between music that pleases only the senses and music that brings true joy to the mind.

Nothing in these pages has been added from outside. Every idea here flows directly from what Bapuji has spoken. The work of the editors has been only to arrange his words gently, so that a reader new to this knowledge can follow them with ease and peace.

May this book help every music lover hear, behind every melody, the one eternal sound from which all music is born.

CHAPTER 1

Music Lives in Every World

Music exists for the joy of the human mind. It is the mind that delights in a melody, and it is for the happiness of the mind that music is heard. But music is not found on Earth alone. It is present in the heavenly realm as well. It is present in Brahma Puri, in Vishnu Puri, and in Shiv Puri. And in the supreme abode of Paramdham, music exists in its highest form — as param anand, the very form of supreme bliss.

The music of Paramdham is of an entirely different kind. There is no player there and no one who strikes an instrument. It is the music of the mind itself, rising from within the mind. When the mind is in supreme happiness, the music of supreme bliss arises on its own. In this way music is everywhere.

Music Even in the Galaxy

Music reaches even into the Maha Brahmand, the galaxy. The great creators — Maha Brahma, Maha Vishnu and the Maha Shaktiyan — also have music. But their music is of the innermost kind. Within the soul, beneath its outer coverings, there is an outer mind, the bahya man; and there is the inner mind, the antarman. It is the inner mind that hears the music.

There the music is not of the outer mind, and it is not instrumental. There are no instruments at all. The music plays within the inner mind — a vibration rising from deep inside. This is the highest music of all, heard not through the ears but in the depth of one's own being.

“Music ek insaan ko mann ke aanand ke liye hota hai. Dharti par music hota hai aisa nahin, swarg lok mein bhi hota hai, aur paramdham mein to param aanand swaroop mein hota hai.”

“Music is for the joy of a human being’s mind. Music is not only on Earth — it is in the heavenly realm too, and in Paramdham it exists as the very form of supreme bliss.”

CHAPTER 2

The Music Within and the Music Without

Sometimes, sitting quietly, a human being can become lost within. If the mind becomes absorbed in good things — lost in the remembrance of Paramatma, reaching a lavleen state in which the soul becomes one with the Supreme — then a music begins to rise from within. That inner music plays in such a way that the mind becomes full of joy. This is what may be called the inner music, the music that comes from one's own depth.

The music we hear today is of a different kind. It is the outer music — the bahya music. Whatever we hear in films, and whatever music fills the world, with its loud and pounding drums, is pleasure for the ears alone. Bapuji calls it kann ras, the relish of the ears, not man ras, the joy of the mind.

The Senses and the Mind

Among the five organs of action, the karmendriya, there is the faculty of the ears. Outer music pleases that faculty of the ears. It satisfies the senses, but it does not reach the mind. Inner music is different. It does not need any instrument, for it rises from within and gladdens the mind itself. This is the difference a true seeker must learn to feel: between sound that only pleases the ear, and sound that brings real joy to the mind.

“Jo aaj hum sun rabe hain wo bahya music hai. Wo kann ras hai, wo man ras nabin hai.”

“What we hear today is outer music. It is relish for the ears, not joy for the mind.”

CHAPTER 3

How Music Rose, and How It Fell

Music changes with the state of the soul. As the soul's stage falls, the music too falls with it. When a human being becomes tamo pradhan — heavy and impure in nature — the music also becomes tamo pradhan.

In earlier times we had our classical music, the shastriya sangeet. The music of those days in Hindustan was so beautiful that it would move the mind itself. Bapuji has said that he too is fond of classical music and listens to it. In shastriya sangeet the mind finds rest. The mind finds happiness. The mind finds comfort. The mind finds peace.

But now the minds of people have become tamo pradhan, and so the music has become tamo pradhan as well. As the inner state of humanity has fallen, the music that humanity makes and enjoys has fallen with it. The remedy is not in the music alone but in the soul: as the soul rises again toward its pure sato pradhan state, the music it loves will rise with it.

“Pehle hamara shastriya sangeet itna achha tha ki mann dolta tha. Logon ke mann tamon pradhan ho gaye, to music bhi tamon pradhan ho gaya.”

“Earlier our classical music was so fine that it would sway the mind. People's minds became tamon-pradhan, so the music too became tamon-pradhan.”

CHAPTER 4

Sound Was Born With Creation

In the Brahmand, the solar system, there are many kinds of sound. Ever since the Brahmand came into being, every sound that has arisen, and every civilization that has lived, has left its sound within the Brahmand. Whether in the subtle world, the sookshma jagat, in the air element, the vayu tattva, or in the space element, the akash tattva — wherever you go in the Brahmand, you will find sound.

The First Vibration

At the very beginning of creation, when the formless Param Brahm Parmeshwar created Brahma, Vishnu and Mahesh, the vibrations of that creation were laid down in the atmosphere, the vayumandal. This Primordial sound of creation stands for those three — Brahma, Vishnu and Mahesh — the very first beings to be brought into existence.

After them, the deities were created one by one, and the vibrations of their creation were laid down too. Then the Earth was formed, and the vibrations of its turning were recorded. The Sun came into being, then the planets, their satellites, and the moon. The many deities then lived upon their own planets.

A Cosmos That Remembers

So vast is this record that the vayumandal holds the sound of every age. Bapuji explains that the Brahmand has already completed an immense span of time. If an instrument could be made delicate enough to read these very low vibrations from the atmosphere, the history and geography of countless births could be recovered from that record. Nothing that has ever sounded in creation is truly lost; it remains, held within the Brahmand as vibration.

“Jab se bhi Brahmand bana hai, jo jo aawaz nikli hai, bani hai, sabhi civilization hui hai, to wo sabki aawaz Brahmand ke andar padi hai.”

“Since the Brahmand was created, every sound that arose and was made, and every civilization that lived — all of their sound lies recorded within the Brahmand.”

CHAPTER 5

The Sound of the Deities

When the deities lived upon their planets, sound became the way to call them. For every deity a mantra was made, so that the deity could be invoked. To call upon Shankar, the damru is the symbol; sound the damru, and Shankar would appear at once. To invoke Vishnu, the conch, the shankh, is blown, and Vishnu would send forth his form. In the same way the other deities — of Venus, of Saturn, of wind, of water, of fire — each had their own call, and each lived upon their own planet.

The Mantra as a Sacred Call

A mantra is like a code-word: a sound by which a particular deity is called and pleased. Our Vedas and scriptures hold countless shlok and mantra, and each deity has a different one. When a mantra was uttered in a temple, its vibration travelled straight upward — to the higher realms, to other realms, and even to other Brahmand.

This was not limited to one solar system. From other Brahmand too, beings came and went. The seers who knew the Supreme could rise to Brahma Puri, and higher to Vishnu Puri. Each deity had its mantra, its sacred call, and through that sound a true connection was kept across the realms.

God Hears the Vibration, Not the Noise

People today raise loudspeakers outside their places of worship and call out loudly, as if the Divine had grown deaf. But the Divine catches only the spandan, the vibration. Even the thought that moves within your mind is caught. When a soul on Earth remembers Vishnu, He catches that vibration — and not from one soul alone, but from countless souls across the Earth and the lower realms, all at the same moment. Such was the power of the deities: to catch the vibration of millions at once, to read the very thought, and to fulfil their wishes by sending forth their forms.

For this reason, there is no need to shout. Even when a mantra is uttered silently within the mind, its vibration reaches the deity it is meant for.

Instruments of Invocation

This is why, across the world, instruments are used to call upon the divine. The dhhol is beaten and the shehnai is played in the worship of the deities, as in the festival of Navratri. The temple bell, the ghant is rung as one enters — a great bell of brass or copper. Its meaning is simple: if the Divine were resting, the sound announces that the devotee has come. In the same way great bells are rung in churches. The sound is the call, and the call is the worship.

“Wo to keval spandan pakadta hai. Tumhare mann mein soch karte ho to bhi wo pakad leta hai.”

*“He catches only the vibration. Even when you merely think within your mind,
He catches it.”*

CHAPTER 6

The Sound That Lives in Stone

In ancient times, great temples were built, and within them a ceremony of consecration, the pran pratishtha, was performed. Through this rite the life-force of a deity would enter the stone image, so that the very idol of stone became living. The deity would then bless all who came for its sight.

The Pillars That Sing

In such a temple, all the deities were invoked into the pillars themselves. When the deities came, each one left its proof behind — a sign that it had been present. Into each separate pillar, each deity placed its own sound, its own pran. And so, when one touches such a pillar, it begins to sound; and each pillar gives a different sound, because a different deity left its voice within it. As long as that pillar stands, and as long as the temple endures, the sound will continue to come from it. Many such proofs remain across this land, from the time of the original eternal religion of the deities.

Sound Imprinted in the Mountains

Deep within mountains and far underground, in distant caves, there live the souls of the subtle world — those whom people now call by other names, but whom Bapuji calls the souls of the sookshma jagat. These souls dwell there and chant the mantra of their chosen deity. Over endless repetition, those mantra become imprinted into the very stone of the mountains.

So the sound of the mantra begins to come from the stone itself. It seems as though the rock is speaking, as though the sacred sound is rising from within it. Just as the sacred mantra of Shiva was chanted again and again in the mountain temples of old, the subtle-world souls dwell there and chant it still, exactly as human beings go there to chant. In this way, the people of old worshipped sound itself — and that worship was the utterance of the mantra.

“Baar-baar mantra japte hain to patthron ke andar bhi wo mantra chhap jaate hain. Patthar mein bhi aawaz mantra ki aati hai.”

“When a mantra is chanted again and again, it becomes imprinted even within the stones. From the stone too, the sound of the mantra arises.”

CHAPTER 7

The Healing Power of Sound

When prayers are offered within the dome of a temple or a church, the sound rises into that dome and spreads. There it multiplies. And when those waves return and touch the human body once more, a positive effect is felt. The one who has heard it senses that a great change has come over them. This is the frequency of sound at work.

For this reason the frequency of sound is now being used to heal. Many forms of music therapy and sound therapy have appeared, and in them the effect of sound upon the human body is studied and measured. Today this stands as one of the alternative forms of medicine.

Sound and the Sorrowing Mind

Bapuji explains the inner reason. If certain kinds of music are played to a soul that is in sorrow, and that person listens with full attention, placing the sound close to the ears, then the sorrow will leave, and such deep comfort and ease will be felt in its place. For every effect of sorrow or of joy is felt in the brain, and the right sound brings the brain to rest.

Even the Animals Respond

This is true not for human beings alone. Nowadays good music is played to cows and buffaloes; they are seated in comfort, and they give better milk for it. They too are living souls, the jeevatma — whether a cow, a buffalo, a goat, or any other creature. Sound reaches the living soul within them as well.

“Kuchh prakar ke sangeet agar dukhi ko sunaya jaaye aur wo dhyaan se sune, to uska dukh chala jayega aur sukh mein itna aaram ka anubhav karega.”

“If certain kinds of music are played to one who is in sorrow, and he listens attentively, his sorrow will leave, and he will feel such deep comfort in its place.”

CHAPTER 8

Anhad Naad — The Unstruck Sound

Many people ask about the Anhad Naad, the unstruck sound, and many understand it as the primordial sound of creation. To understand it, we must return to the very moment of creation.

When the formless Param Brahm Parmeshwar created Shiva — bringing form out of the formless — Shiva and Shakti together created Vishnu, and from the navel of Vishnu, Brahma was created. Thus the three came into being: Brahma, Vishnu and Mahesh. At the moment of creating them, a supreme feeling, a param bhaav, arose within. Within that feeling, supreme bliss arose. And in that state of param anand, vibrations came forth — and within those vibrations there was music.

For whenever a soul stands in the form of supreme bliss, the music of supreme bliss rises from within it. Just as the striking of one thing against another produces a sound — as the ringing of a temple bell makes its tone — so, at the very moment of creation, within the formless Param Brahm Parmeshwar a feeling arose, a sense of pure bliss, and from that bliss, from the vayumandal itself, music was born. And that music was sweet beyond measure. This is why it is said that at the creation of the Brahmand, the primordial sound of creation came forth.

The Struck and the Unstruck

The Ahat Naad, the struck sound, is this very sound of creation. It is the vibration-sound of supreme bliss that Param Brahm Parmeshwar produced while creating Brahma, Vishnu and Mahesh. That sound pervaded the param tattva, the supreme element; and pervading the param tattva, it spread, little by little, throughout the entire Brahmand. Indeed any sound, in time, spreads in this way; and so today all those sounds exist as vibration, filling the whole Brahmand.

The Stage Needed to Hear It

Those sound-waves spread in the state of supreme bliss and reached even to the Earth. But to catch the vibration of that sound, the soul needs a particular stage — the very stage it once had, the formless nirakar stage. Only when the soul enters that utterly formless state can it catch those waves of sound.

This is why the sound of creation holds such value. When it was created, those sound-waves were the finest and most beautiful in the entire Brahmand. If a soul, established in its true form as atma swaroop, draws power from the Almighty Authority and becomes equal to Shiva in the formless stage, then that sound of creation will surely be heard. But it takes great effort. One's own stage must become equal to the stage of Param Brahm itself. And for that, the soul needs power — the power to understand that sound, and the power to hear it.

“Har koi vibration, jab atma param aanand swaroop mein hoti hai, to uske andar param aanand ka sangeet nikalta hai.”

“In every vibration, when the soul is in the form of supreme bliss, the music of supreme bliss arises from within.”

CHAPTER 9

The Sound of the Planets and Stars

The scientists of NASA have heard sounds in space, and they find that the sound of each planet is a little different from the others. This is no surprise. In the vayumandal there are countless kinds of souls, and so there are countless kinds of sound. The sound of every soul came into the vayumandal in time.

When Brahma created the Saptarishi, the seven seers, and as they in turn created further, the feelings that arose in the mind during creation slowly settled and fell, and from creating, the angelic beings became deities, and the deities became human beings. Then the Sun was formed, and the Earth was formed. The Earth turns, and the sound of its turning is in the vayumandal. All the planets turn, and so each has its sound. Within the Sun there is a great explosion as it changes from one state to another — and surely that too has its sound. A photograph of the Sun cannot carry that sound, yet the sound itself travels outward. The great suns and stars seen at night send us their light; and in that light, their sound also comes.

Why Light Comes First, Then Sound

But the speed of sound is not the speed of light; sound is slower. So the light is seen first, and the sound arrives afterward. When a bomb bursts, the flash is seen first, and only then does the sound reach us. The speed of light is three hundred thousand kilometres in a single second, and the speed of sound is far less. This is why, in the clouds, the lightning is seen first, and only afterward comes the roar of thunder. This is a law of nature, set by the difference of speed.

And so it is everywhere — on Earth, and anywhere in the whole Brahmand. When Maha Shiv created Maha Vishnu and Maha Brahma, vibrations arose there too. They travel through the entire Maha Brahmand, the galaxy, and the galaxy's vibrations reach into our own Brahmand. To hear all of this, the soul must reach the right stage.

“Pehle wo light dikhti hai, uske baad mein dhwani. Jaise bam phootta hai to pehle light dikhti hai phir aawaz aati hai.”

“First the light is seen, and afterward the sound. Just as when a bomb bursts, first the light is seen and then the sound arrives.”

CHAPTER 10

Hearing the Eternal Sound

Those who walk the path of devotion hold that one who is able to hear the Anhad Naad, the unstruck sound, attains liberation — mukti, even jeevan mukti, liberation within this very life. Bapuji says he does not claim to know this with exactness, yet it is believed that the hearing of this sound holds the very highest value.

But the unstruck sound cannot be heard by ordinary effort, for sound lies everywhere in the vayumandal. The whole atmosphere is filled with sound upon sound. To catch the one eternal sound from among them, the soul needs a particular stage — the stage of atma swaroop, the formless nirakar stage.

The Way to That Stage

How does the soul reach the formless state of atma swaroop? Power must come into the soul. The soul must become sato pradhan, pure and full of light. And beyond even sato pradhan, it must become triguna atit — beyond the three qualities altogether. For at the very beginning, at the time of that first sound, the three qualities did not yet exist: there was neither sato, nor rajo, nor tamo. The eternal sound belongs to a state beyond all three.

This, then, is the journey for every true lover of music. Behind every melody on Earth lies one eternal sound, born at the moment of creation and still spread through all the realms. To hear it is not to listen harder with the ears, but to raise the soul — to draw power from the Almighty Authority, to become atma swaroop, and to rise to that formless state from which the first music of supreme bliss once came. There, at last, the seeker and the eternal sound become one.

“Wo dhwani ko samajhne ke liye atma ko atm swaroop ki anubhuti ho, wahi stage chahiye.”

“To grasp that sound, the soul must have the experience of soul-consciousness — that very stage is needed.”

Bapuji Insights

These are the words of Bapuji, gathered here so the reader may return to them in stillness. The first line carries Bapuji's own words; the line beneath gives their meaning.

“Music ek insaan ko mann ke aanand ke liye hota hai. Dharti par music hota hai aisa nahin, swarg lok mein bhi hota hai, aur paramdham mein to param aanand swaroop mein hota hai.”

Meaning: Music is for the joy of a human being's mind. Music is not only on Earth — it is in the heavenly realm too, and in Paramdham it exists as the very form of supreme bliss.

“Wo mann ke andar ka music hota hai. Mann khush hota hai to wahan paramanand ka music hota hai.”

Meaning: It is the music within the mind. When the mind is happy, the music of supreme bliss arises there.

“Jo aaj hum sun rahe hain wo bahya music hai. Wo kann ras hai, wo man ras nahin hai.”

Meaning: What we hear today is outer music. It is relish for the ears, not joy for the mind.

“Shastriya sangeet mein mann ko aaram milta hai, mann ko khushi milti hai, mann ko sukhh milta hai, mann ko chain milta hai.”

Meaning: In classical music the mind finds rest, the mind finds happiness, the mind finds comfort, the mind finds peace.

Meaning: People’s minds became tamo-pradhan, so the music too became tamo-pradhan.

“Jab se bhi Brahmand bana hai, jo jo aawaz nikli hai, bani hai, wo sab Brahmand ke andar padi hai.”

Meaning: Since the Brahmand was created, every sound that arose and was made — all of it lies recorded within the Brahmand.

“Wo to keval spandan pakadta hai. Tumhare mann mein soch karte ho to bhi wo pakad leta hai.”

Meaning: He catches only the vibration. Even when you merely think within your mind, He catches it.

“Keval mann mein uchchaaran karne se bhi wo devi devta tak uske vibration pahunchte hain. Isliye zor se bolne ki koi zaroorat nabin hai.”

Meaning: Even by uttering it silently within the mind, its vibrations reach that deity. So there is no need to speak loudly.

Meaning: When a mantra is chanted again and again, it becomes imprinted even within the stones.

Meaning: If certain kinds of music are played to one who is in sorrow, and he listens attentively, his sorrow will leave.

“Har koi vibration, jab atma param aanand swaroop mein hoti hai, to uske andar param aanand ka sangeet nikalta hai.”

Meaning: In every vibration, when the soul is in the form of supreme bliss, the music of supreme bliss arises from within it.

“Pehle wo light dikhti hai, uske baad mein dhvani. Light ki speed teen lakh kilometre per second hai aur aawaz ki speed kam hai.”

Meaning: First the light is seen, and afterward the sound. The speed of light is three hundred thousand kilometres per second, and the speed of sound is less.

“Wo dhvani ko samajhne ke liye atma ko atma swaroop ki anubhuti ho, wahi stage chahiye.”

Meaning: To grasp that sound, the soul must have the experience of soul-consciousness — that very stage is needed.

Glossary

Spiritual terms used in this book, explained simply for the reader who is new to this knowledge.

Abat Naad — The “struck” sound; here, the primordial sound of creation itself, produced at the moment Brahma, Vishnu and Mahesh were created.

Akash Tattva — The space or ether element, one of the elements that make up the subtle world.

Almighty Authority — The supreme, formless source of all power, the great great grandfather of all souls, from whom a soul draws power.

Anhad Naad — The “unstruck” sound; the eternal sound of creation that pervades the whole cosmos and can be heard only in the highest soul-conscious state.

Antarman — The inner mind, from which the highest, instrument-free music is heard.

Atma — The soul; the eternal, conscious being within the body.

Atma Swaroop — The state of being established in one’s true form as a soul; soul-consciousness.

Bahya Man — The outer mind, as distinct from the inner mind.

Brahmand — The solar system.

Damru — The small hand-drum that is the symbol used to invoke Shankar.

Devi-Devata — The deities.

Dhol — A large drum used in worship and celebration.

Dhwani — Sound.

Ghanta — The large temple bell of brass or copper, rung as one enters the place of worship.

Jeevan Mukti — Liberation attained while still living in the body.

Jeevatma — A living soul, including the soul within an animal.

Kann Ras — The relish or pleasure of the ears; sense-pleasure, as opposed to the joy of the mind.

Karmendriya — The five organs of action, which include the faculty of the ears.

Lavleen — A state of being completely absorbed and merged in the remembrance of the Supreme.

Maha Brahmand — The galaxy.

Maha Shiv / Maha Vishnu / Maha Brahma — The great creators of the galaxy, above the level of the solar system.

Mann Ras — The joy of the mind, as opposed to mere pleasure of the senses.

Mantra — A sacred sound or utterance; a “code-word” used to call upon and please a deity.

Mukti — Liberation; freedom from the cycle of birth and death.

Nirakar — Formless; the original formless state of the soul and of the Supreme.

Param Anand — Supreme bliss; the highest joy, the very form of the music of Paramdham.

Param Bhaav — The supreme feeling that arose within the Supreme at the moment of creation.

Param Brahm Parmeshwar — The formless Supreme who created Brahma, Vishnu and Mahesh.

Param Tattva — The supreme element, finer than the ordinary elements of the gross world.

Paramatma — The Supreme Soul.

Paramdham — The supreme, formless abode; the highest realm, where music exists as pure supreme bliss.

Pran — The life-force.

Pran Pratishtha — The rite of consecration by which the life-force of a deity enters a stone image.

Rajo — The quality of activity and passion; one of the three gunas.

Sangeet — Music.

Saptarishi — The seven seers created by Brahma.

Sato Pradhan — The pure, positive, light state of the soul; its highest condition within the three gunas.

Shankh — The conch, blown to invoke Vishnu.

Shastriya Sangeet — Classical music, which brings rest and peace to the mind.

Shehnai — A wind instrument played in worship and celebration.

Shlok — A verse of scripture.

Sookshma Jagat — The subtle world.

Spandan — Vibration; the subtle effect that the Divine catches, including the vibration of thought.

Tamo Pradhan — The heavy, impure, passive-to-negative state of the soul.

Tattva — An element.

Triguna Atit — Beyond the three gunas — sato, rajo and tamo — altogether.

Vayu Tattva — The air element of the subtle world.

Vayumandal — The atmosphere, in which all the sound and vibration of creation lies recorded.

“Gyan Daan Maha Daan”

Sharing Knowledge is the Highest Charity

— Bapuji Dashrathbhai Patel

The background of the entire image is a deep blue cosmic space filled with stars. A prominent spiral galaxy with a bright yellow core and glowing orange and white arms curves across the lower half. Several planets are visible: a large, dark, cratered planet in the bottom left; a smaller, dark planet in the bottom right; and a crescent moon in the middle left. In the top right corner, a bright star or sunburst shines. A vinyl record, shown in a dark blue or black color, is positioned on the right side, with its tonearm and stylus extending towards the center. The record's surface reflects the light of the galaxy and stars.
