About Bapuji

Bapuji (full name: Bapuji Dashrathbhai Patel, also lovingly called “Dadaji” by the younger generation) was born in 1956 in the small village of Akhaj in the Mehsana district of Gujarat. However, he spent his childhood in another village named Ambasan, also located in the Mehsana district.

In the early part of his life, he was a highly successful lawyer. Later, he devoted his life to realizing the supreme spiritual truth and bringing this divine knowledge forward for the welfare of humanity. Today, this supreme knowledge serves as a guiding light for true seekers to realize their ultimate destiny. It is a blessing of the highest divinity that the present time is witnessing the rise of this supreme spiritual knowledge, guiding souls on Earth to return to their original source.

Despite being raised in a very poor family and facing challenging circumstances, Bapuji had a deep desire to transform this sorrowful and suffering world into a better place. At the young age of six, he questioned God repeatedly, asking why God remained silent about the suffering of humanity. This intense longing to end human suffering eventually led him to attain the highest level of spirituality later in life.

Even as a child, Bapuji would spend hours alone in the fields, often neglecting his own comfort. Due to poverty, he would walk barefoot without shoes or sandals, frequently getting pricked by thorns. Many times, he would stay late in the fields and, on his way back home, encounter subtle world entities. These experiences sparked his interest in communicating with subtle world souls.

Bapuji was courageous from a young age, which helped him overcome many obstacles. Alongside his studies in chartered accountancy (CA), he gave tuition classes to support himself financially. Later, he completed his Bachelor of Law (LLB) degree and became a well-known lawyer in Ahmedabad.

In 1997, he established a spiritual institution called “Vishwa Parivartak Ishwariya Vidhyalay” in Chenpur, Ahmedabad, with the mission of transforming this mortal world, filled with suffering and disorder, into an eternal divine world of immortality. Smt. Sushma Tandon, lovingly known as “Maa,” worked alongside Bapuji in this grand divine mission.

To accomplish this mission, Bapuji worked tirelessly, dedicating all his resources to this divine purpose. During that time, he would deliver continuous spiritual discourses for up to 18 hours without rest. In these discourses, he explained the highest dimensions of divine knowledge, which he realized through deep meditation and divine vision in a state of superconsciousness. This knowledge goes beyond the imagination of the ordinary human mind.

Bapuji’s teachings cover a vast range of topics, including the types of celestial creators across different dimensions, the creation of our solar system, galaxy, and universe, and most importantly, the transcendental knowledge of the multiverse and realities beyond it. His knowledge is supremely profound and is intended for highly evolved seekers, referred to as “behad souls.” According to Bapuji, these “behad souls” will play a key role in transforming this mortal world into an eternal divine realm.

At present, Bapuji remains deeply engaged in intense meditation and samadhi for long hours. He does not meet anyone, as he is continuously immersed in his transcendental mission in a superconscious state.

Preface

“Gyaan Daan Maha-daan” (Sharing Knowledge is the highest Charity) share to the maximum extent, with all.

— by Bapuji Dashrathbhai Patel

In today's world, popular international television networks regularly broadcast programs about people with seemingly impossible abilities — men who pass electricity through their bodies, individuals who drive cars blindfolded, masters who can put wild animals to sleep with a glance, and yogis who appear to defy the very laws of nature.

The world watches in awe. Millions search online for 'Top 10 Superhumans.' Scientists attempt to verify these feats. International celebrities and TV producers travel the globe to find and authenticate these extraordinary beings. The question on everyone's mind is the same: How is this possible?

This book is born from a profound and illuminating conversation with Bapuji Dashrathbhai Patel Ji — a spiritual guide who sees far beyond the surface spectacle of these phenomena. With remarkable clarity, Bapuji unveils the real mechanism behind so-called superhuman abilities, drawing on deep spiritual wisdom rooted in the knowledge of the subtle world, the nature of the human soul, and the supreme authority of the Almighty.

What you will read in these pages is not a dismissal of these extraordinary events — they do happen, and Bapuji acknowledges that fully. Rather, this book offers the deeper truth: who or what is actually behind these abilities, why they exist, what their limitations are, and most importantly, what a truly superhuman being would look like.

More than just explaining a phenomenon, Bapuji guides us toward a far greater purpose — the journey of the soul itself. By understanding the world of subtle beings, the karma that binds us to this Earth, and the knowledge that can set us free, we come to realize that the greatest superhuman ability is not pulling a train or seeing blindfolded. It is transforming oneself from a human soul into something divine — from Jeev to Shiv, from soul to Supreme Soul.

Read this book with an open mind and an honest heart. The truths within these pages may challenge what you have seen on television, but they will open a doorway to a far deeper and more liberating understanding of human existence.

The World of Superhumans

What Television Shows Us

Switch on any major international documentary channel and you will not have to wait long before encountering the phenomenon. Programs dedicated to extraordinary human abilities have become a genre of their own. They feature people who claim to possess powers that defy ordinary explanation, and they present these claims with the full weight of scientific investigation and cinematic drama.

Among the most compelling examples that have captured public imagination are the following:

Claims have been made about some people that they are not affected by electricity and that they can pass electricity through their bodies. However, there is no scientific evidence to support these claims.

The Blindfolded Driver — Certain individuals shown on television who, with their eyes completely covered, claim to ride bicycles, drive cars, and navigate obstacles with apparent ease and precision.

Chi Masters — Practitioners of ancient Eastern energy arts, particularly from Japan, who demonstrate remarkable mind-over-matter abilities. Certain individuals shown on television claim to be able to put any wild or dangerous animal to sleep using only the power of the mind. Lions, tigers, serpents — none are reportedly immune to such influence.

Fire Starters — Certain individuals shown on television who claim to be able to ignite paper and dry material from a distance, using only focused mental energy directed through their palms.

The One-Push Warrior — Certain individuals shown on television who, with a single push or gesture, claim to send ten or more people flying to the ground simultaneously.

These are not magic tricks performed in a children's theater. They have been filmed, investigated, and documented. Scientists have studied them. They are real events. And yet, the question that almost no one on television asks is the one that Bapuji answers directly: what is actually behind these abilities? What is the true source of this power?

The Question That Changes Everything

When we see a man pull a train with his bare hands, the natural assumption is that there is something special about that man. His body, his mind, his training — something within him must be extraordinary. This is the assumption the world operates on. This is what gets him on television, what makes people travel from around the world to witness his feats, and what earns him the title of Superhuman.

But Bapuji asks a simple and devastating question: Is this man, by himself, truly extraordinary? Or is something extraordinary working through him?

The answer to this question changes everything.

Chapter II

The Subtle World

Two Worlds, One Reality

To understand where superhuman abilities truly come from, Bapuji introduces us to a concept that modern science has almost entirely abandoned, but which spiritual traditions across the world have always known: the existence of the subtle world.

Alongside our visible, physical world — the world we can touch, see, and measure — there exists a subtle realm inhabited by souls who are no longer in physical bodies. These are not metaphors or legends. According to Bapuji, the subtle world is as real as the physical one. It exists within approximately 200 kilometers of the Earth's surface, and it is populated by an almost inconceivable number of souls.

Not all souls are the same. There is a crucial distinction that Bapuji draws carefully: souls that have attained the knowledge of the Supreme Soul — the Almighty — upon leaving the physical body, begin their journey toward Paramdham, the supreme abode. They do not linger on the Earth plane. They move upward and onward, liberated from the cycle of earthly existence.

But the vast majority of souls who leave their bodies are not in this fortunate condition. Burdened by unfulfilled desires — by lust, anger, greed, attachment, and ego — these souls cannot cross the boundary of the earthly realm. They are, in essence, trapped. They remain here, in the subtle dimension surrounding our world, and they are what we commonly call ghosts, spirits, or in Sanskrit, bhoot-pret.

What These Souls Want

A key insight offered by Bapuji is this: these souls retain the desires and habits they had during their physical lives. A soul that loved to dance will, after death, seek to dance through someone else's body. According to this spiritual understanding, souls burdened by addictions such as alcoholism may attach themselves to living individuals and intensify compulsive drinking, sometimes to the point that awareness and self-control become weakened. This teaching is presented as a spiritual perspective and is not intended as a scientific, medical, or psychological explanation.

This is not a superstition. It is, according to Bapuji, the mechanism that explains countless unexplained phenomena in our world. And critically — these souls can also organize. They can form groups.

Connection Between Desires and the Subtle World

Bapuji informs that souls who remain attached to worldly desires may remain connected to the Earth's subtle plane.

The teaching emphasizes that attachment prevents spiritual liberation.

Ghosts and Religious Locations

Bapuji clarifies that spiritual entities gather in religious places due to strong emotional or devotional energy.

Practices of exorcism exist in many religions, including:

Belief in spirit influence is widespread across cultures. Spiritual practitioners sometimes attempt to help troubled individuals through prayer, ritual, or meditation.

Dreams, Visions, and Religious Places

Bapuji shares that temples or sacred places are established following visions or dreams experienced by devotees. Throughout history, many cultures have described dreams in which divine beings instruct devotees to build places of worship. Bapuji also mentions anecdotal experiences where spiritual entities influenced events within families.

Chapter III

The Mechanism Behind the Powers

The Group of Souls

When a spirit world entity, or a group of such entities, wishes to manifest something extraordinary in the physical world, it does not work alone. Groups of 100, 200, even 500 or more souls can unite their energies and funnel them into a single living human being.

Consider what this means in practical terms. A single human body, occupied by the combined energy of 200 souls, effectively possesses the physical strength of 200 human beings. This is not supernatural in the mystical sense — it is a multiplication of natural soul-energy, focused through one physical vessel. This is how a man pulls a train. This is how a person lifts extraordinary weights.

The Blindfolded Sight

But what about abilities that are not about physical strength? How does a blindfolded person see? The mechanism is different in nature but similar in origin. Soul-beings from the subtle world do not need eyes to perceive the physical world. When a group of such souls unites and focuses on a living individual, they can project visual information directly onto that person's own soul — their inner awareness. They essentially show the blindfolded person what they themselves are seeing.

The Shadowy Origin of Such Powers

Consider the case of a well-known Japanese Chi master shown on international television, who is said to have the ability to put wild animals to sleep. Practitioners themselves sometimes describe their power's origin as a dark or shadowy presence visiting them — and after such an encounter, their ability to influence animals begins to appear.

Such powers are understood to originate from negative, low-vibration spiritual forces, traditionally referred to as 'ghosts' or 'spirits.' This subject belongs to the realm of spiritual and metaphysical beliefs, which are not capable of scientific verification.

The Subject Often Does Not Know

One of the most remarkable observations Bapuji makes is this: in many cases, the person displaying superhuman abilities does not themselves know what is happening to them. They genuinely believe the power is their own.

Why Would Souls Do This?

Souls retain their attachments from physical life. A group of souls connected to a particular person — through family ties, friendship or other karmic bonds — may genuinely wish to make that person famous, wealthy or respected. Other times, the relationship is more transactional. But none of this changes the fundamental reality: the extraordinary ability does not belong to the person. It is borrowed, granted, and ultimately controlled by those who give it.

Examples of attachment include:

Such souls may remain near homes, temples, or familiar locations.

Bapuji suggested that some souls may attempt to communicate through dreams or subtle impressions.

Bapuji's Personal Experiences from Childhood with Subtle Entity and Earth-Bound Souls

Bapuji was exposed to spiritual concepts at an early age due to family influences, including incidents where a protective feminine spiritual force (Jogini Devi) was present in the household who would from time to time visit Bapuji's mother and take her on a subtle realm journey.

Bapuji experienced ghostly presences during childhood and even attempted to communicate with them without fear.

Many paranormal events were observed in the village environment, contributing to a lifelong curiosity about the unseen world and motivating deeper spiritual investigation into the nature of souls, subtle bodies, and consciousness.

Bapuji explains that from childhood (around 4th-5th grade), he used to communicate with these subtle entities. His father often told him about places where ghosts or spirits lived. He advised him not to be afraid of the “jinn” said to reside in a banyan tree, from where they used to collect grain.

According to Bapuji, if a person is in a place inhabited by subtle spirits and accidentally says words like “let’s go” (Move), those spirits may follow the person.

Bapuji had numerous encounters with subtle entities from childhood.

Importance of the Aura: Subtle spirits enter only those bodies whose aura is negative or black in colour. If a person’s aura is golden-yellow, these negative or weak entities cannot enter.

Energetic Influences: Bapuji explains that strong karmic impressions and energetic conditions of a soul may carry forward and influence the body it attaches to.

Condition of Religious Places: Not only impure places, but temples and other religious sites are also not considered completely free from such forces. According to some beliefs, powerful spiritual entities present in temples are said to remove negative energies affecting people, but then keep them under their control for a long period of time.

The Only Protection: According to Bapuji, the permanent way to protect oneself from these subtle entities is to understand oneself as a soul (self-realisation) and connect with the “Supreme Father” (Almighty Authority) through meditation/yog. The power gained from this meditation charges the causal body, turning the aura from black to golden. If a human soul deeply experiences its true soul-conscious state, the aura becomes white, and all negative energies or subtle entities automatically lose their influence.

Bapuji emphasises that people who spend their lives only eating, drinking, and sleeping often wander in such forms after death. Therefore, increasing spiritual power through yoga and knowledge is essential.

Chapter IV

The True Measure of a Superhuman

What These Powers Cannot Do

Having established where these abilities come from, Bapuji turns to a question of profound importance: do these abilities make someone truly superhuman? He answers with characteristic directness: No.

If the man who can put animals to sleep with his mind truly possessed superhuman power, why does he not bring his abilities to where genuine suffering exists? If the man who can carry electrical current through his body truly commands extraordinary force, why is he not seen relieving the pain of the afflicted? If the man who can knock ten people down with one push truly has superhuman strength, why can he not bring an end to violence and terror in the world?

A Challenge to the Superhumans

The Real Superhuman — The Ancient Standard

Bapuji points to a time-honoured standard for what a true superhuman being looks like. In the ancient tradition of India, the Rishis and Munis were considered extraordinary beings not because they could perform spectacles, but because their mere presence was said to transform those around them. Ancient accounts describe how those who came before a true Rishi in distress often departed with renewed inner light, peace, and clarity of being. The sage gave, without asking anything in return.

Chapter V

The Earth — A Realm of Souls

Why Souls Remain

To fully grasp the world Bapuji describes, we must understand why there are so many souls trapped in the Earth's subtle realm. This is not a temporary phenomenon. It is the natural consequence of how most human beings live and die.

A soul that has cultivated genuine knowledge — knowledge of its own divine origin, knowledge of the Supreme Soul, knowledge of how to return to its source — upon leaving the body, finds its way upward. It begins the journey toward Paramdham and does not linger on Earth.

But most souls are not in this condition. They are filled with unfulfilled desires. They are entangled in the five great vices — lust, anger, greed, attachment, and ego. These desires hold the soul close to the physical realm where those desires first formed.

An Earth Saturated with Souls

The consequence of this process, multiplied across all of human history, is staggering. Billions of human beings have lived and died on this planet. Bapuji states plainly that the Earth is, in a very real sense, saturated with these souls. Every home, every street, every temple, every city has its population of subtle-world inhabitants.

The Role of Ritual

Many ancient cultures, particularly in India, have developed rituals specifically to address this reality. Pitru Tarpan — the offering of water and food to ancestors — exists precisely because the souls of those ancestors may still be in the subtle realm. Ceremonies like Narayan Bali are performed when a family suspects that an ancestor's soul is still bound to the Earth and causing disruption.

Bapuji notes this with gentle irony: even our own ancestors — those who loved us and whom we loved — can become a source of difficulty when trapped in the subtle realm. What does this tell us about the condition of the subtle world at large?

Chapter VI

Deities, Devotion and Exchange

This book respects all religious traditions; the discussion of deities and rituals is offered as spiritual philosophy, not as criticism of any faith.

Even the Gods Demand Something in Return

The discussion of souls and subtle-world beings naturally leads to a question about the higher beings in many traditions — the devas, or deities. What is their relationship to humanity? Are they truly selfless givers of blessings?

Bapuji addresses this with remarkable directness, using a beloved story from the ancient scriptures. When the young Krishna convinced the people of Gokul to stop performing the annual yajna for Indra, the king of the deities, Indra responded not with grace — but with anger. He sent torrential rains and thunderstorms to punish the village.

The principle at work is reciprocal exchange. Give the deity its havan, its yajna (the smoke from sacred fire is considered food for the deity through which the deity gets power to perform the required task), its bhog (Food) — and it gives back rain, abundance, protection. Withhold the offering — and it withholds its favor. This is not unconditional giving. It is a transaction.

What True Divinity Looks Like

Against this backdrop, Bapuji articulates a stunning definition of what genuine divinity actually looks like. A true divine being is one who gives without asking anything in return. No offering required. No punishment for non-compliance. Pure, unconditional giving.

The true Almighty, the Supreme Soul, operates on a different principle entirely. He does not demand. He gives. He does not punish neglect. He loves without condition. This is the being worth finding, worth connecting with, worth orienting one's entire life toward.

Chapter VII

The Soul's Journey — From Angel to Human and Back

The Original State

At the very beginning of creation, the human soul was not what it is today. It was something far more luminous — a Farishta, an angel. From this angelic state, through a process of spiritual refinement, the soul became a Devta — a deity. Deities lived in a state of purity, power, and joy, unencumbered by the five vices.

Then, gradually, the descent began. Desires appeared. Attachments formed. The soul fell from its divine height, step by step, until it found itself where most of us are today — in the human condition. Still possessed of tremendous potential, but weighed down by its own accumulated karma and desire.

The Path Back Up

The essential question of life, then, is not how to acquire superhuman abilities. The essential question is: how does the soul return to what it was? The answer Bapuji gives is unambiguous: through Gyan and Yoga. Through true knowledge of the soul's own nature and its relationship to the Supreme Soul. And through Yoga — not physical postures, but the original meaning of the word: union. Connection with the Divine.

From Taker to Giver — The Reverse Process

There is a practical, observable sign of spiritual progress that Bapuji describes with beautiful simplicity. As long as a person is primarily focused on getting — acquiring more, achieving more, experiencing more — they are still caught in the downward pull of desire.

Chapter VIII

The Ultimate Superhuman

Beyond the Show

Bapuji is not dismissive of the extraordinary. He does not deny that remarkable things happen in the world. He does not say that the man pulling the train is lying, or that such practitioners are frauds. These things are real. What he insists upon is that they are not what they appear to be, and that calling them superhuman is a profound misunderstanding of what human beings are actually capable of.

The Only True Superhuman Ability

The ability to transform another human being's inner world — to walk into the presence of suffering and, through pure light, love, and knowledge, bring inner relief and upliftment — this is what Bapuji calls truly superhuman. The ancient sages were known for this. A person in the presence of a true Rishi was inwardly changed. Not because the Rishi put on a show — but because the Rishi was so deeply rooted in divine knowledge and divine connection that being near them was itself an uplifting, clarifying, liberating spiritual experience.

That is the superhuman. Not the man with 200 souls in his body giving him the strength of 200 men. The human being whose own single soul has risen so high, become so pure, become so connected to the Supreme, that their presence alone transforms the world around them.

A Message to the Subtle World Too

Chapter IX

A Call to the Seeking Soul

The Maya Trap

Bapuji concludes with a warm but urgent warning about the world we live in. Today, every person wants something. More money. More fame. More power. Better abilities. Higher status. Every year, new desires replace old ones that were briefly satisfied. This is what the spiritual tradition calls Maya — the great illusion of the world's offerings.

And when a person lives this way — consuming, acquiring, performing — and then dies, what happens? According to Bapuji, they become exactly what we have been discussing throughout this book. Another soul in the subtle realm. Another being whose unfulfilled desires trap it close to the Earth.

The Real Search

Instead of searching for superhuman abilities, Bapuji calls us to search for the Almighty. Instead of trying to acquire powers, he invites us to seek connection. Instead of building a more impressive performance, he asks us to build a more luminous soul.

What True Self-Realization Looks Like

When a soul truly walks this path — genuinely seeking knowledge, genuinely connecting with the Supreme, genuinely orienting itself toward service and giving — something extraordinary naturally follows. The person becomes calmer. Clearer. Less reactive. More loving. Their presence begins to affect those around them.

They become, in the truest sense, more than ordinary. Not because 200 souls are powering their body. Because their own single soul has risen toward its divine potential. This is what it means to be a Mahamanav. A great human being. A true superhuman.

Epilogue

Param Shanti

The conversation that forms the heart of this book began and ended with the same two words: Param Shanti — Supreme Peace. Not the absence of noise or conflict. Not a temporary feeling of contentment. The deepest, most fundamental peace that exists — the peace of a soul that has found its way back to its source.

Everything Bapuji Dashrathbhai Patel Ji has shared in these pages points toward that peace. The extraordinary abilities that dazzle the world are not the path to it. The accumulation of power, fame, and wealth does not lead to it.

Param Shanti comes from knowing who you are. From knowing where you came from. From genuinely turning toward the Supreme and allowing the long, beautiful, sometimes difficult journey of the soul back toward its origin to begin.

The world will continue to produce its superhumans. Channels will continue to film them. Audiences will continue to be amazed. But let the amazement lead to a deeper question: what is the human soul truly capable of? What is the actual purpose of this precious, temporary, irreplaceable human life?

These are the questions that Bapuji has answered. These are the questions worth carrying forward.

Amarlok: Immortal realm; the eternal divine world that Bapuji's mission seeks to create on Earth.

Bhog: Food or offerings made to a deity as part of worship or a ritual exchange.

Bhoot-pret: Disembodied earthbound souls; spirits burdened by unfulfilled desires who remain in the subtle world after death.

Bramand: The cosmos; the universe and all its dimensions as described in the Indian spiritual tradition.

Chi: In Chinese and Japanese traditions, the concept of vital life energy or inner force, used to explain certain extraordinary abilities.

Devta / Devtas: Divine beings or deities; souls who once lived in a state of purity and power before descending into the human condition.

Farishta: Angel; the original luminous and pure form of the human soul at the very beginning of creation.

Gyan: Spiritual knowledge; specifically, the knowledge of the soul's own nature and its relationship to the Supreme Soul.

Havan: A sacred fire offering ritual; a form of devotional giving to the divine or to subtle-world entities.

Jeev: A living soul in its current human form; the individual soul in its ordinary, earthly condition.

Karma: The spiritual consequences of one's actions; the bonds of desire and deed that keep a soul attached to the earthly realm.

Mahamanav: Great human being; a person whose soul has risen toward its divine potential — the true superhuman.

Maya: The grand illusion of the material world; the ever-changing cycle of desires, possessions, and experiences that keeps the soul trapped.

Munis: Silent sages; spiritually elevated beings from ancient Indian tradition whose inner stillness was itself a form of divine expression.

Narayan Bali: A specific Hindu ritual performed when a family suspects that an ancestor's soul remains bound to the earthly subtle realm.

Param Shanti: Supreme Peace; the deepest and most fundamental peace — the peace of a soul that has returned to its original divine source.

Paramdham: The supreme divine abode; the original home of all souls, beyond the earthly realm, where liberated souls return.

Parmatma: The Supreme Soul; God; the Almighty who gives unconditionally and without demand.

Pitru Tarpan: A Hindu ritual of offering water and food to one's ancestors, acknowledging that their souls may still be present in the subtle realm.

Rishi / Rishis: Ancient seers or sages of India whose spiritual purity was so complete that their mere presence is said to have inwardly transformed and uplifted those around them.

Samadhi: A state of deep meditative absorption; a transcendental state in which the mind merges with divine consciousness.

Shiv: The Supreme Soul in its highest aspect; the divine state a soul is journeying toward — the destination of the soul's evolution from Jeev to Shiv.

Subtle World: The invisible realm alongside the physical world, within approximately 200 km of Earth's surface, populated by souls without physical bodies.

Yajna: A sacred fire ritual or act of worship through offerings; a form of exchange between the human and divine worlds.

Yoga: In its original and deepest meaning: union or connection with the Divine; the path of the soul's return to its source.

Yoga Samadhi: The combined state of union with the Divine (Yoga) and deep transcendental absorption (Samadhi); the elevated state in which Bapuji performs his mission.

Sharing Knowledge is the Highest Charity

— Bapuji Dashrathbhai Patel

What if the world's most extraordinary superhuman abilities are not what they seem?

Bapuji Dashrathbhai Patel Ji reveals the hidden spiritual truth behind these powers — the world of subtle souls, the real mechanism, and the only path to true greatness.
