About Bapuji

Bapuji (full name: Bapuji Dashrathbhai Patel, also lovingly called “Dadaji” by the younger generation) was born in 1956 in the small village of Akhaj in the Mehsana district of Gujarat. However, he spent his childhood in another village named Ambasan, also located in the Mehsana district.

In the early part of his life, he was a highly successful lawyer. Later, he devoted his life to realizing the supreme spiritual truth and bringing this divine knowledge forward for the welfare of humanity. Today, this supreme knowledge serves as a guiding light for true seekers to realize their ultimate destiny. It is a blessing of the highest divinity that the present time is witnessing the rise of this supreme spiritual knowledge, guiding souls on Earth to return to their original source.

Despite being raised in a very poor family and facing challenging circumstances, Bapuji had a deep desire to transform this sorrowful and suffering world into a better place. At the young age of six, he questioned God repeatedly, asking why God remained silent about the suffering of humanity. This intense longing to end human suffering eventually led him to attain the highest level of spirituality later in life.

Even as a child, Bapuji would spend hours alone in the fields, often neglecting his own comfort. Due to poverty, he would walk barefoot without shoes or sandals, frequently getting pricked by thorns. Many times, he would stay late in the fields and, on his way back home, encounter subtle world entities. These experiences sparked his interest in communicating with subtle world souls.

Bapuji was courageous from a young age, which helped him overcome many obstacles. Alongside his studies in chartered accountancy (CA), he gave tuition classes to support himself financially. Later, he completed his Bachelor of Law (LLB) degree and became a well-known lawyer in Ahmedabad.

In 1997, he established a spiritual institution called “Vishwa Parivartak Ishwariya Vidhyalay” in Chenpur, Ahmedabad, with the mission of transforming this mortal world, filled with suffering and disorder, into an eternal divine world of immortality. Smt. Sushma Tandon, lovingly known as “Maa,” worked alongside Bapuji in this grand divine mission.

To accomplish this mission, Bapuji worked tirelessly, dedicating all his resources to this divine purpose. During that time, he would deliver continuous spiritual discourses for up to 18 hours without rest. In these discourses, he explained the highest dimensions of divine knowledge, which he realized through deep meditation and divine vision in a state of superconsciousness. This knowledge goes beyond the imagination of the ordinary human mind.

Bapuji’s teachings cover a vast range of topics, including the types of celestial creators across different dimensions, the creation of our solar system, galaxy, and universe, and most importantly, the transcendental knowledge of the multiverse and realities beyond it. His knowledge is supremely profound and is intended for highly evolved seekers, referred to as “behad souls.” According to Bapuji, these “behad souls” will play a key role in transforming this mortal world into an eternal divine realm.

At present, Bapuji remains deeply engaged in intense meditation and samadhi for long hours. He does not meet anyone, as he is continuously immersed in his transcendental mission in a superconscious state.

— by Bapuji Dashrathbhai Patel

This book is offered freely in the spirit of Gyan Daan Maha Daan — the conviction that the sharing of true knowledge is the highest form of charity.

Its subject is named in its title: kala, the power of the soul, and the categories of souls. To understand these, we must begin where Bapuji begins — with the simplest questions. Who am I? What is soul? What is kala? Only after the ground is firm can we climb.

And so this book is built as a gentle ascent, in four parts. The first part lays the foundations — the soul and meaning of kala. The second part climbs the ladder of kala step by step, from the creator of a single solar system to the limitless world beyond the multiverse. The third part is the heart of the book: a careful look at the many categories of souls — from the tiny soul of an insect, through the eighty-four lakh forms of life, to the human soul and the souls of pure light. Only after all of this does the fourth part turn the question inward: which category of soul am I, where have I come from, and how do I return?

THE HIDDEN SCIENCE OF SOULS

Everything in these pages is drawn directly from Bapuji's spoken discourses and from the published Paramshanti books. Nothing has been added from outside, and no meaning has been stretched beyond his own words. The work here is only one of presentation — to let what was spoken be read in stillness, in order.

Read slowly and absorb the depth of shared information. This is not ordinary, worldly study. It is best received in soul-consciousness state (known as atma swaroop) while remembering the Almighty Authority. Repeat reading; what does not open today will open tomorrow.

P A R T O N E

The Foundations

Before we can speak of the soul's power and its many forms, we must first be clear about three simple things: who am I, what is Soul and what kala means.

CHAPTER ONE

Who Am I?

Before any spiritual truth can be understood, one question must be asked with complete honesty: Who am I? According to Bapuji, this is the point from which everything unfolds. The entire framework of this book every classification of soul—rests upon a person's answer to this single question.

Today almost everyone has the basic understanding that “I am a soul.” In different languages it is said in different ways — some call it atma (Sanskrit/ hindi), some call it ruh (arabic), some simply say “the self within.” Even animals and birds are said to have a soul. This is common knowledge, known to nearly everyone. But here a deeper question arises: if every creature is called a soul/atma/ruh, then what is soul/atma/ruh, and what is the difference between a human soul and the other souls? That difference is exactly what this book sets out to explain.

BAPUJI INSIGHT

“Sabse pehle hume samajhna padega ki main kaun hoon?”

“First of all, we need to understand — who am I?”

Atma Gyan and Atma Swaroop

There is a difference between knowing about the soul and experiencing the soul. Atma gyan is knowledge of the soul — “I am a soul; the soul lives at the centre of the forehead and which runs the body.” This knowledge can be read in a book and repeated by saying. Atma swaroop, or soul consciousness, is something else: it is living feeling that “I truly am a soul.”

Many seekers spend their whole lives in knowledge of soul (atma gyan) without ever reaching soul – consciousness (atma swaroop). To merely say “I am a soul, I am a soul” a million times changes nothing by itself. Self-realisation is not the same as a mental belief.

BAPUJI INSIGHT

“Sirf ‘Main atma boon, main atma boon’ bolne se koi atma ko realize nahi kar sakta.”

“Only by saying ‘I am a soul, I am a soul,’ no one can realise the soul.”

From Body-Consciousness to Soul-Awareness

When a person says “this is my body,” they have already admitted that there is an owner and that owner is the soul. Yet most people still live in body-consciousness and from this comes all sorrow, fear and craving. The teaching is to shift quietly from body consciousness to soul consciousness: “I am a soul; the body is only my instrument of action.”

As soul-awareness deepens, the witness-consciousness (sakshi drishta) — awakens on its own. The soul begins to observe the mind, the emotions, and the body without being lost in them. This is not forced. It arises naturally as the soul starts to feel its own form and draws real power from the Almighty.

BAPUJI INSIGHT

“Atm swaroop ki anubhooti karo, saksi drashta aa hi jayenge.”

“Experience atma swaroop, and the witness-state will arise on its own.”

This question — “Who am I?” — is not asked once and answered forever. Bapuji says soul must keep asking it: Who am I? Which category of soul am I? Where have I come from and why? Who is my creator? These questions return throughout this book, and their full answer waits in the final part. For now, it is enough to hold the question sincerely and to begin the shift from body to soul.

CHAPTER TWO

What Is Soul?

The soul is not an idea or a belief. It is a conscious presence — a point of living energy that runs the body. The body is the instrument; the soul is the one who works through it. Science has no equipment to measure or prove existence of soul, which is exactly why this journey must be made inward and not outward.

The soul resides at the centre point of the forehead, between the eyebrows — the very place where, in the Sanatan tradition, the tilak (sacred mark worn on the forehead, often applied for religious, spiritual, or cultural purposes.) is applied. Residing there, it runs the mind, and through the mind it runs the entire body. Its true form is pure divine light: the soul glows with a clean white light, like a star shining in the darkness of night. In the scriptures its size is described as smaller than the one-trillionth part of the tip of a hair. It cannot be seen with physical eyes — only in the state of soul consciousness can Soul be perceived itself.

The Soul's Original State

In its original state, the soul was pure light and completely formless — Nirakari. In Nirakari state of supreme light, there was no mind, no intellect, and no impressions. The soul simply existed as radiant, conscious light. The mind (Mann) appeared only with the soul's very first thought-intent (sankalp), from that instant the intellect (buddhi) and then impressions (sanskar), began to unfold. In this way the soul slowly moved from the formless toward form.

It is important to understand that soul itself can never be stained. Records and impressions cannot be written upon pure divine light, for such light would dissolve everything. Instead, these records are carried on outer layers, the bodies, that form over the soul once it takes on form.

The Bodies the Soul Wears

Around the pure light, the soul wears a series of subtle bodies, one inside the other, like sheaths. Understanding them is the key to understanding everything that follows. From the outside inward: the physical body (the gross body of all five elements- earth, water, fire, air, ether); the subtle body (made of the three finer elements- air, fire, ether- which carries the mind, intellect and impression after death); the causal body (karan sharir), made of the ether element which is store-house of all the soul's karmic records); and deeper still the supra-causal body (made of the supreme elements) and the supreme-supra-causal body (made of param prakash itself).

Each body is the cause of the next. As soon as a soul is created, the mind forms; the mind generates thoughts; from registered thoughts the intellect forms; from action with the intellect, Deep-seated tendency form; from Deep-seated tendency the causal body develops; from the causal body, the subtle body; and from the subtle body, finally, the gross physical body. So the innermost reality is the pure soul, and the outermost is the physical body we see.

These bodies are the reason soul's identity is hidden. Where it has come from, how far it has travelled, why it took birth — all of this is written within these layers. The layers do not damage the light within; they only cover it. And which of these bodies a soul carries as its innermost sheath is one of the things that decides its category .

To understand this more clearly, imagine the soul as a pure light at the center. Around it are many layers. Closest to the light are the supreme substance (param mahattva), supreme ether, supreme air, and supreme fire. Beyond these are the gross forms of ether, air, and fire, and finally the outer layers of water and earth.

To reach the light at the center, each of these layers must be passed through. This is why the soul's true radiance remains hidden. The senses can perceive only the outermost layers and can never directly touch the light within.

“Atma ka asli swabhav soul consciousness hi hai.”

“The original nature of the soul is soul consciousness itself.”

CHAPTER THREE

What Is Kala?

We now come to the first key word of this book: kala. Bapuji defines it simply. The meaning of kala is how much degree of power a soul holds. Just as on Earth electrical power is measured in unit called “watts”- the capacity/ power of an equipment- in spirituality, kala measures the capacity of a soul or its’ creator.

Think of souls as differing in their wattage. Bapuji says that one soul may have 1 kala of power, another 10 kala, 100, 1000, 100000 etc kala of power. Whatever power a soul holds, into that capacity it can go. This degree of conscious power is what is meant by kala.

“Kala ka arth hai aatma mein power kitni hai.”

“The meaning of kala is — how much power is there in the soul.”

Power Brings Qualities and Strength to Create

Where there is power, there are also qualities. When a soul has kala, it carries inner qualities and deep tendency(sanskara) or strong impressions. And when the power is great, the soul gains the strength to create. With higher kala comes a stronger manifestation , a more powerful thought-intent (sankalp), for the power of the mind is the power of the soul.

This is the key Bapuji asks every seeker to hold: whatever you think, that is what you will become. If you keep limited, small thoughts, you stay limited. But if you keep thoughts about infinite world's creation and of the welfare of the multiverse — the soul power grows stronger

“Jo sochoge wahi paoge.”

“Whatever you think, that is what you will become.”

Why Kala Matters

Kala is the key to understanding everything that follows in this book. It is the measure of a soul's inner power and determines how far it can progress, what kind of body it can inhabit, and what level of reality it can experience or create. According to tradition, Krishna and Ram were souls of sixteen kala—the highest complete measure known within creation. Yet beyond even this lies the Almighty Authority, whose power is described as behad kala, the infinite measure that has no limit.

The idea of kala runs through every category of soul and every stage of spiritual development. It explains why souls differ in their abilities, awareness, and reach. By understanding kala, we gain a clearer picture of the structure of existence itself. In the chapters ahead, we will follow this scale step by step, beginning with the lowest levels of kala and gradually ascending toward the boundless power of the infinite.

PART TWO

Spectrum of Soul Power

Creation is arranged in degrees of power. We now climb that ladder, one rung at a time — from the creator of a single solar system to the limitless world beyond all counting.

CHAPTER FOUR

How Souls Are Created

Before we climb and understand range of soul power(kala), we must understand how souls come into existence and why some hold so much more power than others. Bapuji explains it in a single, ordered chain.

At the very top there is one source. The creator of the supreme souls is the Infinite Supreme Father — Parampita. The Infinite Supreme father is one; the Almighty Authority is one.

From Infinite Supreme Father came the Supreme divine Souls, (Paramatma), Supreme divine Souls created celestial souls (Devatma); and Devatma, in turn, created countless further categories of souls. In this way “the one” became many and the many became the vast family of souls that fills creation.

Creation by a Single Thought

According to Bapuji, the creation of souls begins with sankalp—a conscious thought or resolve. A powerful soul does not create through physical action but through the strength of its intention alone. The power contained within that sankalp determines the power of the soul that is created. A stronger resolve gives rise to a more powerful soul, while a weaker resolve produces a soul with a lower degree of power or kala. In this way, souls of many different levels come into existence.

A second principle also governs creation. When a single sankalp gives rise to many souls, the original power is divided among them. Each newly created soul receives only a portion of the creator's strength. Bapuji explains that a formless Shiv first resolves to create. From that one intent, the formless assumes form and brings forth countless souls. Because each soul receives only a share of the original power, it possesses less strength than its creator. Thus, as creation expands generation after generation, the portion of supreme light carried by each soul gradually becomes smaller.

From Formless to Form

Every soul therefore has three broad stages, according to the body it carries. First is nirakari — the incorporeal, formless, seed state, pure divine light with no mind at all. Then akari — the subtle, form-bearing state, made of subtle or supreme elements, in which the soul may carry a subtle, causal, or supra-causal body. And finally sakari — the physical state, with a body of five gross elements, the lowest stage of all.

As creation expands, the original power is gradually shared among more and more souls. With each stage, souls move further from the formless source and closer to the world of form. The divine light becomes less concentrated, while the material elements become denser and more dominant. Eventually, at the lowest level, a soul takes on a physical body made of all five elements and lives on Earth.

To understand the different categories of souls described later in this book, keep this simple picture in mind: there is one original Father, from whom creation unfolds in a descending chain. As creation spreads outward, the original power is divided among countless souls, so each carries a smaller share than the one before it.

CHAPTER FIVE

From One Kala to Twenty

We now begin our journey up the ladder of kala—the scale of creative and spiritual power that defines the creators of worlds. Bapuji presents this knowledge with remarkable precision, revealing each level step by step. To understand the higher realms, we must first start at the very bottom and build our understanding from the ground up. Let us begin with the lowest rung of this vast hierarchy and gradually ascend toward the highest levels of creation.

The creator of a single solar system—one brahmand is Shiv, formless (Nirakari). Shiv holds between one to four degrees of power-kala. Because there are different categories of Shiv across the countless solar systems, their power differs, and so their solar systems differ in size.

The First Rung: Creators of Solar Systems

According to Behad Gyan, the power of a creator soul is measured by its kala. The lowest rung of the creative hierarchy begins with souls whose power ranges from one to four kala. These souls are the creators of individual solar systems.

Bapuji explains that a one-kala Shiv possesses the power to create and sustain a solar system spanning approximately one light-year. This represents the smallest measure of creative authority. As the degree of kala increases, the scope of creation expands accordingly. A two-kala Shiv can create a larger solar system, a three-kala Shiv a larger one still, and a four-kala Shiv represents the highest level of power within this first category.

The size and reach of a solar system are determined by the power of the Shiv who creates it. Greater kala means greater creative capacity, greater light, and a larger field of influence. Thus, the range from one to four kala forms the first step on the vast ladder of creation—the realm of the creators and rulers of solar systems.

Bapuji also shows, within a single solar system, how power steps down even among its own beings. The formless Shiv takes form; he brings forth Vishnu; from Vishnu comes Brahma; and Brahma creates the angels, the farishtas. At each step a little of the original supreme light is passed on — but only a fraction. By the time creation reaches upto human being, very little power remains. Even angels carry only a small of the quality of the original light.

Eight to Twelve Kala — the Galaxy

Climb to the next rung. Many solar systems together form a galaxy — a maha brahmand, such as our own Milky Way, which spans about one lakh light-years. The creator of a galaxy is Maha Shiv, and he holds between eight and twelve kala of power — one Maha Shiv of eight, another of nine, ten, eleven, or twelve. Each builds his galaxy according to his power. A galaxy is therefore a far greater creation than a solar system, made by a far more powerful creator.

Sixteen to Twenty Kala — the Universe

Higher still, many galaxies together form a universe — a param maha brahmand. Its creator and owner is Param Maha Shiv, who resides at the centre point of the universe and holds between sixteen and twenty kala of power. This is the third great rung of the ladder. With each rung — solar system, galaxy, universe — the creation grows vaster and the creator's kala rises. And we have only just begun to climb.

BAPUJI INSIGHT

“Jaisa Shiv ka kala, waisa uska brahmand.”

“As is the kala of the Shiv, so is his solar system.”

CHAPTER SIX

Beyond the Universe — G1 to G17

Above the universe, the realm rises into worlds so vast that ordinary words begin to fail. Bapuji calls them the great universes, Great- Great Universes, Great-great-great universes — G1, G2, G3, and so on, up to G17. Each is a higher dimension of creation than the one below it.

As consciousness ascends through the hierarchy of creation, the magnitude of power expands beyond ordinary comprehension. A Great Universe (G1) embodies approximately twenty-four to twenty-eight kala, while a Great-Great Universe (G2) rises to nearly thirty to thirty-five kala. Beyond this, the ascending realms of G3, G4, and higher orders continue the progression—forty kala, forty-five kala, fifty kala, and ever greater levels of creative authority—culminating in the majestic G17. Each higher realm represents an unimaginable increase in scale, intelligence, and creative capacity.

Within every Great Universe exist countless ordinary universes; within each universe revolve innumerable galaxies; within every galaxy shine countless solar systems. The dimensions involved are so vast that the human intellect can scarcely begin to conceive them.

All seventeen Great Universes together form a single Multiverse. Our Multiverse is described as a realm of one hundred kala—a level of creation so immense that all lower worlds appear as tiny particles within its boundless expanse. The purpose of studying these gradations is not merely to remember numerical values, but to expand awareness beyond limited thinking and glimpse the behad—the infinite reality that stretches far beyond the reach of imagination.

Creation	Creator	Creator's Power

How a Great Universe Is Governed

A Great Universe is not a random expanse of stars and worlds. It is a perfectly organized divine kingdom, designed with unimaginable precision and governed through countless layers of consciousness. At its very centre resides the Creator in His supreme Nirakari form—a boundless ocean of divine light beyond shape, form, and limitation. This highest abode is known as Paramdham, the eternal seat of the Creator's presence and authority.

Surrounding Paramdham are vast concentric realms established for the administration, protection, and governance of the entire Great Universe. The innermost layers are occupied by the supreme Shaktis, the divine governing powers entrusted with maintaining harmony throughout creation. According to Bapuji's Behad knowledge, a Great Universe is administered through extraordinary hierarchies of Shaktis—one hundred and eight principal Shaktis, sixteen thousand higher governing Shaktis, and nine lakh guardian Shaktis, each residing within designated layers of creation. The closer a Shakti resides to Paramdham, the greater her authority and responsibility in safeguarding the Creator's kingdom.

As the scale of creation expands into higher Great Universes, the administrative structure also becomes more vast. Additional layers containing two crore Shaktis and even thirty-three crore Shaktis are established, each functioning as part of an immense cosmic government whose purpose is to maintain order across dimensions that stretch far beyond human imagination.

Beyond the realms of the Shaktis lie the majestic domains of the Maha Vishnu, Maha Brahma, and Maha Indra of that particular Great Universe. These supreme beings oversee creation, sustenance, and administration on scales that encompass countless universes, galaxies, and solar systems.

Further outward are six extraordinary layers reserved for travelling souls. The three inner layers serve as resting and transit realms for souls originating within that Great Universe itself. The three outer layers are designated for souls arriving from distant dimensions, other Great Universes, and higher regions of the infinite creation. These serve as vast spiritual stations where souls pause, prepare, and continue their journeys through the boundless expanse of Behad creation.

Thus, every Great Universe is not merely a collection of worlds, but a living, multi-layered divine civilization extending from the Creator's supreme throne in Paramdham to the farthest regions traversed by souls. The deeper one studies this structure, the more one realizes that creation is not chaos but a perfectly ordered expression of infinite intelligence, infinite power and infinite consciousness.

Bapuji also explains why our own multiverse is unlike any other. Ours has fallen in power, declining from one hundred kala to negative one hundred kala, until its higher elements thickened into the gross world of five elements. It is in our multiverse alone that souls became caught in the unending cycle of birth and death. In the other multiverses, no such gross, five-element world exists even today; their creation is still of the supreme subtle elements, far more powerful than ours.

The Fall of Our Multiverse

According to Bapuji's Behad Gyan, our Multiverse was created for the third time after two previous Mahapralayas (great dissolutions). In the beginning, only a small number of souls emerged. These souls multiplied in a natural sequence—three became nine, nine became twenty-seven, twenty-seven became eighty-one, and so on.

The first great generation consisted of about nine lakh souls, each carrying the full strength of one hundred kala. As creation expanded and more souls came into existence, the same divine power became distributed among an ever-increasing population of souls. As a result, the average power gradually declined—from one hundred kala to ninety, eighty, seventy, sixty, and eventually even lower.

Over vast cycles of time, this process continued until the creative power of the entire Multiverse fell to zero kala and then entered negative levels. According to this understanding, our Multiverse has now reached approximately minus one hundred kala. The central region of G2 stands at this lowest level, while the Great Universes from G17 down to G2 occupy different stages of decline, ranging roughly from minus fifteen to minus one hundred kala.

As power decreased, the entire Multiverse became more condensed and contracted. Souls moved farther away from their original subtle and divine state and became increasingly connected with the gross world of the five elements. This unique decline, from supreme spiritual power into deep materiality, is described as a special characteristic of our Multiverse.

Souls Are Ranked in Every World

One further truth runs through all of these worlds. Just as on the Earth we see high and low — wealth and poverty, and the ranking of first, second and third class — so too, in every realm above, souls are placed strictly according to their power. Even in Paramdham, the formless souls are ranked. To come near Nirakari Shiv at the centre, a soul must hold the matching measure of power, or it simply cannot approach. A soul may enter only the layer that its own kala allows. No permission is asked and none refused — the order is automatic. A soul of, say, five hundred kala simply cannot enter a layer of a thousand kala; it would sense at once that to go there would be to dissolve, and so it does not. In this way, in every world, each soul finds its place by its own power alone.

CHAPTER SEVEN

The Dimensions of Creation

We have climbed the ladder of kala from one to a hundred and far beyond. Bapuji now opens a second way of seeing that same ladder: every degree of kala is also a dimension — a lok, a layer, a realm of creation. The number of kala and the number of dimensions are one and the same.

Science describes our world in four dimensions — the three dimensions of space, with time as the fourth. But this is only the gross plane. Above it rise many more. In our own brahmand there are seven loks above the Earth, and higher still lie Brahmapuri, Vishnupuri, Shivpuri, and at the very summit Paramdham, the supreme abode- so that a single solar system holds around fifteen planes in all, each finer than the one below.

Kala Is the Count of Dimensions

Here is the key Bapuji gives. The number of kala is the number of dimensions. A universe of sixteen to twenty kala contains that many planes within it. Our multiverse, being of one hundred kala, has one hundred dimensions — one hundred loks. A world of twenty-one hundred kala has twenty-one hundred dimensions; and a world of behad kala, of limitless power, has dimensions beyond all counting.

And each higher dimension is subtler, lighter, and more degree of supreme light /supreme elements than the one beneath it. As the lower loks are heavy with the gross elements, the higher loks are made of the supreme elements and supreme light. This is why a soul can rise only as far as its own power allows: it can enter only those dimensions whose fineness matches the fineness of the soul itself.

BAPUJI INSIGHT

“Jitni kala, utne hi aayaam — utne hi lok.”

“As many kala, that many dimensions — that many planes of creation.”

CHAPTER EIGHT

How Long Does a Soul Live?

The body has a fixed span — perhaps a hundred years. But what of the soul that dwells within it? Bapuji teaches that the soul is imperishable, and its age is not counted in human years at all, but in the vast time-cycles of the realm to which it belongs.

The Span of Different Souls

the lifespan of a soul is determined by the level of creation to which it belongs. The higher the plane, the slower time flows and the longer the souls remain in that state.

The celestial beings known as Devtas exist within the realms governed by Brahma. Their lifespan extends for one full day of Brahma, which corresponds to approximately 8.64 billion Earth years. Souls dwelling in the higher Earth-related regions—Bhu-lok, Bhuvar-lok, and Swarga-lok—generally continue their journey until the completion of a Kalp, a vast cycle of creation.

However, souls belonging to higher dimensions experience time on an entirely different scale. A soul born within a galaxy remains associated with that galaxy for as long as the galaxy itself exists. The creator of the galaxy, Maha Shiv, functions on a level where a single moment of his consciousness may encompass what would be one hundred years of Brahma's time. As one ascends from planetary realms to galaxies, universes, great universes, and beyond, the flow of time becomes progressively slower and the lifespan of souls correspondingly greater.

Bapuji explains that time is not uniform throughout creation. Each realm has its own time scale. In Brahmapuri, for example, a single second may correspond to one hundred thousand Earth years. Because of this difference, a soul that emerged at the beginning of a Brahmand and gradually descended through many levels of creation before eventually taking human birth has already experienced an age that is almost impossible for the human mind to comprehend.

From the perspective of Earth, billions and trillions of years may pass, while from the perspective of higher realms only a relatively short period has elapsed. This is why the ancient sages described creation as containing many dimensions of time, each operating according to the level of consciousness, power, and subtlety present in that realm.

According to this understanding, our present Brahmand is now passing through the fiftieth year of its Brahma. Countless souls that originated near the beginning of this cosmic cycle have been journeying through creation ever since, moving gradually from higher, subtler states toward the denser realms of material existence.

Where Do the Countless Souls Come From?

If souls are imperishable, a question naturally follows. Two hundred years ago there were fewer than two billion people upon the Earth; today there are 8 billion people plus ten times more in lower subtle world with negative power. Where were all these souls before? Bapuji answers that they were resting in the many layers of the subtle world, and upon other planets — for the subtle realms hold countless souls. When a soul finds the chance to take a human birth, it descends to the Earth. The number of bodies may grow, but the souls themselves are ancient, waiting their turn in the subtle realms.

There is a sobering note in this. When a soul falls to the human level, its capacity drops, and unless it has risen again through knowledge, it is dissolved in the kalp pralay. The soul is permanent; the form is not. This is why the one thing that truly matters is to use the human birth to rise — before the day of dissolution comes.

CHAPTER NINE

Generations of the Infinite

We have climbed from one kala to one hundred. Now Bapuji takes us past the edge of the multiverse, into a region the mind can only gesture toward: the creation of the infinite.

Our hundred-kala multiverse is itself only one among countless multiverses. Millions of multiverses together makes a Great Multiverse, and its creator holds one hundred and one kala of power. This creator is called the first generation, the first peedi.

Counting the Generations

Beyond one hundred kala, the hierarchy of creation is described in terms of Peedis (Pidis), meaning successive generations or levels of spiritual ascent. A Peedi does not refer to a family generation as on Earth; rather, it represents a higher order of creative power and consciousness. Each new Peedi marks a significant expansion in the capacity of a creator soul.

The First Peedi begins at one hundred and one kala. The Second Peedi possesses two hundred and one kala, the Third Peedi three hundred and one kala, the Fourth Peedi four hundred and one kala, and so the progression continues. With each Peedi, the range of creation, authority, and spiritual power expands enormously.

As one ascends further, the scale becomes increasingly vast. The Twenty-First Peedi possesses approximately twenty-one hundred kala, the Thirty-First Peedi thirty-one hundred kala, and the Forty-First Peedi forty-one hundred kala. Yet these levels are only the beginning of an infinite ascent.

The ladder continues upward through the Hundred-and-First Peedi and then to the Thousand-and-First Peedi, where the power reaches approximately one lakh kala. Beyond this lie the Eleven-Thousandth Peedi with eleven lakh kala, and the One-Lakhth Peedi with one crore kala. Higher still are levels that extend beyond counting and beyond the limits of ordinary understanding.

According to Behad Gyan, this progression has no final boundary. Every higher Peedi opens into still greater dimensions of creation, power, and consciousness. The purpose of these numbers is not merely mathematical calculation, but to help the intellect glimpse the vastness of the Infinite Creation—where creative power expands without end and where the possibilities of existence stretch far beyond the imagination of the human mind.

Widening the Mind Toward the Behad

Bapuji says plainly that this knowledge is not given to be memorised, but to stretch the intellect. Whoever can let the mind expand to grasp how vast a brahmand of behad kala must be — it is the intellect, and the intellect alone, that must do this work. And here he returns to his constant teaching: whatever you think, that you will become. Keep behad thoughts. Keep, always, the thought of the welfare of the infinite world.

At the very summit of this endless ladder is the one we will meet again in the final chapter — Behad ka Baap, the Supreme Father of the infinite creation, the source from which the whole ladder descends. He is not the Shiv of a solar system, nor the Maha Shiv of a galaxy, nor the Param Maha Shiv of a universe. He is the master of the whole, beyond the multiverse itself. With the ladder of kala now before us, we are ready to turn to the souls who live upon its many rungs.

PART THREE

The Categories of Souls

Here is the heart of this book. We now look carefully at the many kinds of souls — from the smallest to the greatest — each with its own make-up, capacity, and destiny.

CHAPTER TEN

The Great Family of Souls

Now we arrive at the central subject of this book. Bapuji teaches that souls are not all of one kind. There is supreme soul; the celestial soul and the living soul full of desires; the sinful soul; and the souls of the eighty-four lakh yoni- the eighty-four lakh forms of life — each of a different kind. What separates one category from another?

The answer is the same thread we followed up the ladder: soul power. A soul, in the language of science, is conscious energy — chaitanya shakti. One soul holds one watt of that power, another ten, hundred, another a thousand, a lakh or many crore watts. Whatever power a soul holds, into that capacity it can go. The categories of souls are, at root, categories of power.

The Make-Up of a Soul

Souls also differ by what they are made of. Some souls are made of the gross ether element (ether/air/fire) these are of an ordinary quality, and their innermost body is the causal body alone. Some are made of param tattva, the supreme elements. And some are made of param prakash, supreme light. Souls made with Supreme divine light are the souls of the highest quality, the behad (Infinite/ limitless) souls. The finer the element a soul is formed from, the greater its awareness and its strength.

Connected to this is the soul's gunn, its quality of nature. There are three categories of quality of nature. A soul clothed in supreme elements is satva-pradhan — pure, compassionate, full of light, and powerful in its sankalp. A soul that mixes supreme elements with grosser ones, busy in creation, becomes rajo-pradhan — active and full of passion, with its power gradually reduced. And a soul that takes on a heavy, gross body becomes tamo-pradhan — ignorant, with no power in its sankalp, trapped in the world of the senses. The state of a soul and the state of the world around it always match.

Soul or Jeevatma?

Bapuji draws one simple but important line. A true soul — a soul of the higher kind — always seeks the Supreme; it has always longed for Supreme divine father. But if a being calls itself a soul yet never seeks the Supreme at all, content only with the world, then it is a jeevatma — a living soul bound in desire. The difference is not in the words one speaks, but in what the soul truly reaches for. With this map of the family of souls before us — their power, their make-up, their nature, and their longing — we can now look closely at each category in turn. We begin where life on Earth is most countless: the eighty-four lakh forms.

CHAPTER ELEVEN

The Eighty-Four Lakh Yoni

In every single solar system in this multiverse there are as many as eighty-four lakh (8.4 million) different species. These diverse species carry different kinds of bodies. Bapuji says there are, in truth, billions of kind forms that a soul may take.

How do so many souls come about? Bapuji explains it through their multiplying. A human soul creates, and through its generations the number of humans grows and grows. A fish does the same: from large fish come small fish, multiplying down the generations. In this way, kind by kind, countless souls come into being — each taking the body that belongs to its form.

The Ocean of Births

These eighty-four lakh forms-plants, insects, fish, birds, animals and human etc make up what the scriptures call the bhav sagar, the ocean of emotions, through which a soul wanders, birth after birth. When a soul has committed sinful actions, it keeps wandering with a heavier body in the lower dimensions of creation, taking birth again and again among these eighty-four lakh species.

When a soul takes birth in any of these forms, it puts on a body of the five elements, and to each kind of body we give a different name. But beneath every name, the dweller is the same: a soul, of some measure of power, wearing the form that matches its present state. In the chapters that follow, we will look at the two ends of this great ocean — the very smallest souls, and then the human soul, which alone among them all carries the key to its own freedom.

CHAPTER TWELVE

The Smallest Souls

Let us begin at the very smallest. Consider the mosquito. Bapuji says the mosquito is born in the air- the rain falls, and it is born; the rain ends, and it too is finished. Its life is the briefest flicker. And the soul of such a creature is made of only a very few units of life- Bapuji speaks of it as having two to four “cells.” Different beings carry different numbers of these cells. A small creature has only a few; larger animals carry many more- hundreds, thousands. The number of cells rises with the kind of body. This is Bapuji’s simple way of showing that even among the tiniest living things, souls differ in their make-up and their capacity.

Down to a Single Cell

Bapuji gives a sobering teaching here. When a human being commits a great deal of sin, its cells gradually diminish, until at the very end it can fall to a single cell-becoming an amoeba, a one-celled being, a bacterium. And what happens then? The tiny body dissolves into the air; yet the soul itself does not end. A one-celled soul still remains, wandering in the atmosphere.

Such a soul has no knowledge at all. A single-celled being carries no understanding and no power of decision. It simply drifts. Bapuji links this to the unseen world of disease: the germs and viruses behind illnesses such as malaria are so small that they cannot be seen with bare eyes, and they spread through the very atmosphere around us- the subtle, lowest reaches of life, full of these countless tiny souls.

The Long Climb Upward

But the story does not only fall; it can also rise. Single cell is not a final prison. Bapuji says that a one-celled amoeba may, in time, become a two-celled being, then five-celled, then ten-celled — climbing slowly upward into higher and higher forms of life. There is no rule that it cannot rise; it can. The journey of life, from the smallest cell upward, is a long ascent.

Yet there is a crucial difference between these small souls and the human. To move forward consciously, a soul needs knowledge — and the bacterium, the insect, the animal has none. They have no free will and cannot choose their own path. This is why their wandering through the eighty-four lakh forms is called the ocean of emotions: it is movement without understanding. Only in one form does a soul finally receive the intelligence to seek its own liberation — and that form is the human being.

CHAPTER THIRTEEN

The Human Soul

Among all the eighty-four lakh forms, human birth stands apart. Bapuji teaches that human soul is the one category that carries both intelligence and free will- the power to ask who it is, and the power to choose its own way home. If a human soul wishes for moksha, liberation, it can earn it through good deeds (karma) and through knowledge. After the death of the body, such a soul slowly crosses many layers of the subtle world, then the layers of the causal world, and finally reaches Paramdham, the supreme abode, where it merges into the power of Shiv Paramatma. However ,it depends entirely on the soul's own deep thoughts. Most human souls, Bapuji says plainly, do not truly seek liberation at all.

Why This Birth Is Precious

Animal- Insects etc cannot decide their soul's journey, because there is no knowledge in them. Human alone has been given the intelligence to seek liberation. This is what makes human birth so rare and so precious: it is one doorway through which a soul, by its own choice, can begin the return to its source. And yet most of this precious chance is spent in service of the body alone — in eating, comfort, and the enjoyment of the senses — while the knowledge of the soul stays hidden under the illusion of the five-element world.

Bapuji's appeal is gentle but firm: do not waste this birth in which the door stands open. Use the intelligence you have been given to ask the real question, and to begin walking back.

BAPUJI INSIGHT

“Manushya janam mein hi aatma ko apni mukti dhoondhne ki samajh milti hai.”

“It is in the human birth alone that a soul receives the understanding to seek its own liberation.”

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

The Celestial Souls

Above the human stand the celestial souls- devtas and Angels called farishtas. These are souls of a higher and finer make-up than the souls of Earth.

A devta does not live in a body of five gross elements. Its natural body is a subtle body of three elements. Bapuji recounts how, in ancient times, the devtas would come to the Earth in the guise of human beings, transforming their three-element subtle body into a five-element human body only for as long as their purpose required. They did not take birth the way a human does. With a single thought they could descend and, their work done, return again in an instant to Swarga-Loka. Our scriptures are full of such accounts.

Angels Also Known As Farishtas

Finer still are the farishtas, the angels. When a solar system is created, Brahma brings forth seven angelic beings made of the supreme elements (param tattva). Known as saptrishi (seven sages) A farishta carries a bright, luminous causal body. These are pure beings of the higher worlds, far above the heaviness of the Earth, and they move through the dimensions of creation by the power of their own thought.

In the higher dimensions, such souls travel from one brahmand to another using their energy alone, often gathering together in an orb of supreme light to journey across a galaxy or a universe. They did not descend below the protective layers of the higher worlds, for they knew that to enter the gross atmosphere of the Earth was to risk being trapped in its five elements, unable to return.

A Limited Lifespan

For all their power, the celestial souls are not eternal. Bapuji teaches that a devta too has a limited lifespan. The life of a devta ends within one day of Brahma — and one day of Brahma is eight arab sixty-four crore years upon the Earth. When that vast age is complete, the devta soul also comes to its end. Power and long life are not the same as liberation; even the highest of the celestial souls must, in time, face the close of its allotted span.

CHAPTER FIFTEEN

The Souls of Light

At the summit of all the categories stand the souls of pure light. Bapuji teaches that some souls are made of the supreme elements, some of the maha tattva, and some of param prakash — supreme divine light itself. The souls made of supreme light are known as Paramatma, the supreme souls.

Among these there are again many degrees, measured in kala. The degree of celestial power runs from one to one hundred, and then from one hundred up to twenty-one hundred and one. Beyond twenty-one hundred and one kala, the creation is infinitely powerful — the behad ki kala ka vishwa, the world of limitless power — and the souls created there are the behad souls, souls with the infinite in them. The higher the kala, the greater the power, and the higher the quality of the soul.

The Body of Supreme Light

Such a soul is satva-pradhan, established in purity, with a pure white aura, and it can effortlessly turn its sankalp into reality. Its innermost body is the supreme-supra-causal body, the Param Maha Karan Sharir, made of high-quality supreme light — the very first sheath after the formless seed-state of the soul. Beyond it lies only the pure, incorporeal soul. This is the highest, subtlest, most energetic body a soul can wear; only the elevated behad souls carry it.

The Cell of the Infinite

There is one more mark of the highest souls. Within certain souls there is what Bapuji calls a “cell of the infinite.” Where this cell is present, the knowledge of the infinite rises from within of its own accord; the soul recognises this behad knowledge as something it already, somehow, knew. Where the cell has not yet awakened, a soul may hear the same teaching again and again — it is simply waiting for its right moment. The old knowledge is not learned anew; it is remembered.

This is also why Bapuji makes a startling statement about the people of the Earth: most souls here today are not Earth-bound at all. The ordinary human being you see is, in soul, not ordinary. Many are at least of the Maha Shiv category, come from distant galaxies; and a great many have come from distant universes — some were even the owners of those far-off worlds. The thirty-three crore devi-devtas of the scriptures, Bapuji says, came from G2, the great great universe, and gathered here, in time becoming human upon the Earth. The souls of light are not only above us; many of them are walking among us, their light grown dim, waiting to remember.

BAPUJI INSIGHT

“Param prakash se bani aatma hi Paramatma kehlati hai.”

“The soul made of supreme light is the one called Paramatma.”

CHAPTER SIXTEEN

Who Decides the Final Journey

We have seen the many categories of souls — from the single cell to the souls of light. A natural question follows: who decides where each of them finally goes? Bapuji's answer is clear: the last journey of every soul is decided by its creator.

Vishnu decides the end of the devta souls. Shiv decides the journey of all the souls of his brahmand, his solar system. Maha Shiv decides for all the Shivs of an entire galaxy. At still higher levels, the responsibility belongs to Param Maha Shiv and to the creators beyond, rung after rung up the ladder of kala. Each creator holds the destinies of the souls below it.

Only a Greater Power Can Decide

There is a precise law beneath this. A soul can be liberated, or dissolved, only by one whose power is greater than its own. Creation is built up and dissolved again in great cycles called pralay. But in each dissolution, only souls up to a certain kala can be drawn back into the creator; souls of higher kala cannot be touched by him.

Bapuji gives the example of the dissolution of a brahmand. When Shiv enters the Sun and burns a solar system, he can dissolve only souls up to about five to seven kala. A soul of greater power — one that came from another universe with twelve, fifteen, or twenty kala — is untouched. It simply leaves and rises into the galaxy. The same holds at the galactic scale: Maha Shiv can absorb only souls up to his own measure, and the higher souls escape upward.

This is why, in every tradition, there is the memory of souls being saved at the time of destruction — a great boat or ark in which the seeds of life are carried safely into the new world. The powerful soul is never destroyed; it rises. And so a soul's category and its kala decide not only how it lives, but how, and by whom, its final journey is settled. With the full map of souls now before us, we can at last turn the question inward.

BAPUJI INSIGHT

“Har aatma ki antim yatra uska rachayita tay karta hai.”

“The final journey of every soul is decided by its creator.”

PART FOUR

The Return

Now that we have seen what the soul is, the degrees of its power, and the many categories of souls, we can finally turn the question inward — which soul am I, where have I come from, and how do I return?

CHAPTER SEVENTEEN

What Every Soul Seeks

We have seen the soul, hierarchy of soul power, and many categories of souls. Before we turn the question fully inward, one thread joins them all. What is every soul truly seeking? Bapuji answers in a single word: permanent peace and permanent happiness. Every soul, in every form, is searching for these

The Many Faces of Happiness

Ask anyone what happiness is, and most will answer in worldly terms — a house, a vehicle, good children. For one who is hungry, two meals are happiness; for one without shelter, a small room is enough. Each soul draws its own limit. Yet some souls possess wealth, large homes, and every comfort, and still feel a restlessness within. They leave it all and go to the sages, to the Himalaya, to do penance — because they sense that true happiness lies elsewhere, in moksha.

Param Sukh

Moksha, or mukti, means the soul which itself is point of supreme light merging into Supreme divine light (Paramatma) in the formless supreme abode. But Bapuji explains that the meaning of happiness differs with the category of the soul. For the high-quality Infinite-limitless (behad)soul, happiness is not comfort, and not even liberation alone. Its happiness is to gain the knowledge of the Self, to become established in soul-consciousness, to connect with the Almighty, and to draw power into the soul. This is param sukh — supreme happiness — the state of paramanand, of eternal, unbroken bliss.

Water of Knowledge

Ordinary happiness is only the fruit of good deeds in multiple life time-karma, and no soul is ever wholly free of the bonds of karma; within those bonds, happiness and sorrow keep turning, one after the other. A soul is freed only when knowledge comes and power enters it, and it returns to its original state. For the behad soul, that knowledge is itself the deepest happiness. Bapuji calls it gyan jal — the water of knowledge. Just as the body is seventy per cent water, the soul finds its true nourishment in this gyan jal.

For countless births, the soul searches for true knowledge. Again and again it explores, learns, questions, and seeks to understand the mysteries of existence. Yet its search remains incomplete until it comes to know the Almighty in all three forms—the Formless (Nirakari), the Subtle (Akari), and the Embodied (Sakari).

Only when this understanding awakens does the soul experience Param Sukh, the supreme and lasting happiness that it has been seeking through many lifetimes. This deep longing for perfect peace, truth, and fulfillment eventually turns the soul back toward its original home and its divine source.

With this, we arrive at the final questions of this book—the questions that every soul must one day ask on its journey back to the Infinite.

BAPUJI INSIGHT

“Har aatma sukh dhoondh rahi hai — par behad ki aatma ka sukh hai gyan aur Paramatma se milan.”

“Every soul is searching for happiness — but the happiness of the behad soul is knowledge and union with the Supreme.”

CHAPTER EIGHTEEN

Which Category of Soul Am I?

Now comes the question that all of it was leading toward: which of these am I? Bapuji is clear that no one else can answer this for you. No one will come and stamp a label on you, saying, “You are this, or you are that.” To know your own category, you must examine yourself.

Every religion is, in its own way, a teaching- a belief, a discipline, an art of living- promising that if you follow this path, your soul will gain such a benefit, or reach such a place. These are precious guides. But the actual recognition of what your soul is — that must be discovered within.

How the Soul Remembers

How, then, can a soul come to know where it has come from? Bapuji explains it beautifully. When a soul experiences soul consciousness, its sahasrara — the crown centre at the top of the head — opens like an antenna and connects with its origin world. Then the soul’s own recordings begin to emerge from within. The knowledge of its category, its source, and its journey does not come from outside, from any book or teacher; it rises from the records held inside the soul itself, once the soul gains power through meditation and soul consciousness.

But there is a limit to this remembering. Each soul can recall only as far as the level it came from. If a soul came from a galaxy, even when its sahasrara opens fully, it will see only up to that galaxy. If it came from a universe, it will see up to that universe. The full description of the behad world, the supreme abode of infinite kala, can be given only by the Almighty Authority — no lesser soul can reach that far.

So the path to knowing your own category is not study, but realisation. Establish yourself in atma swaroop; draw power from the Supreme; let the mind grow still. As the inner recordings open, the answer to “Which soul am I?” rises on its own — not as information learned, but as memory recovered.

BAPUJI INSIGHT

“Purana gyan seekha nahi jaata, balki yaad kiya jaata hai.”

“The old knowledge is not learned anew; it is remembered.”

CHAPTER NINETEEN

Where Have I Come From?

If most souls on Earth have come from distant worlds, then a natural question follows: why did we come here at all? Bapuji answers that there is no single reason, because there are so many categories of soul.

Some souls came on Earth with a clear mission — to transform this world, as vishwa parivartak souls, souls who work for the welfare of all. Others did not come by intention at all: as their power was lost, they had no way to return, and they descended here. Still others came wandering, drawn by curiosity, in search of joy and experience-and, like a traveller caught in a snowstorm in the mountains, they lost their way and could not find the road back.

However they came, karmic bondage then held them fast. Birth after birth, the weight of karma grew, until the soul forgot itself entirely — who it was, where it had come from, and why. Bapuji reminds us that the human soul has now been caught in this cycle for a very long time: the first half of Brahma's great life-span is already complete, and souls have been trapped in birth and death for some one hundred and ninety-eight crore years upon this Earth.

“Tum keval dharti vasi nahi ho.”

“You are not merely a dweller of the Earth.”

The Way Back

For most souls, the way back is unknown. A soul can only leave this Earth when it knows its own source and, becoming once more like that source — attaining the supreme element — rises to it. Until then, however much it longs to “go up,” the weight of karma holds it down.

And yet, Bapuji says, the present time is different. As the soul turns to self-reflection — as atma gyan dawns within it — it will at last find the road home. He points to the speed at which the world is now changing as a sign that a new world is being prepared, and that the knowledge of the return has come. The questions of the first chapter — who am I, where have I come from, why am I here — are not idle. They are the beginning of the journey back to the source.

CHAPTER TWENTY

The Power to Realise

Knowing which soul you are, and where you came from, requires power — and here Bapuji gives a teaching that changes everything: realisation itself is power. In today's age the soul has become weak and temporal, and a weak soul has lost the very strength needed to recognise itself.

When a soul is full of its original light, it shines like a sparkling diamond, a bright white star. As its power weakens, that light grows dim. The seat of the soul stays the same, at the centre of the forehead; only the light is reduced. This is why merely repeating “I am a soul” a million times achieves nothing — a weak soul simply does not have the strength to know itself. What is needed is power, and power can come only from the real Powerhouse.

Connecting With the Almighty

That Powerhouse is the Supreme Almighty Authority — the incorporeal Supreme Father, the source of all creation, radiant in His supreme abode like the sun. Remembering sources that have no power of their own cannot give unlimited power. Bapuji adds a tender key here: for the children of the infinite, the Almighty is the great-great-grandfather, the pardada of all souls. When a soul remembers Him in this loving relationship, as a child remembers a beloved father, the flow of power becomes far stronger than dry, mechanical repetition.

Three things together decide the journey: power, knowledge, and intent. The soul must have the power to travel, the knowledge of where it is going, and the wish to go there. Power is the foundation; on power rests knowledge; from knowledge rises desire; and through desire the soul travels wherever it wishes.

BAPUJI INSIGHT

“Power is the foundation. On the basis of power comes knowledge. On the basis of knowledge comes desire. And through desire, the soul travels wherever it wishes.”

The Charging of the Soul

When a soul connects with the Almighty and begins to receive param prakash, a precise inner process begins — the charging of the soul, layer by layer. First, the supreme power goes straight to the causal body and begins to destroy the sinful *karman*s of past births stored there. Then the causal body itself begins to charge: ten per cent, twenty, thirty, forty, fifty.

At around fifty per cent, the aura of the subtle body develops, and the subtle body begins to convert from ordinary elements into param tattva, the supreme elements. At sixty, seventy, and eighty per cent, the mind grows deeply still: the body remains here in the world, but the mind dwells in the Supreme Abode, and inner vision begins to open. At one hundred per cent, the soul can, on its own, transform from its manifest form to an imperceptible form and rise upward by its own power — the soul restored to its full strength.

CHAPTER TWENTY - ONE

The Signs of Soul Consciousness

How can a soul tell that it is truly becoming soul-conscious, and not merely thinking about it? Bapuji gives clear signs.

The knowledge of the infinite begins to emerge from within — the soul's own recordings open. A natural detachment, arises, and worldly attractions lose their grip. Desire quietens. Solitude, silence, and stillness, once uninteresting, now become genuinely attractive to the soul.

The original qualities of the soul — supreme peace, mercy, supreme love — return on their own, for these are the soul's true nature. The aura grows strong, sometimes spreading many feet around the body, so that others who come near simply feel peaceful. And within rises a deep longing for the Supreme Abode, the soul's true home.

The Karmayogi's Happiness

A soul-conscious life is not a withdrawal from the world. The karmayogi remains happy while balancing worldly duty and spiritual practice — living fully in the household, performing every task, yet remaining inwardly free and connected to the Almighty. The actions of such a soul no longer bind it with new karma.

This is why Bapuji links self-transformation directly with world transformation. As a soul becomes lighter, happier, and more steadily a karmayogi, its very presence helps to change the atmosphere around it. The new world is built not by force, but by transformed souls spreading the vibrations of peace.

Rising Above the Vices

With soul consciousness comes a natural turning away from the vices. Bapuji teaches that to rise into the higher worlds a soul must leave behind vishay vikaar — the pull of the senses, and the vices of lust, anger, greed, and attachment (kaam, krodh, lobh, moh). These grow strong in the heavy five-element body, and it is they that bind the soul to the Earth. As the soul draws power from the Almighty and settles into its own nature, these vices lose their grip on their own.

The further a soul wishes to rise — even above Swarga-Loka — the freer of vishay vikaar it must become; for the higher one goes, the subtler and purer the world, until at last the soul stands beyond all craving, in the silence of its own light.

CHAPTER TWENTY-TWO

The Return Journey

Every soul, once it gains the knowledge of its creator, longs to go back. Bapuji calls this the return journey of the soul — the homeward movement from the gross world, up through the dimensions of creation, toward the source from which it first descended.

And all of this knowledge points toward a single, luminous future. Bapuji teaches that the present tamo pradhan world — the world dominated by darkness and ignorance — will, in time, be transformed in a single second into a world of silence and power: the world of one hundred kala, the new world of the multiverse.

Mukti and Jeevan Mukti

In that transformation, two things take place together. The lower-category souls will dissolve gently into the supreme element — this is mukti, liberation. The higher-quality souls, the souls of light, will be charged with power and will receive jeevan mukti — liberation while living — to build the new world. Bapuji is firm on one point: it will not be destruction, but transformation.

When the moment comes, the elements themselves will change — the five gross elements converting into param tattva, the supreme element — and in that single second a soul of five elements can become param, a body of supreme light. The Almighty Authority has come for exactly this: the transformation of multiple universes.

BAPUJI INSIGHT

“Vinaash nahi, parivartan hoga.”

“It will not be destruction — it will be transformation.”

The Message and the Duty

According to Behad Gyan, every soul has a special responsibility. We are not here only to transform the world, but to help transform the entire infinite creation through our thoughts, vibrations, and actions. Our aim is to spread Paramshanti (Supreme Peace) so widely that negativity is naturally replaced by positivity.

To do this, we must first know ourselves—our true spiritual identity, our category of soul, our level of consciousness (kala), our divine origin, and our ultimate destination. By remaining established in the awareness of the soul (Atma Swaroop), remembering the Almighty as our eternal source, and living as karmayogis, we gradually move closer to liberation.

The central message of Behad Gyan is simple: Know who you are, remember where you came from, and keep your attention on where you are meant to return. Through this awareness and effort, the soul can attain both Mukti (liberation) and Jeevan Mukti (liberation while living) and eventually return to its true home beyond this world.

BAPUJI INSIGHT

“Main param param param achha hoon; behad ke vishwa mein param param param shanti ho rahi hai.”

“I am supremely, supremely, supremely good; and in the infinite world, supreme, supreme, supreme peace is spreading.”

BAPUJI INSIGHT

“The Father of the Infinite has come to give mukti and jeevan mukti in a second.”

Bapuji Insights

The insights below appear in Bapuji's own words throughout this book. They are gathered here in one place, for slow reading and quiet reflection.

BAPUJI INSIGHT

"Sabse pehle hume samajhna padega ki main kaun hoon?"

"First of all, we need to understand — who am I?"

BAPUJI INSIGHT

"Sirf 'Main atma hoon, main atma hoon' bolne se koi atma ko realize nahi kar sakta."

"Only by saying 'I am a soul, I am a soul,' no one can realise the soul."

BAPUJI INSIGHT

"Atm swaroop ki anubhooti karo, sakshi drashta aa hi jayenge."

"Experience atma swaroop, and the witness-state will arise on its own."

BAPUJI INSIGHT

"Atma ka asli swabhav soul consciousness hi hai."

“The original nature of the soul is soul consciousness itself.”

BAPUJI INSIGHT

“Kala ka arth hai aatma mein power kitni hai.”

“The meaning of kala is — how much power is there in the soul.”

BAPUJI INSIGHT

“Jo sochoge wahi paoge.”

“Whatever you think, that is what you will become.”

BAPUJI INSIGHT

“Jaisa Shiv ka kala, waisa uska brahmand.”

“As is the kala of the Shiv, so is his solar system.”

BAPUJI INSIGHT

“Jitni kala, utne hi aayaam — utne hi lok.”

“As many kala, that many dimensions — that many planes of creation.”

BAPUJI INSIGHT

“Aatma amar hai — sharir badalta hai, aatma nahi.”

“The soul is immortal — the body changes, the soul does not.”

BAPUJI INSIGHT

“Behad ki soch rakho — hamesha behad ke vishwa kalyan ki soch rakho.”

“Keep thoughts of the infinite — always keep the thought of the welfare of the infinite world.”

BAPUJI INSIGHT

“Manushya janam mein hi aatma ko apni mukti dhoondhne ki samajh milti hai.”

“It is in the human birth alone that a soul receives the understanding to seek its own liberation.”

BAPUJI INSIGHT

“Param prakash se bani aatma hi Paramatma kehlati hai.”

“The soul made of supreme light is the one called Paramatma.”

BAPUJI INSIGHT

“Har aatma ki antim yatra uska rachayita tay karta hai.”

“The final journey of every soul is decided by its creator.”

BAPUJI INSIGHT

“Har aatma sukh dhoondh rahi hai — par behad ki aatma ka sukh hai gyan aur Paramatma se milan.”

“Every soul is searching for happiness — but the happiness of the behad soul is knowledge and union with the Supreme.”

BAPUJI INSIGHT

“Purana gyan seekha nahi jaata, balki yaad kiya jaata hai.”

“The old knowledge is not learned anew; it is remembered.”

“Tum keval dharti vasi nahi ho.”

“You are not merely a dweller of the Earth.”

BAPUJI INSIGHT

“Power is the foundation. On the basis of power comes knowledge. On the basis of knowledge comes desire. And through desire, the soul travels wherever it wishes.”

BAPUJI INSIGHT

“Vinaash nahi, parivartan hoga.”

“It will not be destruction — it will be transformation.”

BAPUJI INSIGHT

“Main param param param achha boon; behad ke vishwa mein param param param shanti ho rahi hai.”

“I am supremely, supremely, supremely good; and in the infinite world, supreme, supreme, supreme peace is spreading.”

BAPUJI INSIGHT

“The Father of the Infinite has come to give mukti and jeevan mukti in a second.”

Glossary

The following terms appear throughout this book. The definitions are kept simple and short, for readers who are new to this knowledge.

Aakari — The soul's subtle, form-bearing state, made of supreme or subtle elements; not visible to the physical eye.

Aavaran — The coverings of the soul — the layers of elements and karmic impressions that form over the soul and hide its original light.

Almighty Authority — The supreme creator of the behad (limitless) world; the highest being in the entire multiverse and the source of all power. Also the Param Pita, the Supreme Father.

Amar Lok — The immortal world; a realm of the supreme element where death does not exist. Another name for Paramdham.

Atma / Aatma — The soul; a point of pure conscious energy that runs the body. In its original state it is divine light.

Atma Darshan — The soul's direct inner vision of itself as a point of supreme light in its original seed-form.

Atma Gyan — Knowledge of the soul's true identity — known with the mind.

Atma Swaroop — Soul consciousness; the living state of dwelling in the soul's original nature, beyond mere words.

Behad — Infinite; beyond all limits and boundaries.

Behad ka Baap — The Supreme Father of the limitless creation; the Almighty Authority, beyond the multiverse.

Behad ki Atma — A soul of infinite power, made of supreme light, that has travelled across galaxies and universes.

Behad Gyan — The supreme knowledge of the Almighty Authority and His boundless creation, beyond the multiverse.

Beej Roop — The original seed-form of the soul, from which all later stages of its journey unfold.

Brahma — The creator of souls within a solar system; the one through whom Shiv begins creation, who brings forth the farishtas.

Brahmand — A solar system — one unit of creation, created by Shiv. Its size depends on the kala of its Shiv.

Chaurasi Lakh — The eighty-four lakh species; the vast range of life-forms — plant, insect, fish, bird, animal, human — also called the ocean of emotions.

Dehbhav — Body-consciousness; living as though one were the body, the source of fear, craving and sorrow.

Devatma — A celestial soul, created by the Paramatma; a soul of the heavenly realms.

Devta — A celestial being living in a three-element body in the higher worlds; a deity with a limited lifespan.

Farishta — An angel; a param purush soul created by Brahma with a body of supreme element (param tattva).

Gunn — The inner qualities of a soul — Satva (purity), Rajo (activity, desire) and Tamo (darkness, inertia).

Gyan — Knowledge; specifically, divine or transcendental knowledge.

Gyan Daan Mahadaan — The giving of knowledge as the greatest of all charities; the principle under which Bapuji's teachings are shared freely.

Gyan Jal — The “water of knowledge”; the divine knowledge in which the soul finds its deepest nourishment and joy, and which the behad soul seeks across many births.

Jeevan Mukti — Liberation while living; freedom from all karmic accounts, the soul remaining eternally in the bliss of its creator.

Jeevatma — A living soul bound in desire — one that calls itself a soul yet does not seek the Supreme.

Kala — The unit that measures the power of a soul or creator — like the watt measures electrical power.

Karan Sharir — The causal body, made of the ether element; the storehouse of the soul's karmic records.

Karma — Action, and the energetic imprint of every act in thought, word and deed.

Karma Bandhan — The bondage of karma; the entanglement created by accumulated past actions.

Karmatit — The state beyond karma, when negativity is burnt away and the soul is free of all karmic bondage.

Karmayogi — One who acts in the world from the recognition of being a soul, drawing power from the Almighty; the householder who remains inwardly free.

Lok — A plane or dimension of creation; each degree of kala corresponds to one lok, finer and lighter than the one below.

Maha Shiv — The incorporeal creator of a galaxy (Maha Brahmand), holding 8–12 kala of power.

Maha Tattva — A grade of supreme substance, finer than the ordinary elements, from which some souls are made.

Moksha — Liberation; the dissolution of the soul's individual existence into its creator.

Mukti — Freedom from the cycle of birth and death; the soul dissolves into the supreme element.

Multiverse — The vast scale of creation containing seventeen layers of great universes (G1–G17); ours is of 100 kala.

Nirakari — The formless state of the soul — its true, incorporeal state as pure divine light, with no mind.

Panch Tattva — The five elements: earth, water, fire, air and ether.

Papatma — A sinful soul; a soul heavily burdened by negative karmas.

Param Maha Shiv — The incorporeal creator of a universe (Param Maha Brahmand), holding 16–20 kala of power.

Param Prakash — Supreme light; the purest divine radiance and the state of pure soul consciousness.

Param Purush — The supreme angel form; a pure, satva-pradhan soul clothed in supreme elements.

Param Tattva — The supreme elements — the purified, far finer form of the ordinary elements, carrying far greater energy.

Paramatma — The Supreme Soul; a soul made of supreme light, of great power, able to create other souls through thought-intent.

Paramdham — The supreme abode — the original home of souls, a world of pure divine light where the creator dwells in formless form.

Paramshanti — Supreme peace; the soul's original state, and a living vibration that can be radiated outward into the world.

Peedi — A generation of creators; with each higher generation the creator's power increases — 101 kala, 201 kala, and beyond.

Pralay — Dissolution; the cyclic process by which worlds, solar systems and the souls within them are unmade.

Sakari / Saakaari — The physical, form-bearing state of a soul, with a body of five gross elements; the lowest stage.

Sahasrara — The crown centre at the top of the head; the gateway through which the soul connects with its origin world and remembers.

Sakshi Drashta — The witness; the soul observing the mind, emotions and body without being lost in them.

Sankalp — A thought-intent or divine resolution; the higher a soul's kala, the more powerful its sankalp. Souls themselves are created by sankalp.

Sanskar — The deep inner impressions a soul carries; recorded in the causal body and shaping how the mind works.

Shiv — The incorporeal creator of a solar system (Brahmand), holding 1–4 kala of power.

Sthool Sharir — The gross physical body, made of all five elements.

Sukshm Sharir — The subtle body, made of three elements (air, fire, ether); it carries the mind and sanskar after death.

Tamo Pradhan — Dominated by darkness and inertia; the lowest, most ignorant condition of a soul or a world.

Universe — The scale of creation containing many galaxies; its creator is the Param Maha Shiv (Param Maha Brahmand).

Vairagya — Detachment; living in the world while remaining inwardly free of attachment.

Vishay Vikaar — The pull of the senses and the vices — lust, anger, greed, and attachment — which bind the soul to the gross, five-element world.

Vishnu — A principal deity of the solar system who, among other roles, decides the final journey of the devta souls.

Yog — The conscious connection between the soul and the Almighty, through which power is drawn in by knowledge and remembrance.

DISCOVER THE HIDDEN ARCHITECTURE OF THE SOUL

What truly is the soul?

Why do souls possess different degrees of power?

How are souls created, and why do they experience vastly different levels of consciousness, abilities, and destinies?

Drawing from the profound divine teachings of Bapuji Dashrathbhai Patel, this remarkable work presents a systematic exploration of the soul's true nature, the meaning of Kala—the measure of spiritual power—and the extraordinary hierarchy of souls that extends from the smallest forms of life to the highest realms of creation.

*“Power is the foundation.
On the basis of power comes knowledge.
On the basis of knowledge
comes desire.
And through desire,
the soul travels
wherever it wishes.”*
